Aussies to Cut Links With U.K.

New York Times

SYDNEY — Australia's new Labor government disclosed plans Tuesday to loosen the country's sentimental links with Britain. John Armstrong, a veteran Labor politician, declared after his appointment as Australian high commissioner to Britain, that Australia is "certain" to become a republic, ending the monarchial role of the British sovereign.

Speaking over national television, Armstrong, a 64-year-old former senator and lord mayor of Sydney, said a new Australian flag and national anthem, diminishing the traditional British connection, "have got to come."

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam has stated that he favors the adoption of a new anthem to replace God Save the Queen. Many older Australians of British decent oppose a change, but most young people either want the change or are indifferent.

Speaking of relations between Britain and Australia, which the British settled as a penal colony in 1788, Armstrong said, "We are a big boy now. We are growing up."

Asked if he thought Australia would eventually become a republic like India and other members of the Commonwealth Armstrong declared that "nothing is more certain."

Armstrong added that, following his country's recent estrangement with Britain over the latter's entry into the European Common Market, a move that endangered Australian advantages in commerce and immigration with Britain, the two countries will now "enter a period of coming together again," though on a new basis.

Whitlam said at a news conference in Canberra that talks in Paris on the establishment of diplomatic relations between Canberra and Peking had made "good progress."

The Australian approach to Peking was one of Whitlam's first official acts following his victory in the elections Dec. 2, which put Labor in power for the first time in 23 years.

Whitlam has recalled the Australian ambassador to the Nationalist government on Taiwan — an obvious preliminary to a severing of ties with the Taipei government, a prerequisite for diplomatic relations with Peking.

Meanwhile, The Bahamas is also planning to leave the Commonwealth.

At a conference in London Tuesday to give the Bahamas its independence, Prime Minister Lynden Pindling said he expected the 300-island colony to get independence without any rancor. July has been suggested as the time for Bahamian independence.

Saigon, U.S. Stalling, Says Chou

Times News Services

PEKING — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai today accused the United States and South Vietnamese governments of trying to delay peace in Vietnam, and said China would continue to aid the Vietnamese people if the U.S. prolonged the war.

Chou said the whole world was greatly concerned about a solution to the Vietnam problem, and hoped for an early agreement ending the war.

"But up to now this hope has not become a reality," Chou said.

"The U.S. government is still attempting to make major revisions in the agreement already agreed upon, and the Saigon puppet regime is constantly setting up obstacles to sabotage it.

Meanwhile, in Paris, Henry Kissinger met for slightly more than six hours today with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho — the last and longest meeting of their current negotiations.

Kissinger is now on his way back to Washington to report to President Nixon.

The respected Paris newspaper Le Figaro said he would then present the draft of a new peace treaty to President Thieu.

Hanoi accused the United States today, however, of trying to create "the illusion of an immiment peace" in Vietnam.

An editorial in the official newspaper Nhan Dan charged that Washington was trying to prolong the war and bargain from a position of greater strength.

"While the Paris negotiations are prolonged, the U.S. side does not cease to propagate rumors aimed at creating the illusion of an imminent peace," Nhan Dan said.

The editorial again insisted that the only way for the United States to end the war was to sign the agreement concluded informally by Kissinger and Tho on Oct. 20.

In Washington, officials reported that the North Vietnamese were taking a tough line in the secret talks and said earlier hopes for a quick wrapup of remaining details have dimmed.

On the war front, nearly 100 tanks and several thousand fresh North Vietnamese troops have crossed the mountain passes that feed the Ho Chi Minh Trail, and U.S. B-52s and fighter-bombers are harassing them as they make their way south, U.S. sources reported today.

Phone Giant Told to Sell B.C. Company

A United States federal judge in San Francisco has ordered the American parent of B.C. Telephone to divest itself of nine companies, including two in Canada.

General Telephone and Electronics Co. of New York has been ordered to sell Lenkurt Electric (Canada) Ltd. which employs 1,000 people in making communications equipment in Burnaby and Automatic Electric Canada Ltd., an equipment firm in Brockville, Ontario.

General Telephone and Electronics controls Anglo-Canadian Telephone Company of Montreal which owns B.C. Tel.

Anglo-Canadian was not affected by the divesting order because it is a holding company, not an operating company. Anglo-Canadian employs no people but instead is used as an administration arm for General Telephone and Electronics Company's Canadian holdings.

In all, General Telephone was ordered to sell three of its phone equipment manufacturing firms: Lenkurt, Automatic Electric and Leich Electronic Company.

As well, it was told to divest itself of six operating telephone companies: Hawaiian Tel. Co., Northern Ohio Tel. Co., Central Iowa Tel Co., The Western Uility Group, Theadore Gary and Co. and Peninsular Tel Co. Ltd.

Carman Hughes, president of Automatic Electric, said because of appeals it might take years before the federal U.S. court order would come into effect.

In Vancouver, a B.C. Tel spokesman said there would be no immediate effect upon the company here.

B.C. Tel had been purchasing equipment from the two Canadian subsidiaries of their common parent General Telephone but equipment has also been purchased from Northern Electric, a subsidiary of the rival Bell Telephone Company, he said.

The spokesman said that while much of B.C. Tel's equipment was purchased through subsidiaries of General Telephone it was by no means a closed operation.

Bell Telephone produces microwave equipment that B.C. Tel has purchased in recent years, he said.

The court order was handed down by U.S. District Court Judge Martin Pence of Honolulu.

Truman Unchanged

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Harry Truman's condition remained serious today as the 88-year-old former president entered the second week of his struggle with heart, lung, chest and kidney problems.

L.A. Speeders 'Gunned Down'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The motorcycle policeman raised what looked like a gun and pulled the trigger as the motorist sped by on the curve.

The driver saw the officer and hastily slowed down, but it was too late. He was 15 miles over the limit — and it was recorded on the scope of the hand-held Digital Doppler, a new tool police are using to catch speeders.

A nine-mile stretch of Sunset Boulevard from Beverly Hills to the Pacific Ocean is patrolled by motorcycle officers using the instrument, which looks like a comic-strip ray gun.

The police purchased eight of the devices, also known as speed guns, for about $700 each. They have been used for three months.

The detectors transmit a radio beam. It strikes a moving vehicle, bounces back to the gun and goes into a portable computer connected to the gun. The vehicle's speed is registered in figures on the scope at the back of the gun.

B.C. BOOSTS AID TO DAY CARE CENTRES

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi today announced an expansion of provincial aid to day care centres which he estimated will result in 20 new facilities for 450 children in the next year.

Costs of the program will jump from $2.3 million this fiscal year to about $4 million in 1973-74, Levi said.

Included in the new program are grants to organizations which cannot afford to build centres under the present 50-50 sharing formula.

Also, financial assistance to parents will be based on a simple declaration of income, but the rates are not to be published until final overall sharing costs with Ottawa are worked out.

The day care centre aid is shared 50-50 with Ottawa under the Canada Assistance Plan.

For centres catering to children of three years and under, a new rate of $3.50 per day per child has been approved, replacing the old rate of $2.75.

Orange Moon Soil Excites Science

HOUSTON (UPI) — The men of the last Apollo mission gave scientists today one of the most important discoveries on the moon — a deep, orange-stained crater that probably was blown out by the dying gasp of lunar volcanism.

Pushing their oxygen back packs and moon buggy to the limits, the Apollo 17 explorers also drove to a mountain landslide and collected prize specimens that may range to the opposite end of the lunar life span.

Eugene Cernan and Harrison Schmitt may now have stored in the cabin of the spacecraft Challenger the youngest and oldest rocks ever seen on the moon. It will take months of laboratory analysis back on earth, however, to confirm this.

This would finally lay to rest the theory that the moon has been stone dead for the last three billion years.

And it also revives controversy over whether the moon had water at some stage of its history.

The explorers drove a record 12 miles during their second excusion. They returned to moonship Challenger at 2:06 a.m. EST today after spending a record 7 hours and 37 minutes outside.

The third crew member, Ronald Evans, was adding to the scientific windfall by observing the moon from the orbiting command ship America. He sighted what apparently were three extinct volcanos elsewhere on the lunar surface Tuesday.

Cernan and Schmitt make one more seven-hour excursion from Challenger tonight, planting man's footprints in the lunar dust for perhaps the last time this century.

They will leave the moon Thursday.

WEATHERMAN SEES SNOW ENDING

Today's snowfall should be the last Greater Victoria will get for a while at least, says the Victoria weather office.

Two to three inches are expected to fall today before the snow tapers off in mid-afternoon or early this evening. Partial clearing tonight will give some sunny periods Thursday, but skies will cloud over again Thursday evening.

Milder temperatures are expected, with highs today and tomorrow reaching 35 degrees, but daytime temperatures will still hang generally below the freezing point. Lows tonight will be in the low 20s.

Smallpox Drug Effective

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Free Press says in a copyright story a group of Winnipeg physicians have achieved a high rate of success with a new method of treating smallpox patients.

The newspaper quotes Dr. John Foerster, one of the senior investigators of the group associated with the Manitoba Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation, as saying the treatment was tried during a recent outbreak of smallpox in Bangladesh.

It says a scientific paper on the method is to be published this week in the British medical journal, the Lancet.

The story says that while the average smallpox death rate is one of three patients, eight of nine receiving the new treatment recovered quickly.

The treatment involved massive infusions of solutions containing cytosine arabinoside, a cancer drug developed in the United States.

PILOTS DOZE OFF

LONDON (AP) — Thirty thousand feet over the Pacific the pilot of an airliner carrying 125 passengers to Honolulu found himself dozing off at the controls.

He shook himself, glanced around, and saw his two co-pilots and flight engineer—his entire flight deck crew—were all fast asleep.

In another jetliner, on another route, the pilot was making his final landing approach with a full load of passengers. As the plane swooped to touchdown he discovered both his co-pilots were sleeping. They had to be forcibly awakened to help bring the plane down.

The two incidents were among "hundreds" described to the British Airline Pilots' Association (BALPA) in response to a request to its 5,000 members to tell of their experiences of fatigue affecting flying safety.

Gordon Hurley, spokesman for the pilots' union, said some "shocking" replies had come in since the questionnaire was circulated a week ago.

Aerospace Minister Michael Heseltine is discussing the allegations today with Britain's civil aviation authority and the British airways board.

BALPA is demanding a government inqui-

ANARCHISTS RIOT IN ROME STREETS

ROME (AP) — Thousands of leftist and anarchist youths turned Rome's historic piazzas, gaily decorated for Christmas, into battlegrounds Tuesday night over a bombing trial delayed for three years.

Rome took the brunt of violence as young extremists took to the streets in several Italian cities demanding the release of 12 anarchists and leftists rounded up after the Milan bank bombing Dec. 12, 1969.

At least 38 persons were injured and 45 arrested during the demonstrations.

Roman youths staged three hours of violence, setting fire to dozens of cars and throwing fire bombs and stones at police.

Defensive Flying Course Urged in North

Times News Services

The 32-day Arctic search for Martin Hartwell's crashed plane, which cost the federal government several million dollars, may also bring about a complete re-examination of Canadian flying regulations for the north.

Defence Minister James Richardson said Tuesday the armed forces search and rescue methods are not so much in need of review as are the reasons planes get lost.

Richardson said there are always lessons to be learned, "but the area where perhaps there's some need for re-examination or further study is in the regulations about who flies."

Hartwell's twin-engined Beechcraft 18 crashed on a medical mercy flight Nov. 8 with three other persons aboard and Hartwell — who had been involved in a previous flying accident — was the only one alive when searchers found him Saturday.

Many of the details of the crash will not be revealed until the department of transport has held an investigation, but it has been learned that Hartwell was not qualified to navigate on instruments alone. He told rescuers he had been flying under heavy overcast at the time of the crash.

Hartwell had crashed once before, when coming in for a landing at Flin Flon, Man., in 1969. His employer at that time said the crash, in which no one was injured, was just a matter of misjudgement.

Richardson said the defence department is developing the concept of defensive flying — similar to defensive driving schools under which people are trained to avoid accidents.

But a former pilot who flew for Gateway Aviation Ltd. of Edmonton, the line which employed Hartwell, said stricter licensing procedures are needed for northern flying where harsh conditions magnify the smallest error.

Dominique Prinet, now an economist with a northern consulting firm, said pilots flying in the Northwest Territories should be required to have instrument rating and the aircraft they fly should be equipped with more accurate compasses.

He said men like Hartwell are caught in a trap. It costs about $2,000 to receive instrument ratings and many pilots cannot afford the price.

"The blame in accidents like this alway lies with the pilot. The company on the other hand, has no problems. It can hire another guy and start the same procedures over again tomorrow. Mr. Hartwell was caught in a trap."

Prinet said few northern

Young's Hearing To Continue

CAMPBELL RIVER — The school board here will pursue its case against fired high school principal John Young in spite of both the chairman and vice-chairman losing their seats in elections Saturday.

A board of reference hearing Young's appeal reconvenes in Victoria county court Thursday morning.

Board chairman Harold Newman said J. S. Clyne, counsel for the board, had been instructed to continue with his presentation, which was cut off half way through at the scheduled end of proceedings in Campbell River on Friday.

"The new board will have the right to turn round and hire Young again should it want to," Newman said.

He said he felt the board still had a mandate to pursue the case since electors voted in an "anti-Young" candidate along with two "pro-Young" candidates when they purged the three incumbents, who were themselves divided on the Young issue.

Young's innovations at his seven-year-old high school became the focus of debate in Campbell River, culminating in a feud between Young and superintendent W. F. Ramsay, and Young's firing Sept. 8.

At the heart of the debate was Young's emphasis on voluntary attendance by Grade 11 and 12 students.

The board of reference heard 10 days of testimony from 11 witnesses, and received 103 exhibits. The hearing is expected to close Thursday. A decision on whether or not to uphold Young's appeal will follow in a few weeks.

FIREMEN EXTINGUISH burning insulation inside a CP Rail boxcar after a heater exploded inside causing second and third-degree burns to the face, hands and legs of a 25-year-old employee. Damage to the car was estimated at $100.

EXPLOSION INJURES RAILWAY WORKER

An explosion in a CP Rail boxcar Tuesday caused second and third degree burns to the face, hands and legs of a 25-year-old employee of the company.

Gary George Emmerson, 306 Gorge East, is in fair condition today in Victoria General Hospital.

Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates said Emmerson was filling a "Preco automatic heater" with a flammable liquid when the heater exploded inside the boxcar at 1260 Government.

Heaters are placed at each end of the car to keep them warm for perishable products, said Coates.

"We suspect that some of the flammable liquid was spilled on the hot metal of the heater and it suddenly burst into flames," he said.

Emmerson climbed up a ladder and out a hatch at the top of the car where he was assisted by a fellow employee, Martin Nixdorf, of Port Alberni, who laid the injured man face down in the snow on top of the car, said Coates.

A fire department aerial truck arrived at 2:10 p.m. and lifted him from the boxcar via blanket stretcher.

Firemen wearing "fresh air masks" climbed through the hatch to extinguish the insulation burning between the "inner skin and outside metal of the boxcar" while firemen cut through the outside with a "power cutter," he said.

The heater should have been refuelled outside, not inside the car, he said.

Cemetery Special

Jack McIntyre, president of Memorial Park, is offering one free grave and a bronze memorial plaque valued at $650 to anyone who signs a form saying they plan to drink and drive during the holidays.

But to win the prize, they must be found drunk and dead behind the wheel of their car.

"And we have enough graves in here to bury drunk drivers for the next 25 years. This is one Christmas gift I don't want to give," McIntyre said.

TRUDEAU HEDGES

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he told Premier David Barrett that a federal-provincial liaison committee might be formed to discuss B.C.'s complaints about the Coulmbia River Treaty.

But he said Mr. Barrett "was not quite correct" when he said earlier this week that the federal government has agreed to consider a B.C. request to seek reopening of the treaty with the United States to get more money.

Mr. Trudeau said that after hearing Mr. Barrett's complaints about the treaty for development of flood control and hydro production, he had said that a federal-provincial agreement provided for a liaison committee to look into complaints.

He told the premier that, if Mr. Barrett wrote to him, he would be prepared to name federal members to such a committee if B.C. would name provincial representatives.

Pilots: Dozing Off

ry into problems of pilot fatigue, saying present rules are totally out of date. Each member of a British airline flightdeck crew is limited to a total of 100 flying hours each month, or to 12½ hours in the air in any one day or night. BALPA wants a maximum of 80 hours a month.

Frequent jockeying by pilots from one international time zone to another is believed a common cause of tiredness.

Norman Tebbit, who was a pilot with the British Overseas Airways Corp. before he became a Conservative member of Parliament, said Tuesday night: "All too many of my colleagues have fallen asleep on the flight deck and I have done so myself.

"But that doesn't mean we were working too hard. It means we were working when our bodies were crying out to go to sleep. This is because of the odd hours at which pilots sometimes start work and because breakfast time in Hong Kong is bedtime in London."

BOAC said the sleeping incident on its flight from Sydney to Honolulu a few days ago was reported officially and investigated.

A specialist captain tested the route but found "nothing averse in the duty pattern."

The civil aviation authority, meanwhile, has ordered a full inquiry into the rules governing flying hours and their effect on safety. It will be held by a committee under the chairmanship of Douglas Bader, legless ace fighter pilot of the Second World War.

BALPA, which conducted its poll among pilots of BOAC, British European Airways and British Caledonian, did not name pilots for fear of inhibiting the response.

pilots would oppose stricter licensing proceures.

In March, 1972, Hartwell worked for Nahanni Air Services on an aerial game survey in the Arctic for the Canadian Wildlife Service, described by a CWS Spokesman as "difficult for someone new at it."

The spokesman, Doug Urquart, said the survey crew "quite often" had navigation difficulties, but so did eight previous pilots on similar surveys.

The pilot before Hartwell was "so bad we refused to work with him."

In Edmonton, meanwhile, the man who organizes northern searches for the forces — Capt. Keith Cathercole — had recommended some improvements to search aircraft, including plastic bubbles from which spotters could see the ground more clearly.

He said an official search report would be finished Friday and forwarded to Ottawa for study.

"There will be some mention regarding ministry of transport facilities in the north and it will deal basically with our own search equipment.

"We file a report after every search to try to improve the next one."

Another system from the Gulf of Alaska will likely move to the north coast Thursday. Looking ahead, present trends suggest that temperatures will moderate throughout the province towards the weekend.

Squabble Over Care for Elderly

Who should provide care for the elderly? And who can do it best?

These are the basic issues in a clash between the province and rest home operators, revealed in statements from both sides Tuesday and today.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke issued a warning Tuesday to people interested in starting up privately-owned personal care homes that the government does not plan to offer grants for such construction and may be getting furthur into the field itself "at some future time."

Cocke's warning came in the form of a press release from his office. He said personal care homes — those institutions which provide personal care to ambulatory elderly persons — provide a necessary and important form of health care and will be included in the over-all review of health services which is being undertaken by Dr. Richard Foulkes.

No Major policy decisions in this area will be made until Foulkes' report is filed, Cocke said. But for the meantime, he outlined the following position:

The government does not consider construction of such privately-owned homes as a satisfactory solution to the problems of providing care for the elderly.

No government grants will be made available and although there is no plan to close down any personal care homes now operating within provincial standards, persons thinking of investing in this field should be aware that publicly-owned facilities "may be constructed nearby at some future time." John Hanrahan, operator of a downtown rest home and a director of the B.C. Rest Home Association, said today that privately-owned rest homes giving personal care will always deliver a better service than a government project.

He said he intends building another home, with 85 to 100 private rooms, in the James Bay area next spring.

"There will always be a market for private homes giving a good service." He suggested anyone considering such a project should go ahead.

His rest home and others in general give the sort of personal care — help with bathing, medication — the government plans in the four personal care homes it is now building, said Hanrahan.

The first of the provincial personal care homes, Tillicum Lodge in Saanich, is expected to open in about two months with room for 150.

Cocke also said grants to non-profit societies wishing to construct personal care facilities will be continued at the present level of 35 per cent with a local contribution of at least 10 per cent expected.

The government is studying the need for increased construction grants, above the 35 per cent level, but feels at this time that if it is necessary to provide more than about 50 per cent of construction costs, it might be preferable to have the government construct the facility itself.

The study of health services being conducted by Foulkes is expected to be completed within a year.

FUND FOR TOTS PASSES $1,100

An emergency fund for a couple who lost two daughters in a Dec. 2 fire that destroyed their home has raised $1,112 to date.

Louis and Leona Tom lost everything in the early morning fire which destroyed their single-storey plywood house at 966 Paquachin Lane on the Cole Bay Indian reserve.

Daughters Sandra, four, and Polly, one, died in the blaze but Mr. and Mrs. Tom and their six-year-old son Harold leaped to safety through a window. They are staying with Tom's mother, Philomena James, until a new house is built.

Clothing donations have been collected at Metro-Toyota Ltd. at 2360 Beacon in Sidney and the family has almost enough now, but still need furniture for their next home.

All cash donations may be brought to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at 2239 Beacon in Sidney.

BLAST LINKED TO GANG WAR

MONTREAL (CP) — Police say a feud between rival motorcycle gangs may have been the motive behind the car bombing in which two persons were critically injured Tuesday.

Robert Marcel Doyon, 23, who lost a leg in the explosion, and Monique Corbeil, 24, both of Montreal are in critical condition in hospital following the blast which destroyed the car in which they were sitting.

Police said Doyon is a member of the Devil's Disciples gang and a conflict with a rival motorcycle gang appeared the most likely motive for the bombing.

The blast severed Doyon's right leg and inflicted serious head injuries on Miss Corbeil.

Police said the explosion occurred when Doyon tried to start the car, belonging to a man they identified as Yvon Courcelles.

Vancouver Civic Field Packed

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Vancouver voters are going to the polls today to elect a new mayor and five new aldermen in an election which could mark a turning point in civic politics.

A total of 121 candidates are competing at large for 26 seats on civic boards.

The campaign had been a confusing blur to many of the almost 250,000 eligible voters. The lack of a spirited contest for the mayoralty failed to provide a focal point and few well-defined issues of policy emerged.

Alderman Art Phillips, a millionarie investment dealer, is the favorite to succeed Tom Campbell, who is stepping down after five years as an alderman and a six-year controversial term as mayor which earned him national fame.

Leftwing candidates are split into two groups, New Democratic Party and the Committee Of Progressive Electors.

Brian Campbell, a 29-year-old community worker, heads an almost full NDP slate. Mrs. Angie Dennis, 29, a native Indian, is the COPE candidate for mayor. Plastic equipment designer Gordon Turner, 38, is running as an independent.

At least five new aldermen will occupy seats on the 10-slot aldermanic board with the retirement of four and the mayoralty candidacy of Phillips vacating the fifth.

Voters will have to make their choice from a list of 55 aldermanic candidates, 10 each from four major parties and 15 independents.

Electors will attempt also to pick nine school trustees from 35 candidates and seven park commissioners from 31 candidates.

If the NDP, COPE or TEAM parties manage to break the majority of the civic Non-Partisan Association, the election could bring an end to the fielding of such a large slate of candidates for various posts in future elections.

All three parties have promised to institute some sort of ward system in the city, rather than have an election-at-large.

All three have remarkably similar "people oriented" campaign platforms. All want an improved bus system, a start on some form of rapid transit and more concern for neighborhood problems.

NPA candidates, in the main, are satisfied with the way the city has been run in the past, with a tendency to give so-called people issues less sympathy than property issues.

More Assurance Needed

Premier Barrett has opened an interesting can of worms with his request to the federal government to re-negotiate the Columbia River Treaty with the United States. It could well be that more worms will wriggle away than will be added to the stock.

The portion of the treaty which concerns Mr. Barrett is that which specifies the amount of money which British Columbia was to receive in return for building dams on the Canadian portion of the Columbia. These dams — the Duncan, Arrow and Mica — while providing water storage and hydro power in Canada also serve to regulate the flow of water to downstream United States hydro plants. The resulting control enables the American plants to produce more power at times when it is most required. This advantage, along with flood control, was wrapped up in the so-called "downstream benefits" and British Columbia received cash payments which were used to finance the upstream dams.

The deal was fought over two years, with considerable opposition, led by General A. G. L. McNaughton, then Canadian delegate to the International Joint Commission, on the grounds that the province was not receiving enough for what it was contracting to do, and that in any case we should take the gains in the form of a share of hydro power from downstream rather than in cash.

Neither the objectors nor those ready to sell the project brought forward the idea which Mr. Barrett now raises. No one at the time foresaw the great effects which runaway inflation was to create in the later sixties and on into the present decade. Mr. Barrett now estimates that the depreciated value of the money received, and the escalated cost of materials and labor yet to be expended on the Mica Dam project, will run the province into many millions in extra expense.

That may well be true, but whether the United States will be willing to reopen a treaty signed long ago, and voluntarily shoulder some of the burden the British Columbia and Canadian governments willingly assumed, is quite another matter. It is possible that the U.S. interests would be willing — at a price. And at that point the game would be wide open for concessions by British Columbia and Canada — minerals, oil, gas, water, fishing rights, who knows what — in return for the favor.

It is too late to heed the sage advice of General McNaughton regarding the Columbia River resources, just as it may be too late to rescue, except at a sizable cost, the Skagit Valley from flooding to provide more power for Seattle. That was another brilliant deal in which the Social Credit government saw an opportunity to trade something for cash — the grand sum of $35,000 a year in the case of the Skagit Valley.

Is there any evidence that our governments are smarter now than they were a decade ago? Unless we can be guaranteed that some of the worms won't turn, perhaps we'd better leave the lid on the can.

Not Worth the Effort?

The depressingly small percentage of eligible voters who cast ballots in last Saturday's municipal elections has drawn the conventional criticism—and the criticism this year will be about as effective as in previous years: nil.

Yet surely, when only one municipality registers a turnout of more than 40 per cent, and the lowest is only 17.5, the democratic machine is in poor shape. A small fraction of the people is determining the political future of local government. And this tells only part of the story.

Among those conscientious citizens who marked ballots, the trip to the polling station was often made only from a sense of propriety, not from a deep concern over the issues or, in many cases, the personalities involved. "I voted because it's the proper thing to do, though I'm not certain of the policies of the candidates I supported," is a too frequent and honest comment.

There is an obvious need to make the municipal contests—the election of men and women who will spend the municipal taxpayers' money—more interesting to all the people. There is an equally obvious need to make voting more convenient. The larger turnouts for provincial and federal elections may be due in part to the larger number of polling stations.

Perhaps it is time for the municipalities to use all the schools, which are usually within walking distance of most homes, for polling stations. Considering what is at stake, that should not be too much trouble and expense for the election of representatives closest to the people.

The municipalities should make a thorough study of the problem. It is not enough merely for chambers of commerce or service clubs to urge larger turnouts, although such popular support is essential. There should be a deliberate program of arrangements to encourage eligible voters to use their ballots. Voting days—in view of what mankind went through to win them—should be established as special days like national holidays, and dedicated to the one major event of citizenship.

Loveless

To the layman, the most human characteristic of a computer is its capacity for error. But for a while at Novosibirsk in Siberia a computer seemed to be susceptible to feminine charms. As the girls walked past it, the electronic brain went off its rocker, making all sorts of mistakes.

Charming to think that such equipment was fallible for reasons known to man since Eve bit the apple. Unfortunate that science found an insufferably logical explanation. The computer became all of a dither only because of the electric field produced by the synthetic fabrics worn by the women. Once again unemotional science is vindicated, but a pleasing love story it does not make.

HAROLD GREER

Wraps on Organized Crime?

TORONTO — Dr. Morton Shulman, the millionaire investigator, is packing a gun again and the police are back on guard at his Forest Hill home. The Conservatives and the Liberals are yelling for his resignation as MPP for High Park. The newspapers are calling him a smear artist and diverse persons are trying to find ways to sue him despite his parliamentary immunity.

Another Shulmanism, you may have gathered, has been committed.

For some time Dr. Shulman had been warning, in his column in the Toronto Sun and elsewhere, that unless the government sets up a royal commission to investigate organized crime in the Toronto construction industry, he would "name the bombers"—those responsible for trying to force Acme Lathing Ltd., a reputable firm, into various nefarious practices. Certain political personalities would be implicated, Dr. Shulman hinted, if these disclosures were forced from him.

No Royal Commission

No royal commission was created and the hour of disclosure finally arrived. In a three-hour speech to the Legislature on Dec. 5, Dr. Shulman detailed what his inquiries had revealed about organized crime in the construction industry. It is impossible here to give the full flavor of his allegations but the main plot goes something like this:

In October of 1971, the owners of Acme Lathing were visited by one Gus Simone and one C. Romanelli. Simone was a leader of Local 562 of the Lathers International Union, a "sweetheart" local taken over by criminal elements. Romanelli was president of a small lathing company.

They proposed that Acme merge with the Romanelli firm and buy all its lathing material from Northdown Drywall and Construction Ltd., a large firm controlled by Tony and Sam Cesaroni. In effect, this would produce monopoly control of the multi-million dollar lathing business. Prices would then be raised to produce an extra $5 million income a year, and this would be split between the Cesaroni brothers, Acme and Romanelli.

Acme declined the offer and there followed over the next several months a variety of coercive measures. Gus Simone pulled his union members off Acme construction jobs. Acme's vice-president received threatening telephone calls. Acme's offices were sprayed with bullets at night and bombs went off in neighboring buildings. In September two days after a police surveillance was lifted, the Acme plant was blown up.

The police knew who the culprits were but could not get evidence that would stand up in court. The police wanted and recommended a royal commission but the government did not. The culprits were not concerned that a royal commission would be set up because — and this was the punch line—"they believe they have a powerful friend on the front row of the Cabinet."

... packing a gun

Dr. Shulman said he did not know whether the culprits have such a friend but he did know that a private detective had told him and the police that just before the 1971 provincial election he had seen Attorney-General Dalton Bales at a Conservative Party fund-raising affair hosted by Tony Cesaroni at his country estate.

Mr. Bales denied being there and said he did not know Mr. Cesaroni. The private detective, a rather mysterious fellow by the name of Max Chikofsky, denied seeing Mr. Bales there and said he never told Dr. Shulman or the police that he did. Mr. Cesaroni denied everything.

Dr. Shulman said that in view of Chikofsky's denial (contained in an affidavit presented by Mr. Bales to the Legislature) he was withdrawing his "allegation". Challenged by Liberals and Conservatives to resign his seat, he said he would if the government would call an immediate by-election so that his High Park constituents could judge him. Premier Davis replied he would not bargain: Dr. Shulman, said Mr. Davis, "owes the House his resignation and is obliged to submit it without condition."

This, of course, is political nonsense, a Davis variation of the Shulman technique. There is nothing in parliamentary law or practice that obliges Dr. Shulman to resign. If the government really believes he should resign, the proper course is to refer his conduct to the Legislature's Committee on Privileges and Elections with a view to securing at least a motion of censure. Even then Dr. Shulman would not be obliged to resign, although the Legislature could bar him from taking his seat.

No Comment

The government has not pursued such a course and Mr. Davis, pressed by reporters to explain why, repeatedly refused to comment. The explanation is obvious enough: the government is afraid of Dr. Shulman and what an inquiry might reveal.

Dr. Shulman, for example, still insists Max Chikofsky told him Mr. Bales was at Cesaroni's fund-raising party. Mr. Bales has tacitly admitted there is a police intelligence report which contains the same information and identifies Chikofsky as the source. The Globe and Mail has said Chikofsky told one of its reporters the same thing in an unpublished interview last Oct. 6. Fred Leger, business representative of the Carpenters' Union, has said that Chikofsky told him that Bales was there.

At the very least an inquiry into Dr. Shulman's speech would have to establish why, if four people say Mr. Chikofsky told them he saw Mr. Bales, he now says he didn't. The answer to that could well prove the need for a royal commission into organized crime in the construction industry, something the government has been rejecting for over a year.

JAMES RESTON

Looking at the Native Heath

LONDON — The nations, large and small, are now concentrating on the problems nearest their hearts, their boundaries, and their particular regions of the world. This trend is clear, not only in the new and struggling countries, but in the United States, the Soviet Union and China, and it is particularly marked here in Britain.

Prime Minister Heath talks about these things very quietly and steadily in the Cabinet room at No. 10 Downing Street. He seems more in command here now than ever before, despite all his problems, but the emphasis of his conversation has changed in the last year from global to national and European interests.

He does not dwell as he used to do on the "special relationship" between the United States and the United Kingdom. Pearl Harbor Day passed here almost without notice, though it was probably the turning point for Britain in the last World War. But that was 31 years ago, and the British have new things to worry about.

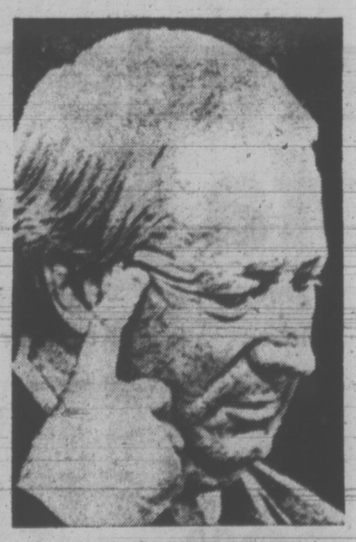
Multiple Problems

For they are caught now between the old Irish tragedy in the West and their new shot-gun marriage with Europe in the East, between the power of Parliament and the potential power of the emerging European community, between the need for more production and world trade, and the demands and threats of organized British labor for higher wages.

Prime Minister Heath is very courteous and pragmatic about all this. He is going to Washington before Inauguration Day to talk to President Nixon about how to work out the monetary tangles of the world, and how to reconcile all the economic interests and conflicts between the Common Market and the United States on the one hand, and the security interest of the NATO allies and the Soviet Union on the other.

But the things in the front of his mind now, quite naturally, seem to be primarily the condition of his own people, the problems of rising prices and labor demands, the ancient conflict with the Irish, and the sharp division among the British people, who are going into Europe but don't quite know what they are going to find there.

Before the British have quite got used to losing an empire they liked, they are being asked to join a continent they have never particularly liked, and meanwhile the Heath government has published an "Official Social Commentary" on the condition of Britain, which even the Webbs might feel as a little disturbing.



PRIME MINISTER HEATH
... quietly and steadily

—One per cent of the British population today, it says, still own 30 per cent of the nation's wealth despite all the progressive taxation since the days of Lloyd George.

—Economically, the British people are better off than they have ever been before — better, The Financial Times suggests gloomily, than they may ever be in the future — but the results of this increasing affluence are not entirely encouraging.

—For example, the government's official report says, while the economic condition of the British people has improved, the social trends, to use a modest English word, are "disquieting."

—Violent crimes have almost trebled in the last 10 years.

—Between 1961 and 1971, average weekly income rose 94 per cent, while retail prices went up by only 57 per cent, but "the big increases have been on motor vehicles, alcoholic drink, entertainment and recreation, and housing, fuel and light."

—There is good news on the increase in holidays, social security, health benefits, education and the decline in infectious disease, but venereal disease and abortion are also on the rise.

Birth Pains

—In 1971, the report says, one out of every four babies born to mothers between 15 and 19 was illegitimate, and three out of every five "of the births within marriage in this 15-19 age group had been pre-maritally conceived."

Over-all, the Heath government's report is one of economic progress and social decline. No doubt these few examples distort a study which is as big as a telephone book, but it illustrates as American social statistics do in Washington — why modern governments are beginning to think more about the problems nearer home.

The British are only the most dramatic symbol of the problem, for they have a long tradition of self-analysis and self-criticism, but at least they are publishing the facts, unlike many other governments, and trying to deal with them under very difficult circumstances.

For Heath, the United States is always a primary concern, particularly if there is danger of major war, but since that danger seems remote now, he is doing what Nixon, Pompidou, Brandt, Brezhnev, Chou En-Lai and most of the other world leaders are doing. He is looking homeward and forward to the new organization of the world, and it may not be a bad idea.

Death Penalty

Weekend Magazine (December 9, 1972) reports the result of the thorny question of retention of the death penalty, extended to cover not only murderers of policemen on duty and prison guards, but also air pirates and rapists.

We live in a violent age and the answer "yes" to the magazine's survey does not come as a surprise. It appears, however, that some people favor public executions either in "downtown city centres" or on television.

This should never happen. Death — even the death of a human being who by his own crime has forfeited his right to live — is something solemn, almost sacred. It cannot be a public spectacle.

The execution should be reported by the media in only one sentence, without details about where, whom and by whom.

The firing squad should certainly replace the gallows, for the protection of both the condemned criminal and executioners.

Perhaps the very existence of the death penalty would be a deterrent frightening enough to stop would-be murderers from taking an innocent man's life. If not, then society must protect itself by the "last resort".

Perhaps the murderer himself will welcome death, for life imprisonment and the burden of guilt must be immensely more painful and devastating than death itself.—"A Victorian".

More Jobs

One very obvious way to improve the unemployment picture, would be to prohibit "moonlighting," of which there is a great deal going on today. One job should be enough for anyone — E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful St.

Col. R. O. Bull

The Governors, Staff and Students of Brentwood College School wish to note with deep respect the recent death of an honored and much loved gentleman. Colonel Bull accepted a seat on the governing body of this School in 1964, and, led by that enthusiasm and the imagination which characterized his whole being, he eagerly accepted the challenging Chairmanship of the Buildings and Developments Committee. The next six years were onerous ones for all associated with the growth of the School. At all times, however, we were strengthened by the knowledge that we could always rely upon the energy and wisdom of our friend, Colonel Bull. At every step, his courage and compassion served as an example to those working with him. Early in 1972 ill health forced a retirement from the governing body; but so great had been the contribution of this gentleman that an Honorary Governorship was offered as a slight recognition of the enormous debt in which we stood. At this moment we feel honored to have known this most gentle of men, one of whom John Henry Newman might readily have said: "He is patient and forbearing and resigned in philosophical principles: he submits to pain because it is inevitable, to bereavement because it is irreparable, and to death because it is his destiny."—David Mackenzie, Headmaster; T. Gil Bunch, Assistant Headmaster.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Dec. 13, 1912:

OTTAWA — "Big nations, like big men," Sir Wilfrid Laurier said in the great naval debate, "are not jealous or envious of the success of others and there does not exist the necessity for saying what we owe to England. We are British subjects so we don't want to be anything else — and that settles the whole question."

Sir Wilfrid said if there were men in Quebec who will not recognize this truth he would appeal to them from another viewpoint — from the baser motives of selfishness. Canada has been immune from invasion from sea ever since Canadians became subjects of England in 1763.

Meanwhile, Stuck Back on Spaceship Earth . . .

By T.R.B.
New Republic

As you read this, God willing, three astronauts will be on the moon. As they look back through the cloudless lunar sky they see another spaceship behind, the Earth. We who follow them are passengers on this second spaceship. Like it or not, the most lasting effect of these flights is probably to lift our horizon, to make us think globally.

How are things on spaceship earth? With its torrid zones and polar caps, it is a peculiar place. It is inhabited by an odd, aggressive, oxygen-breathing, warm-blooded species called man. Man is a pygmy, with a trace of divinity. Often he is selfish; generally he is short-sighted and sometimes he is noble. His will to survive is breathtaking. He is overpopulating his little spinning planet at a great rate and very soon he must do something about it. Will he do it before disaster? Probably not.

Every 24 hours that Cernan, Schmitt and Evans are away from earth, 200,000 more humans are added. The population is already 3.7 million. At the end of their 13-day cruise Cernan, Schmitt and Evans will return to a planet with 2,600,000 more people on it (deaths subtracted from births) than when they left. In 35 years, population will double. Where will they all live? Some, in AD 2007, may be jammed in as tight as on Apollo 17 itself. If the fish tank gets too crowded, of course, many will die.

Of the passengers on earth about two-thirds go to bed hungry at night. To put it more scientifically, as Lester R. Brown does in his rousing new book, World Without Borders, they are below the nutritional minimum required for normal growth and activity. Any American who has been to Saigon knows what that means. You tower a foot taller than the Vietnamese. When you squeeze his fingers he winces. No wonder he dislikes us.

Messrs. Cernan, Schmitt and Evans will be looking for geological demarcations along the Sea of Serenity. As they look back at spaceship earth they can almost make out another kind of demarcation at home. It is an imaginary line that separates North America, Europe and Japan from Latin America, Africa and Asia: the North-South line of the economic gap, the division between the two worlds. It is taller than any Taurus mountains, and deeper than any Littrow crater the astronauts will encounter; life expectancy in the North may be 70 years, while in much of the South perhaps 30, which is not very long to live, but too long to be hungry.

The astronauts come from a nation with 6 per cent of the earth's population that complacently consumes 34 per cent of its energy; the individual income of the American is over $4,100, of India $90, and during the sixties the gap between the two, says Brown, widened "both absolutely and relatively." The birthrate in the poor countries is about twice that of the rich.

Back in the sixties, we remember, everybody thought there was going to be a famine. William and Paul Paddock published a book, Famine, 1975. Barbara Ward noted the widening gap "between a white, complacent, highly bourgeois, very wealthy, very small North Atlantic elite and everybody else." The head of the international Food and Agriculture Organization said "the outbreak of famines within the next five to 10 years cannot be excluded."

Gunnar Myrdal, the great Swedish economist, was more explicit; he was an impressive figure with massive head and china-blue eyes, and his vast experience and his difficulty with the English letter "j" made his testimony to Congress unforgettable. In 10 years he predicted (that was 1965), there would be world famine: "What the world needs," he observed memorably, "is not yet planes, but yobs!"

Famine didn't appear. Why? — because of the Green Revolution — the production of new, miracle strains of rice, a discovery that has affected more people, in less time, than any previous technological advance in history. It got Norman Borlaug the Nobel Peace Prize. But the Green Revolution is running out. It has given us time but not very much. Last month from Rome FAO director Addeke Boerma in a grim annual report said that the developing nations are falling behind again in food supplies as population catches up; it is "extremely serious," he said.

Earlier in Washington Boerma observed that "history teaches us that situations of this kind lead sooner or later to violence and political upheaval."

Well, let's come back to Lester Brown again, and his book, and the planet earth. The point he makes is that we have come, rather suddenly, into a global society "without borders," and that our resources are not endless but finite. We think we can stretch things with our nitrates and phosphates and insecticides and, for a while, we can till population catches up. But we have reached the point where the relationship between man and his natural environment is deteriorating.

The mantle of life-sustaining topsoil which is only inches deep over most of the world's surface (though it sinks to 10 or 20 feet in the humus mines of Iowa and Minnesota) is being used up. The word is "eutrophy." The water run-off from farm lands, with chemical fertilizer, pollutes the streams: Lake Erie is the best example of eutrophication. The moon has no moisture at all but on our earth we are poisoning our water; it is becoming even more precious than land. We can, of course, restore life to Lake Erie, explains Brown, but it will cost $40 billion.

The Russians thought they had the answer; Khrushchev put 100 million acres under cultivation in the "virgin lands" experiment only to find the residual moisture dries up; Egypt built the Aswan dam and found, besides uncomfortable side effects, an additional million people a year — still poor. Earth passengers are hungry yet we waste $204 billion a year on global military expenditures; our problem is uncontrolled human fertility.

It is Lester Brown's message that we are in a period like that when scientists gathered evidence that the globe was round, and many refused to accept the notion. Now the astronauts drive it home. Like it or not, we must think globally. We are all on the same spaceship, and it is the only one we have.

Australia Takes Turn; We Keep on Old Paths

By JAMES EAYRS

On Sept. 9, 1955, while visiting Ottawa, the foreign minister of Australia called upon the prime minister of Canada. They talked about recognizing the People's Republic of China.

L. S. St. Laurent told R. G. Casey that "the Canadian government was convinced that they should watch out carefully for the first moment at which it would be politically expedient (he used the word frequently) to recognize Peking. . . . He said that recognition was the sensible thing and that 'we' should not by any means be the last to do so. If we left it a moment too long we were likely to be treated contemptuously by the Chinese, who could relegate us to 'an upper garret in some remote pagoda' . . . He said they did not propose to embarrass the United States by 'asking' them,. but would leave them free to protest at what Canada had done. He believed that there would not be any real sting in their protest."

It Took 15 Years

Fifteen years after this conversation, Canada recognized the People's Republic of China. But for the defeat last week of the ruling Liberal-Country party coalition, entrenched in power for 23 years, by Gough Whitlam's Labor party, Australia would still not be recognizing the People's Republic of China. Casey was all for recognition 17 years ago, but then Casey was only Australia's foreign minister.

Australia's prime minister, Sir Robert Menzies, had other ideas; and when "R. G. M." — as Casey refers to his boss in his recently published diary — had his mind made up, that was what Australian policy became. Not always to Australia's advantage. Over the Suez crisis in 1956 the perceptions of foreign minister and prime minister were poles apart.

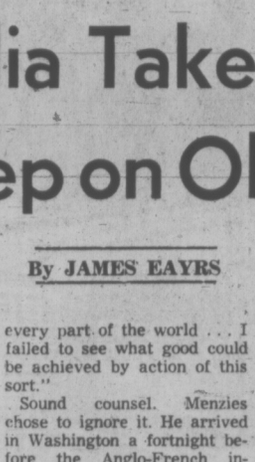
"I had a talk with R. G. M. this morning," Casey recorded on Aug. 17, three weeks after Nasser had nationalized the Canal Company. "I recommended that he should speak against the use of force to Anthony Eden.

"I pointed out the difficulties which this sort of thing would present — apart from the fact that it would put us completely in the wrong with public opinion in practically every part of the world . . . I failed to see what good could be achieved by action of this sort."

Sound counsel. Menzies chose to ignore it. He arrived in Washington a fortnight before the Anglo-French invaders put ashore at Port Said, seething against what he called "the old ladies of the United Nations associations." Nasser was an upstart gyppo. The British paratroopers would teach him a lesson.

Suez proved to be a lesson — but for the British government, not the Egyptian. NATO was split, the Commonwealth rent, sterling attacked, civilian corpses rotting in the streets by thousands — all to no avail. Still Menzies was adamantly unrepentant.

"Britain's action, I personally say — and I will say it if I am the only one left to say it — was brave and correct." Thus the prime minister of Australia, on Nov. 12, 1956, when British foreign policy — and Australian — lay in ruins. By then Menzies was the only one left to say it.



MENZIES
. . . era ended

The Menzies era in Australian foreign policy long outlasted its namesake. From 1966 — when Menzies finally stepped down — to 1972, the process of making foreign policy perfectly exemplified what has been termed the "curator mentality."

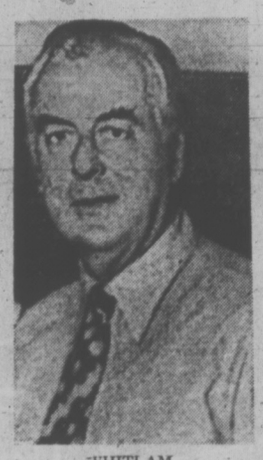
"The average desk officer inherits from his predecessor our policy toward country X; he regards it as his function to keep that policy intact — under glass, untampered with, and dusted — so that he may pass it on in two to four years to his successor." Except that at Canberra the curators were prime ministers, not desk officers — Harold Holt, John Gorton, latterly William McMahon.

Prime Minister Holt, before his death by drowning, had actually made the rapprochment with Peking more difficult by raising Australia's mission on Taiwan to the status of an embassy. Elsewhere policy remained unchanged.

Troops were based in Malyasia and Singapore. Membership was maintained in the South East Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO). Above all, the alliance with the United States was cherished, tended, nurtured. Alone among the Commonwealth of Nations, Australia sent armed forces to South Vietnam, where they duly fought and died.

So immutably fixed a foreign policy seems proof against fundamental change. But appearance proved deceptive. Within a day of taking office last week, Prime Minister Gough Whitlam turned Australian foreign policy around.

Australia is to recognize China. Conscription is to be abolished. An amnesty for draft offenders has been decreed, dodgers and deserters will go free. Immigration policy will be purged of racism. The remnants of the Australian expeditionary force are to be withdrawn from Vietnam. Garrison duties in Singapore will be abandoned next year. SEATO membership may end. The Menzies era has already ended.



WHITLAM
. . . quick change

Still Reviewing

"The general direction of my thinking is toward a more independent Australian stance in international affairs."

"We will seek a new role for Canada and a new foreign policy based on a fresh appraisal of this rapidly changing world."

The first of these statements is the first to come from Prime Minister Whitlam, just as the second was the first to come (on May 29, 1968) from Prime Minister Trudeau. But where the prime minister of Canada launched a new foreign policy review, the prime minister of Australia has launched a new foreign policy.

Australia's initiative is all the more remarkable for being taken by a country which, objectively considered, has less room for manoeuvre than does our own. The defence of Australia depends — and is felt by Australians to depend — upon the goodwill of the United States. That goodwill may not always be forthcoming. Ever since the fall of Singapore in 1942 — proving that the Royal Navy was no longer Australia's protector — her governments have sedulously cultivated the American connection, striven to promote a mood of mateship between Canberra and Washington.

It is different with us. "Canadians know they are safe," writes an Australian scholar perhaps a trifle enviously, "since the United States has to protect them in order to protect itself, whereas Australians subconsciously fear the worst — some Asian attack which the United States cannot or will not, meet."

Have then, Gough Whitlam and his colleagues, along with the majority of Australians who voted them into power, taken leave of common sense, committed their country to a course of suicidal folly? Not at all. They have calculated — in my view correctly — that they can count on just as much support from the United States while pursuing a genuinely independent foreign policy as they could expect while playing Menzies' "junior partner" role.

Canadians do not ordinarily take note of developments down under.

Such indifference may be more our loss than theirs now that Labor's returned to power to show what can be done. It is not enough to review our foreign policy. The point is to change it.

MANDARINS LOOK AFTER THEIR OWN

The Heads That Never Roll

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Perhaps you are cynical. You believe that in the political and economic fields Canada has not been doing very well. Some would read this from the recent shortfall of the very confident Trudeau government. It may not be that the country is as poorly as this evidence. News from another, little-noticed phase of Canadian government is good.

"Privy Council Clerk Lauded For Outstanding Achievement" was a headline in an Ottawa daily a week or so ago. And the day before another story had reported an award of merit for administrative brilliance by a national organization to one George Davidson, recently president of the CBC, before that long-time federal deputy-minister, and now at work high in the United Nations administration.

George Davidson went from strength to strength. After a brilliant career sitting on all the thrusting complexities of such matters as Indians and Immigration and, before that, of Hospitals and Health Services, George was picked by Lester Pearson to go into the CBC and, literally, to put the lid on controversy, to take it out of the news. He did this rather well, though at what cost to the public performance of the CBC which you see and hear is a good question.

It is arguable that in muffling the CBC, George Davidson castrated it. In any case, though doubters of Davidson abound in politics and the media, he's gone to international glory with the cachet of a non-political organization proclaiming that he's a man of unique accomplishment.

George Davidson never quite made it to the top, that is, to be Clerk of the Privy Council. Gordon Robertson, now 55, has been in that elevated No. 1 position for nine years. He came out of Saskatchewan from a Grit family (his dad was a Jimmy Gardiner henchman) through the Oxford University route (it helps enormously; perhaps more than the party connection) into External Affairs.

The award of outstanding achievement in the Public Service for 1972 carries a prize of $5,000. It stated: "The Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet is surely the single most difficult job in the public service; the demands of the position are such that the individual must possess qualities of mind and spirit that are rarely to be found and difficult to sustain."

In other words, Gordon Robertson must be one fine, capable man to fill so long this terrible position.

Could we generalize further? Have we a most brilliant senior civil service which does a marvellous job and would do a better one if it were not for the elected politicians who botch the works somewhat?

The answer is that we cannot really tell. A peripheral person like myself, full of "outsider's suspicions," tends to feel that our Prime Ministers and cabinet ministers are served by donkeys, figuratively-speaking, along the lines of opinion once expressed by World War I generals.

Despite the failures or malfunctioning of many federal programs it is invariably the heads of politicians which eventually roll, not the unknown men with continuity who are in adminstrative charge.

What put me on this theme again was the chilling realization that something was missing in the memoirs of two of the best-known, most honored, civil servants Canada has ever had, Lester B. Pearson and the late Arnold Heeney. Their recently published books are winning lots of readers. Of course, Mr. Pearson's first volume only goes to the end of his civil service career. But before he went into politics he was Undersecretary of State for External Affairs, in 1948, as high, if not higher, in the Ottawa pecking order as Clerk of the Privy Council.

Neither of these men of "the inside and the top" pay much attention to anyone other than cabinet ministers. Indeed, their world in relation to vulgar politicians, really revolves around the Canadian prime ministers, Parliament, debates in the House of Commons, Opposition spokesmen, election campaigns, indeed, the people of Canada as citizens with ideals and communities and interests, hardly are touched upon by either great civil servant.

DAVIDSON
. . . an insulated world

You would never know from either author that a great depression had ravaged Canada and agonized their elected masters.

Pearson was the secretary in the depression years of an investigation into price spreads. The chore was clearly a hard challenge to him as an administrative task. Nothing came through in his memoirs of the inquiry as a mirror or a conduit of grievance and suffering across the land.

What you get in these memoirs is a nice insulated world. Decent, able chaps keep government going. They have upright characters. They eschew moral turpitude so intrinsic to politics.

A few years ago Parliament moved to a more formal recognition of merit in Canada with the Order of Canada in its two phases of rankings. One of the notable features of the lists of honored is the high fraction composed of federal civil servants. Such distinction! They know each other and recommend each other, I assume.

FLEA POWER ON THE RISE

By JANE BRODY
New York Times

For most people, fleas have little to recommend them. They bite and bother, spread ghastly diseases and give their unwary hosts a bad reputation.

But scientists have always been fascinated by the remarkable jumping ability of this tiny, wingless, bloodthirsty pest of animalkind.

The leap of a flea, for instance, can carry him nearly eight inches into the air and across a distance of 13 inches.

Size for size, an equivalent jump for man would propel him 275 feet up and set him down 450 feet from where he started.

Now an international team of biologists has revealed most, if not all, the secrets of the flea's jumping talents (which, incidentally, enable it to reach almost any host, even though some — from the flea's perspective — are rather high off the ground).

Unlike man and most other animals, the scientists found, the flea does not rely on muscular strength to fling itself into the air.

Rather, it depends on the springlike rebound energy in an untiring elastic protein called resilin that is peculiar to insects.

By releasing an elaborate system of trigger catches that otherwise hold the resilin in a compressed, energy-laden form, the flea can unleash the stored energy at will and leap out of reach of a scratching finger or paw.

The Road to Happiness?

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

At the end of last April I received a letter from a 17-year-old girl in British Columbia that touched, I guess, the parent in me.

It was rather sloppy handwriting, with words crossed out and revised, and it started out, "It took me a long time to get up my courage to write you . . ."

She told me nothing about herself except her unhappiness, then rambled on a while before saying: "Please excuse the weird things I write because I'm a little gone on wine right now. Could you write this stupid kid back?"

That wasn't much to go on, but I went on. I didn't know if she was pretty and lonely, or homely and lonely; whether the wine was hers or belonged to her parents; or what, indeed, was bugging her into being gone on wine for (I felt) not the first time.

Anyway, I replied to her pretty well as if she were one of my own. That is, I was able to do no more than guess about her problems.

Looking now at what I told her, it seems rather mundane. "Don't think of yourself as a stupid kid or you might start believing it, and acting that way," I wrote. I wondered who had called her stupid. It isn't the sort of judgment one generally arrives at, unaided.

And then (maybe straight from some long-gone fortune cookie, but representing what I really do think): "Most people are happy in life if they figure out what they want to do most and then do everything they can to achieve it. This need not be any huge pinnacle, such as international fame. A person who wants to grow the best apples, or good horses, or raise a fine family, should get as much out of achieving this goal as anyone who achieves, in the eyes of the world, a much greater one . . ."

I could have gone on, I suppose, to say that a person's goals should be subject to reasonable change. If you want to write like Heminway, or have a bosom like Sophia Loren, or sing like Lawrence Tibbett, it should not be a disaster if you don't quite make it. That's where most of us are, man (and you, too, Sophia), coming as close as we can to what we really wanted at the beginning, but settling for less without serious regret.

That exchange of letters took place seven months ago. I picked up another letter yesterday and saw by the postmark that it was from this girl again.

"Dear Mr. Young," she wrote, in a much tidier, more legible script. "Remember me? The girl who wrote to you a few months ago?

"I've really come along and I've finally found happiness in my life. I've become a Jesus Freak (more or less) and all my hassles have cleared up. Now I don't need booze or dope. Far out! I really have found friends and people who love me.

"It's funny, I feel like running up to people and telling them Jesus and everyone else loves them. I bet it would clear up the problems and loneliness that everyone experiences in life. Sound different than that 'stupid kid' who wrote you before? Tell everyone you know, I love them! Praise the Lord! God's alive and Jesus is Comin' Soon! Luv." And she signed her name.

Did I cause that? Obviously not. Will it last! Don't know. Does it matter? Yep, but I don't know exactly how.

Moral: It's a strange, strange world we live in, Master Jack.

Miller Leads Boyle In Mine Worker Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government reported today that challenger Arnold Miller has taken the lead over United Mine Workers President W. A. (Tony) Boyle in the union's court-ordered election.

Miller had 11,774 votes to 10,673 for Boyle, said the labor department, which is conducting the vote count under heavy guard.

There are more than 100,000 votes still to be tallied.

Miller's running mates, Mike Trbovich for vice-president and Harry Patrick for secretary-treasurer, also moved ahead of their opponents on Boyle's slate.

Trbovich had 11,146 votes to 10,573 for Leonard Pnakovich while Patrick had 11,423 votes to 10,307 for Wilbert Killion.

LEAD CHANGE

The initial vote count report Tuesday, from 53 of the union's 1,300 locals, showed Boyle with 2,180 votes to 1,587 for Miller.

Miller, running under the Miners for Democracy banner, is filling the insurgent shoes of the late Joseph (Jock) Yablonski, found murdered along with his wife and daughter several weeks after losing the union's 1969 presidential election to Boyle.

Judge William Bryant ordered the current election after finding widespread voting fraud in the 1969 contest.

Boyle has repeatedly disclaimed any knowledge of the Yablonski slayings. Several local and district officials and mineworkers from Pennsylvania and Tennessee have confessed or been indicted in connection with the shootings.

Labor Department officials estimated that about 130,000 of the nearly 200,000 union members had voted in the election which was conducted Dec. 1-8 in 25 states under the supervision of 1,000 labor department agents.

Women line up for rice in Jakarta

FAMINE FACES INDONESIANS

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Empty-eyed women stand in long lines under a light drizzle waiting for rice as leaders struggle to head off what could be a serious Indonesian crisis.

A drought, coupled with insufficient stockpiling, has left the country's 125 million people short of their only major staple — rice. And the lean months are still ahead.

Some starvation deaths have been reported and many families are spending their entire income on food.

Government officials are dumping 120,000 tons of rice a month on the market to depress the prices which, in some places, are two to three times higher than their normal level.

Emergency orders on the tight international rice market may have produced just enough grain to hold prices to the present level or lower during the crisis, but shipping and labor problems may delay delivery.

Many Indonesians, with a per capita yearly income of about $100, have nothing to sell and can barely scrape up enough for food when there is plenty.

"In south Sulawesi, some people are eating roots and papaya leaves — anything, to stay alive," said an Indonesian journalist.

KING KEEPS EYE ON SANDRINGHAM

Labor Minister Bill King said today "I certainly intend to keep in touch" with the 26-month Sandringham Private Hospital strike.

But, he added, there is "no definite action contemplated" at this moment by the government.

He ruled out appointment of an industrial inquiry commission to look into the strike by 24 employees for a first contract.

"I have not considered anything of that nature," he said.

He was commenting after the hospital's decision not to sign an agreement with the striking Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1311, because of unwillingness to displace 24 employees who have taken the strikers' jobs.

King called the decision "retrogressive" and "18th century." He did not rule out that something might be done at the governmental level.

BIG TURNOUT OF DONORS

A solid turnout of 274 blood donors at the legislative buildings Tuesday pushed the total of donors to 407 after two days of clinics there.

The Red Cross will conduct a clinic at HMC Dockyard today, to 4 p.m.

Thursday there will be a clinic at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, Ganges, from 1:45 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

School Voting Set Feb. 17

February 17 was set Tuesday as the date for a $1.7 million school building referendum. Also, the Greater Victoria school board will apply for $112,000 in winter works assistance.

The referendum will pay for renovations and additions, but no new schools. It is considered an interim measure before the board studies and adopts a long-range plan.

Included in the referendum are modernization of safety equipment in many schools, and additions to such schools as James Bay Elementary and Cedar Hill Junior High.

The winter works program, which has to be accepted by federal officials, offers Esquimalt a new soccer field at Macaulay Elementary, two new adventure playgrounds and site improvements at Rockheights Elementary.

In Victoria three adventure playgrounds and a new wooden floor for Victoria secondary auditorium are planned.

In Saanich the projects include complete field improvements at Reynolds School and at Mt. Douglas, three adventure playgrounds and 1,000 feet of high fence for Lansdowne Junior High.

WHAT MAKES '73 MERCURY MONTEGO SO GREAT?

Cutlass, Century, Le Mans, Satellite, and Coronet/Charger.

With competition this good, we had to make Montego great. We engineered better ideas into Montego. Ideas that make it easy to handle. Ideas that give it a smooth, quiet ride. We styled it with a long, low, classic profile that makes it an elegant, attractive-looking car. In short, we engineered it to fit your lifestyle.

Engineered with big ideas.

Riding comfort and ease of handling. These are the big things that make Montego such a great car. A quiet car because of solid body-frame construction. Designed in two wheelbase lengths — 114" for the 2-door and 118" for the 4-door — Montego handles with ease in the city and on the highway. Yet you enjoy the ride of a big car. Montego has a wide stance that holds the road and the high-stability front suspension and coil spring rear suspension are similar to our most expensive cars. In fact, Montego's ride is so smooth, quiet and comfortable, you'll actually think you're riding in a car that costs much more.

Comfort in luxury ideas.

As well as superb riding comfort, Montego has many luxury features that add to your overall comfort. Deep, foam-padded cushion seats in richly woven fabrics and vinyls. 100% nylon loop-pile carpeting. Flow-thru ventilation. Extra sound-proofing materials that keep quiet in and street noise out.

Convenience in small ideas.

There are a lot of little things built into Montego that add to its overall value. This year, for driver convenience, we've lighted more of the controls. For more comfort and better visibility, there are new, low-back bench seats with adjustable headrests. And every Montego is equipped with an inside hood latch release.

Strong ideas in safety.

Every Montego carries the whole complement of Ford Motor Company Safety Features including energy-absorbing S-frame construction, steel guard rails in every door and the new energy-absorbing bumper system.

It's your move.

Last year, Montego's sales reached an all time high. Find out for yourself what makes Montego so great. Test drive any of the exciting 9 new Montego models today at your Mercury dealers.

Saanich Bid On Lansdowne Takeover

The province will be asked to declare Lansdowne Road west of Foul Bay a secondary thoroughfare and help pay the cost of bringing it up to that standard, Saanich public works committee decided Tuesday.

As a secondary thoroughfare, the road — which is now in need of resurfacing — would qualify for 50 per cent provincial financing.

At the same time, the highways department will be asked its intentions for the expansion of Trans-Canada Highway west of Douglas, or for a connection with McKenzie Avenue, which has secondary highway status only as far as Patricia Bay Highway.

The request for provincial participation in Lansdowne was prompted by a householder at 1686 Lansdowne in complaints about vibrations caused by heavy traffic on a rough road surface.

The municipal engineer reported asphalt patches on trenches dug by B.C. Telephone Co. were level with the road surface, but unevenness remains due to the nature of the roadway. It was recommended the road be rebuilt and design work for such a project was authorized in the 1972 budget.

Lansdowne is improved to a higher standard on both Victoria and Oak Bay portions of the street, but the section running between Shelbourne and Foul Bay — situated in the Saanich Panhandle — has no engineered crown, broken shoulders, no curbs or gutters and is of less than acceptable width.

"I use it quite often and find it quite poor," said Ald. Edith Gunning, suggesting the street be one of the areas to be inspected on the annual tour by aldermen of potential public works undertakings which is usually scheduled for early January.

Ald. Frank Waring suggested the department ask for secondary status for McKenzie extended westward from Patricia Bay in order to link with Trans-Canada near Admirals Road, a much-needed artery.

"If we don't get going now, in five years we'll be in a real mess," Waring said.

Ald. Gunning said this undertaking would be very costly, even if shared by the provincial highways department, and aldermen have to be prepared to "knock off some other roads" in the municipal road improvement program in order to finance McKenzie.

It was suggested "many millions" may be required to complete the job and Ald. Leslie Passmore suggested an approximate figure could be useful by Monday night when council will consider the committee's recommendation.

The undertaking "would certainly help eliminate that bottleneck at the Trans-Canada and Douglas," Passmore said.

The committee also recommended to council that $1,000 be spent to construct a curb on Lovatt near Dale to correct a winter runoff problem that results in flooding for several properties in the neighborhood.

Letters complaining of the situation were received from five residents who the committee urged be told that to fully correct the flooding will require ditching on private property and possibly a new underground connection with a storm drain on Dale.

Another flooding problem, affecting four houses in the 3400 and 3500 block of Maplewood, can be cured with the installation of a deeper drain on Maplewood in front of the houses at a cost of about $4,000 to be taken from the 1972 drainage construction budget.

Members recommended a $21,000 bridge be built over Colquitz River on Mann Avenue with funds to come from the 1973 budget, shared $9,800 by the municipality and $11,200 by the developer of adjoining land wishing access for a subdivision.

THIEVES CHOP DREAM TREE

BOSTON (AP) — Twelve years ago Joseph Mucci planted a seedling in his backyard and nurtured it until it was a 7½-foot blue spruce—his own personal Christmas tree.

Tuesday, while reading his newspaper, "I glanced out the dining room window and I knew something was wrong," the 73-year-old retired construction worker said.

"I called to my wife to come look, and then it hit me that my tree was gone . . . the best tree I ever had."

Farmers 'Key to City Survival'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's rural population will basically have to solve society's problems which have resulted from the concentration of technology in huge urban centres, delegates to the National Farmers Union annual meeting were told Tuesday.

George McRobie, an economist from London, England, said rural people still are close enough to nature to be able to investigate alternatives to replace the city-oriented and destructive technology of today.

He said the alternate, a survival technology, must be found to replace the western world's current ideological god of limitless economic growth. Society has been "hoodwinked" into believing no such alternative exists.

Mr. McRobie, development director of the Intermediate Technology Development Group Ltd., said the farmer's union has an international reputation of being concerned with human values and needs and its members must inspire the development of new, decentralized technologies.

The current ideology is based on the harnessing of science and technology to provide the maximum output of goods and services through mass production and the creation of mass markets.

"The main motive power is well-known as greed laced with envy and a good deal of self-deception," he said, and has led to depopulation of rural areas, social alienation by crowding people into cities and an increasing lack of power to enable people to shape their own destinies.

Power now rests in the hands of a few people and anti-planning, anti-conservation and irresponsibility are rampant.

The trend, evident since the Second World War, has seen rural people moved in ever increasing numbers to the cities where they have to sit "in front of machines where they have only a small part of their consciousness engaged in what they are doing.

"Then, in the evening, they go home and sit in front of a television set at an even lower level of consciousness and finally sink into a deeper state of unconsciousness called sleep."

This mindless chaos of modern city life must be replaced with a recreation of community in rural areas with people working together to replace the lack of power over control of the means of production.

"This means a great deal of decentralizing of power on a whole lot of things that over the last 20 years we've spent pulling into the cities."

The ideal of the owners of capital in today's "robber economy" is production without employment — the use of more and more machines.

"Their motto might well be: 'To hell with the next generation, what have they ever done for us'."

Woman Chosen As Speaker In Bundestag

BONN (AP) — The new Bundestag, lower house of Parliament, met for the first time today and elected the first woman speaker in West Germany's 23 years as a nation.

The Bundestag will re-elect Willy Brandt as chancellor Thursday, and he will present his new cabinet Friday.

The new speaker of the Bundestag is Annemarie Renger, a 53-year-old grandmother who is a member of Brandt's Social Democratic party. She is the first member of her party to get the post, which ranks second in the official hierarchy behind the federal presidency.

The vote was 438 to 45 in Mrs. Renger's favor, with 30 abstentions and three ballots invalid.

Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes. No. Yes.

Let's talk.

If you talk to us about an idea that needs financial help to become a reality, we usually have an answer: "Yes".

We've said "yes" to loans for everything from stock market investments to race horses, antique cars to brand-new cottages, complete new rooms to complete new businesses.

"Yes". We say it often.

Because we think a good idea deserves credit.

And, we've got so many different kinds of loans and ways to pay them back, that we can usually find a way to say "yes".

But if the good idea is only good for getting you head-over-heels in debt, then we have another answer.

We hate to say no, but yes, sometimes we do.

JOB PLAN BARED

TORONTO (CP) — President J. P. R. Wadsworth of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce suggests that some spending programs slated for the 1980s might be started earlier in an effort to provide more jobs.

Wadsworth told the bank's annual meeting of shareholders that the rapid growth of the labor force will start to slow down in the late 1970s.

"With this outlook for labor force growth, it would seem sensible to implement some policies that would accelerate employment through the balance of the 1970s but not necessarily be carried into the 1980s.

$5.5 Millions Spent at MB's Harmac Mill

Forest Planning Awaits NDP Guide

By Al Forrest

Times Business Editor

First Article In Two-Part Series

The British Columbia forest industry may get off to a slow start with its expansion programs in 1973, awaiting direction from the new provincial government.

Forest industry spokesman Gordon Draeseke, president of the Council of Forest Industries, said "there is a good deal of wait-and-see" among large forestry companies in British Columbia.

The companies want to see details of the New Democratic Party's plans for the industry before committing additional funds in expansion. Details are expected in the NDP's first budget, likely about Feb. said millions of dollars worth 9.

One company spokesman of expansion capital were being tied up awaiting direction from the provincial government.

Another company vice-president commented: "We can't play the game until we learn what the rules are."

During 1972 the forest industry spent $368.8 million in renovations and capital expansion.

Of this total, MacMillan Bloedel, the industry leader, spent $60 million in capital expansion, not including its $30 million five-year plan for anti-pollution installations.

The company is spending more than $5.5 million of this amount on controlling water and air pollution at its Harmac pulp mill near Nanaimo.

Looking to the future, MacMillan Bloedel chairman J. V. Clyne said:

"Tthe market outlook for forest products in 1973 is generally optimistic. We expect that sales of pulp, paper and packaging materials should continue to show improvement.

"Demand for building materials, lumber and plywood should remain strong for some time, although rates of housing starts appear to be declining moderately from recent very high levels," Clyne said.

"In common with other exportes, however, our industry continues to be troubled by world-wide inflation and the instability of exchange rates."

He said the inflation problem was becoming more severe because of expansionary monetary policies of governments in Canada and the United States.

"In Canada, much will depend on the success of a minority government in resisting pressures for policies that are unduly expansionary," Clyne said.

"In certain areas, wages are already higher than those in the United States.

"If the price and wage restraints continue to be successful in the United States, Canada may find itself in a position of growing difficulty because of inability to compete in its major foreign market."

MacMillan Bloedel is heavily dependent on American market conditions as 50 per cent of its production is sold there.

Only 21 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel's lumber, plywood and shingles is sold in Canada (British Columbia's share is 5 per cent) and only eight per cent of the company's newsprint, pulp and paperboard is in Canada (5 per cent in B.C.).

The company would not estimate its 1972 gross sales. However, based upon performance so far this year 1972 sales could top $900 million.

Clyne earlier had announced nine month sales of $658.9 million, compared with $544 million in the same period of 1971.

While 1972 was a good year for the company, it was more a case of regaining the profitable levels of the late 1960s rather than reaching new, earning plateaus.

The company had net earnings of $42.5 million in 1969, tumbling to $17.4 million in 1970. Labor difficulties associated with wage negotiations and a pulp surplus contributed to the decline in earnings. Earnings rose to $25.4 million in 1971, a solid grain over 1970 but below 1969.

Earnings for the first nine months of 1972 were $25 million, ahead of the 1971 pace ($16.2 million) but behind the 1969 level of $33.8 million at the same time.

The company had sales of $535 million in 1967, $579 million in 1968 and $638 million in 1969. In 1970, sales rose only $8 million to $646 million.

Sales improved to $704 in 1971, could hit $900 million this year and top $1 billion in 1973.

Other industry leaders are Crown Zellerbach (Canada) Ltd. which had 1971 sales of $206 million and British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. with 1971 sales of $133 million.

Thursday: Forecasts for 1973.

Electrohome

Electrohome Ltd. reports net earnings of $3,164,000 or $1.04 a share for the first nine months of 1972 compared with $1,724,000 or 56 cents a year earlier.

Reitman's

Reitman's Ltd. reports net earnings for the nine months ended Oct. 31, 1972, of $1.94 million, up from $1.76 million for the corresponding period last year.

Earnings per share, taking into account a two-for-one stock split, were 43 cents, compared with 39 cents in the 1971 period.

Sales for the nine-month period were $45,971,479, up from $42,062,253 during the corresponding period last year.

Labatt

John Labatt Ltd. and Wine Securities Ltd., a holding company which controls Chateau-Gai Wines Ltd. of Toronto, announced jointly that Labatt will acquire more than 51 per cent of Wine Securities shares.

N. E. Hardy, Labatt president, and Thomas R. Comery, Wines Securities president, said the directors and management of Wine Securities had accepted the Labatt offer and recommended its acceptance by the shareholders.

Seagrams

Distillers Corporation-Seagrams Ltd. reports net income for the quarter ending Oct. 31 of $23.1 million or 66 cents a share compared with $20.9 million or 60 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Sales for the quarter were $449.3 million, compared with $442.7 million for the third quarter of 1971.

Both sales and net income for the quarter were records for the company.

Loblaw

Loblaw Companies Ltd. reports an operating loss of $1,502,000 or 18 cents a share for the 28 weeks ended Oct. 14 compared with a profit of $1,794,000 or 11 cents in the corresponding period of 1971.

Net income for the 28 weeks was $287,000, including $1,789,000 in special items, down sharply from net income in 1971 to $6,972,000. The 1971 figure included $5,178,000 in special items.

The company says main cause for reduction in income was the loss incurred by National Tea in the U.S.

Sales income this year was down $33 million to $1.35 billion.

'Resource Firms Need Protection'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Albert Hall, president and chairman of the board of the Bank of British Columbia, said Tuesday the provincial economy needs more secondary manufacturing, but not at the expense of the province's resource industries.

Hall told the bank's annual meeting that B.C. must broaden its economic base.

"Far too long now we have relied almost solely on resource development and export, with much of our exports leaving the province in an unprocessed or unfinished state," he said.

"It is necessary that we direct our efforts towards a greater amount of secondary processing and to the manufacture and export of more finished products. This is the goal we must strive for in the future.

"As a considerable period of time will be required to attain this goal, this dictates we must continue to rely upon our resource industries for many years to come."

Hall said the apparent intention of the provincial government was to "burden these (resource) industries to assist in the development of new industry.

"This does not appear to be the route that should be taken. The result can be the over-all weakening of the provincial economy during the transitional period with a resultant negative impact on industrial performance, employment and earnings."

Secondary industry is best developed through tax concessions, grants and government loans, Hall said. "By such action we can encourage new industrial development and more importantly, create the atmosphere conducive to such development."

Hall said federal Finance Minister John Turner's tax concessions to manufacturing and processing industries were a step in the right direction.

"On the other hand, the federal tax legislation now applying to the mining industry may well harm future exploration and development."

Hall also disagreed with the provincial government's proposal of an industrial development corporation. He said it was a worthwhile proposal but "as a great percentage of potential business will undoubtedly prefer the relative management autonomy of industrial incentives, I would suggest that the proposal cannot be the prime method towards secondary industry development."

Copier Monopoly Charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Federal Trade Commission announced Tuesday it will issue a complaint charging that Xerox Corp. has monopolized the $1.7-billion office copier industry by engaging in unfair marketing and patent practices.

The proposed complaint alleges also that Xerox has foreclosed its foreign affiliates from competing with it in the United States.

Such a complaint is issued when the FTC has reason to believe that the law has been violated.

Xerox may elect to contest the action at hearings before the commission and in the courts or it may negotiate a consent settlement.

The complaint specifies that Xerox should divest itself of the stock of Rank Xerox Ltd., a British corporation which distributes office copier machines and supplies worldwide except in the United States and Canada.

City Brokers Divided

Victoria investment houses are divided on the merits of proposed new commission rates, but the consensus is the new schedule will be approved Jan. 9 regardless of what they think.

The new rates will increase commissions on small sales and reduce them on big sales, but not by as much as had been proposed earlier in the year.

The revised schedule will be voted on by Vancouver Stock Exchange members in January and would go into effect almost immediately.

The proposed new rates are:

A single rate of 2.6 per cent for all stocks priced from 1 cent to $10. A single rate of 1.64 per cent for all stocks priced above $30.

A sliding scale of rates descending from 2.6 per cent at $10 per share to 1.64 per cent at $30 per share.

Basic rates apply to the first $20,000 of any order. Above the $20,000 level, rates are further reduced.

For small investors, the new rates would be a $10 commission on orders between $50 and $200, with a $15 minimum for orders over $200. Orders under $50 have a rate to be determined by the investment house.

Under the present rates, a small investor can buy up to $400 worth of stock for a $10 commission. Under the new rates, when buying between $200 and $400 he will have to pay $5 more when he buys and $5 more when he sells.

Victoria investment houses dealing heavily in Vancouver mines and oils frown upon the new rates because they might tend to discourage the small investor.

Those dealing heavily in Toronto Stock Exchange industrial stocks generally approve the new rates as being more in line with the costs of doing business.

Overall, the new commission rates should bring in an additional 10 per cent revenue for members of the Vancouver Stock Exchange and an additional five per cent for TSE members.

As to whether local investment houses would vote in favor of the new rates, Victoria spokesmen said "Toronto will decide for us" or "that's up to our Vancouver office."

Most seem resigned to the new rate structure although some are not enthusiastic about the changes.

Operator Must Return Money

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Skoretz, operator of Kay's Rest Home here, was ordered Tuesday by Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson of the B.C. Supreme Court to give $49,160 plus interest to the estate of an elderly, deaf, near-blind patient.

Mr. Justice Anderson said Skoretz exerted a "dominating influence" over the patient, David L. M. Roberts, who died less than a year after Skoretz got the money.

The defendant has contended the money was a gift from Roberts.

The case was brought before the court by the public trustee, administrator of Roberts estate.

The court was told that Roberts entered the rest home Sept. 21, 1970 and a few days later appointed Skoretz power of attorney for himself and turned over his bank accounts and a quantity of bonds to Skoretz.

Roberts on Sept. 26, 1970 suffered a fractured hip, went to Vancouver General Hospital then to Valleyview Hospital. He died June 12, 1970 at 71 years.

Mr. Justice Anderson noted that within one week of Roberts' departure from the rest home to hospital Skoretz had transferred all of the man's bank accounts into his own name and had cashed in all of the bonds.

Skoretz contended that the patient was grateful for the care he had received and wished him to have all his money.

Mr. Justice Anderson said he had carefully examined Skoretz's evidence and was not convinced of the truth of it that he could accept it without corroboration.

OIL CLEANUP BILLS STUDIED

SURREY (CP) — About 100 individual claims totalling $200 and a bill for $16,000 from an anti-pollution group for work done to clean up an oil spill that fouled Surrey and White Rock beaches in June are still being considered, a spokesman for adjusters handling claims for Atlantic Richfield Co. said Tuesday.

Bruce Hendrickson of Northland-Crawford Co. said there is some duplication in the individuals' claims and the list from the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society.

He said the SPEC list will be handled as individual claims, like those received through claim offices open for three months after the oil spill from Atlantic Richfield's refinery at Cherry Point, Wash.

Municipal manager Dan Closkey of Surrey said the company is waiting for a statement of labor, equipment and material costs from the municipal cleanup before paying a remaining $11,218. It has already paid $19,594 of the $30,812 claimed by the municipality.

Officials of the city of White Rock said Tuesday they are preparing a final bill of about $2,500 for clean-up costs.

Pensioners Aided

QUESNEL (CP) — Town council has drafted a bylaw which would eliminate sewer user charges and frontage tax for sewer service for old-age pensioners, aged 64 and over. The bylaw will be sent to the municipal affairs department for study and suggestions.

Four-Storey Fall

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Michael Donnelly, 29, of Vancouver, was killed and a Surrey man seriously injured Tuesday when they fell four-storeys after a concrete slab slipped and broke a scaffold on which they were standing at a downtown construction site. Joseph Conner, 42, of Surrey, was in critical condition in hospital Tuesday evening.

Strap Favored

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Nineteen of 22 Kamloops school district principals who replied to a school board survey on corporal punishment said they favored retention of it in the education system.

Board chairman Cliff Branchflower said Tuesday results of the survey have been forwarded to Education Minister Eileen Dailly, recommending corporal punishment be retained in elementary and secondary schools.

Closure Lifted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Forest Service has lifted log salvage closures on Howe Sound and Toba Inlet. The closure, which affected independent log salvagers, was imposed Dec. 4 to allow lumber companies to salvage logs lost during rough weather in the areas.

Winery Interest High

KELOWNA (CP) — John Burns, president of the Association of British Columbia Grape Growers, said Tuesday interest in a proposed grower-owned winery in the Okanagan is reaching a "high pitch." Burns said he expected a good furnout at a special meeting of growers Thursday to consider the proposal.

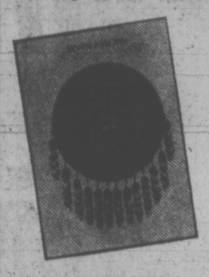
Study Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — A meeting of government, union and forest company groups has resulted in formation of a study committee to investigate labor difficulties in the B.C. forest industry, Gordon Draeseke, president of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C., said Tuesday. The committee will report back in January, he said.

Recount Asked

SURREY (CP) — Jim Karpoff, one of the winners in the Surrey aldermanic election, has asked for a recount. He finished fifth on election night, 50 votes behind Ald. Ed McKitka and 150 votes behind alderman-elect Bill Vogel. Karpoff wants the recount because the difference between fourth and fifth place is a one- or two-year term on council.

A gift book that will take B.C. by Storm



SEVEN ARROWS
by Hyemeyohsts Storm of Oseyoes, B.C.

"In a world trembling with fear . . . here is a book reaching beyond experience and charting paths to maturity . . . truly worth every cent it cost."
—Jan Gould, The Victorian.

SEVEN ARROWS is a unique and moving fictional story about the ancient Ways of the Great Plains People told for the first time in its entirety by an Indian. Hyemeyohsts Storm was taught from childhood, by the elders of his tribe, about the Sun Dance and the Medicine Wheel and, with the aid of a Canada Council grant, he was able to write of these things he learned. This is a beautiful book to read with its rhythm of language, and a beautiful book to look at with 150 photographs over half from the collection of E. S. Curtis taken in the early 1900s, 20 line drawings, and 13 superb eight-colour plates that are symbolic shields painted by Karen Harris of Vancouver—a classic. 388 pages.

FLIGHTS SOAR FOR HOLIDAY TRAVELLERS

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada is increasing the number of extra flights laid on for the holiday period to 500 from the 425 already planned, it was announced Tuesday night.

"Bookings are so strong, they may break our June 30 record of nearly 40,000 passengers in one day," a public relations officer said in an interview.

The company anticipates its busiest days between Dec. 22, 23 and 24 and Jan. 1, 2, and 3.

The bulk of the extra flights will be put on routes serving the Maritime provinces from Toronto and Montreal.

Wardair Pact Outlined

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada may acquire control of Wardair Canada Ltd. under certain terms of an agreement between the two companies, the Canadian transport commission was told Tuesday.

But Ralph Vaughan, an Air Canada vice-preident, said the Crown corporation is not seeking control of Wardair, largest air charter firm in Canada.

The Crown corporation simply wanted "protective provisions" written into an agreement by Air Canada to buy a one-third interest in Wardair.

The transport commission is hearing objections to the sale of the Wardair shares to Air Canada. Opposed to the share purchase agreement are CP Air, Nordair Ltd., Pacific Western Airlines Ltd., Transair Ltd. and the Vancouver Board of Trade.

Air Canada has told the commission that Wardair will continue to operate separately from Air Canada. They would continue to compete in various charter markets around the world.

CP Air has said the combined power of Air Canada and Wardair will unduly restrict competition in the charter field.

OPTION TO BUY

The agreement as outlined by Vaughan would give Air Canada an option to buy shares held by Wardair president Max Ward at the end of 15 years.

Ward now holds about 40 per cent of the company shares after sale of a 33-per-cent interest to Air Canada.

Ward could require Air Canada to buy his shares at the end of 15 years, Vaughan said.

Neither Air Canada or Ward could sell any shares in Wardair within the first three years of the agreement. But, Ward would sell some of his shares after that provided his remaining shares and those of Air Canada amounted to control of the company.

Either party could cancel the agreement at the end of five years or 10 years after one year's notice. The party notified of cancellation of the agreement could buy the shares of the other party.

If Ward died, Air Canada could buy his shares. Vaughan said Air Canada did not want Ward selling control to another company.

"We didn't want Ward selling out and someone we don't know taking control of the company."

Dismissal Angers U.S. Jurors

LOS ANGELES (AP) The Pentagon Papers trial jury was sent home Tuesday and several jurors expressed disgust that they waited four months in vain to judge the case.

As the judge was dismissing them, juror William Abata, a rubber company maintenance man, stood and, in a trembling voice, asked to speak about his fellow jurors. "They feel in the four months their freedom of speech, their freedom to read and see the news have been taken away from them," he said.

U.S. District Judge Matt Byrne decided to dismiss the jury after lengthy legal arguments in the trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo out of concern that the jurors had formed opinions about the case.

Maginot House Sold

METZ, France (Reuter) — A French industrialist has bought a Maginot Line blockhouse where French troops fought for four days after the Franco-German armistice was signed in June of 1940. Metz town officials said he paid $15,000 for it.

Alta. Man Sees B.C. Ports Open

CALGARY (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Tuesday night he is "realistically optimistic British Columbia dockworkers will stay on the job and Prairie grain will keep moving after Parliament's back-to-work order expires Dec. 31.

He told a news conference he has been having "constant discussions" with his Liberal cabinet colleagues about labor problems on the B.C. docks.

Cabinet response to the potential blight on Canadian grain shipments has been strong enough to suggest shipments will carry on, he said.

When the order expires, 3,200 longshoremen will be free to resume a strike which began in August and disrupted early grain shipments. Continuation of the strike after the mediation deadline expires could halt movement of about 17 million bushels of grain.

Students 'Spurred'

REGINA (CP) — A small group of politically-motivated professors instigated the student occupation of the offices of two deans in mid-November at University of Saskatchewan's Regina campus, Dr. Allan Van Cleave, one of the deans involved said Monday.

The students occupied the offices of Dr. Van Cleave, dean of graduate studies, and Dean Edgar Vaughn of the arts and sciences faculty, to support demands for equal representation with faculty on all university boards.

Cold Ride Survivor

WINNIPEG (CP) — John Bozek, who rode the front catwalk of a diesel train from Brandon to Winnipeg in 20-below weather last Friday, was in fair condition Tuesday in hospital.

The 38-year-old Edmonton man suffered frost bite to 50 per cent of his body while riding the freight train and was semi-conscious at the end of the 135-mile trip. He wore normal winter clothing, including a parka and gloves, and was taken to hospital after he was spotted on the catwalk steps when the train arrived in Winnipeg.

Studies Come First

REGINA (CP) — Sociological and environmental studies will be undertaken as preludes to a proposed $170 million hydro-electric development program in Northern Saskatchewan.

The plan, outlined at a news conference Tuesday by three cabinet ministers, involves two new dams on the Churchill River system, one on Fond Du Lac River and an extension to the existing Island Falls development.

Reaction Wanted

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Colleges Commission hopes to get reaction to a two-year report of non-university, post-secondary education in the province in a series of meetings next year.

The report, prepared by R. A. Bosetti, director of planning and research for the colleges commission, makes 93 recommendations aimed at integrating the non-university, post-secondary system.

Lacks French—Fired

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba court of appeal has ruled the inability of a teacher to teach his class in French is just cause for the termination of his employment.

In a ruling Tuesday the court unanimously upheld a decision of an arbitration board set up at the request of Michael Kopchuk, a teacher with seven years employment record with St. Boniface school division No. 4.

SAANICH FURORE OVER FREEZE-UP

When an elderly Saanich widow's water supply froze last Wednesday, the waterworks crew went out of its way to help.

But two emergency lines also froze up when the lady apparently failed to keep the tap running.

Municipal public works committee Tuesday instructed Saanich engineering department to look further into the matter after it was suggested by chairman Ald. William Campbell that the city of Victoria may be involved.

Committee was told a person at 1297 Tolmie — on the Victoria-Saanich boundary — reported a frozen pipe and a crew found service from an old two-inch main near Maplewood had iced up in the 500 feet of domestic connection from the meter.

Because the resident was elderly and widowed, said general superintendent Frank Smith, the crew was asked to render what they could. They installed a temporary plastic connection and told the lady to keep water running so it would not freeze.

She must have turned it off because the pipe froze and she called us again," Smith said. The waterworks crew put in a second 500-foot plastic line and again it froze.

At that point the widow was told the municipality had done all it could for her and suggested she get a plumber to thaw her own line.

Ald Campbell suggested the city may have some responsibility because of recent road work in the area in which soil could have been "scalped" from the domestic water connection, leaving it exposed and more liable to freeze.

B.C. Mediators Get New Teeth

Mediation officers in British Columbia labor-management disputes now have the authority to make recommendations for settlements, Ray MacDonald, director of mediation services branch at the labor department, said Tuesday.

Under the new Mediation Services Act, which replaced the Mediation Commission Act, mediation in industrial relations comes under the labor department rather than the B.C. Mediation Commission, which has been scrapped.

MacDonald said it was "a question of policy" under the old act that mediation officers couldn't actually make recommendations to the parties in a dispute.

The three-man mediation commission, he said, did not want the officers to make recommendations because if there was a hearing at a later stage they may have had to go against the officer's recommendations.

"Now the mediation officer can make recommendations but he has to be very careful," he said. "The new policy gives the officer a little more flexibility."

This policy is similar to that governing conciliation officers prior to the introduction in 1968 of the Mediation Commission Act.

Oak Bay Sets Tight Rules For Chimneys

Oak Bay council's fire committee today took steps to crack down on bricklayers who build faulty chimneys and fireplaces in the municipality.

Those who don't comply with the tightened regulations will have their work torn down and be subject to fines.

On the urging of building inspector Bill Skead and fire chief Bill Pearson the committee called for:

- Detailed lists to be given of work planned to be done before building permits are issued.
- The building inspector to issue check lists on all safety requirements.
- Inspections of the work to be carried out during construction and on completion. No work to be done on a fireplace further than the throat if not passed by the building and fire departments.
- If work advances beyond this stage without inspection the chimney will be torn down.

Pearson stressed the urgency of clamping down on unqualified bricklayers, saying he had brought the matter to the committee's attention because in the past six months his department had discovered three faulty chimneys, either through fires or routine inspections.

A fire in a Kendal home of Dec. 5, he said, was estimated to have caused between $800 and $1,000 damage. It was due to faulty fireplace and chimney installation. There was only a single row of fire brick, with gyproc touching the fire brick instead of a layer of four-inch red brick.

"We have to protect people from those who come in to throw something together and make a fast buck," he said.

The chimney in the Kendal home, he said, had been built in the past year.

Skead said, "It is a matter of leaning on these people. I had to order three fireplaces demolished in one home under construction. They were so badly constructed they were dangerous."

Of another recently built home, Skead said:

"In this brand new home the construction of the chimney was absolutely terrible. We were back there about seven times getting it fixed. We have so-called masons in this municipality who contravene every acceptable rule. They don't know what they're doing."

Pearson said it had "been a real fight" to get legislation demanding that installers of oil burners must be qualified, adding that similar legislation was needed to cover people who build fireplaces and chimneys.

How to Dodge Christmas —Yes, and Have It, Too

Our notes today, which will concern the truly tremendous compulsion of the Christmas habit, began when our friends, the Boggs, of Duncan, dropped in for a visit, positively agog with their plans.

The Boggs will not be exchanging gifts this year. They will have no tree, no turkey, no decorations. All the money they would normally spend on the festive rites will be going into a 10-day holiday on the warm Hawaiian island of Maui. They're not simply escaping from this dreadful weather. They're escaping from Christmas itself.

Did my wife and I exchange secret, knowing smiles, as Jimmy enthused over his plans? You can bet your life we did. We were remembering the time when we'd done much the same sort of thing.

To this day, of course, I disclaim any credit as the originator of the idea. Had it not been that our two teen-aged world-weary daughters vocalized at length on the predictability of the Christmas treadmill and wondered if there might not be an alternative I could not have been inspired to my proposal. But propose it I did.

"Supposing we all forget about Christmas, as such, this year?" I ventured. "Instead, we could drive down to the California desert and lie in the sun beside some motel pool and get brown as berries. It will mean giving up presents and the tree and all that nonsense, but we'll have the best time ever." To my astonishment there was a chorus of assent. My wife, as is her wont, immediately began to make lists.

Everything went beautifully. We drove the coast route and stopped for a lunch of cracked Dungeness crab at Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco. Next evening, at Indio in the desert, we found a charming little motel called Rancho Los Adelfas with a delightful pool. Tall, graceful date palms made a patch of shade as relief, if you wanted it, from the 85 degrees. You could reach out through the kitchenette window and pluck a fresh, growing grapefruit.

Without quite realizing it, of course, we were constantly exposed to the stuff of Christmas. Mindless of the temperature, the radio incessantly gave forth "Walkin' in a Winter Wonderland" or "White Christmas." The streets of nearby Indio were crowded with shoppers and Salvation Army Santa Clauses. The red and green lights blinked off and on in suburbs seen through the lattice of date palms.

We had been in a perfect state of suspended animation for five lazy, sunny days beside the pool when there it was: the day before Christmas. Yet another perfect desert day. Powder blue skies. A high, hot sun glinting on the unlikely snows of the San Jacintos. Yet as we sprawled langorously by the pool that morning, idly watching two inflated plastic swans drift with the zephyr breeze, there was a subtle something different in the air. I was aware from time to time of Meaningful Glances my way.

It was at lunch that my wife finally brought it all out into the open.

"We think," said she, "that we should at least have a small tree as a token concession to Christmas. Just a very small tree?"

A dyke was bursting, I well knew. I should at least have put a finger in it. But the bone-penetrating, unaccustomed sun was my undoing. "Right," I said.

Finding a tree in Indio, California, on the day before Christmas was not easy. In fact it was impossible. There was not a tree to be had in the entire Coachella Valley. We had driven all the way to El Centro, near the Mexican border, before we found a nursery that specialized in imported shrubs and, for $12, bought a potted, ornamental Japanese pine.

It was the saddest, droopiest little tree that ever was, yet my loved ones, having purchased a further $15 worth of decorations, painstakingly festooned it with baubles and bangles.

"If we just had one, just one, present to put beneath it," my wife mused, surveying the poor thing. "One present as a token concession to Christmas?"

Ceremonially, all resistance gone, I peeled off and signed three $25 coupons from my thinning book of travellers' cheques and gave one to each of the females in my life. "Everybody into the car," I cried.

It isn't easy for four people to shop independently in Indio's Woolworths and J. C. Penny stores, but somehow we managed it. On Christmas morn the little Japanese tree was surrounded with gift-wrapped presents, none of which would retail above a dollar. The bulky parcel my wife had smuggled into the car turned out to be a turkey that just fit — but only just — the oven in the motel's kitchen.

The tremendous compulsion of the Christmas habit had prevailed again, just as I'm sure it will on Maui with the Boggs on that fine day.

$200 Prize Awaits All Top Students

New scholarship and bursary regulations, including a straight $200 award for all top-ranking students, will apply to university students as well as high school graduates, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced Tuesday.

Under the new program up to 17 per cent of all students registered in each B.C. university, college or technical institute will receive $200 as an academic award "to do with as they see fit."

The new system, announced earlier for high school graduates, replaces the old practice of awarding students by paying a portion of their fees at specified post-secondary institutions.

"There were inequities in the allocation of scholarships before," explained A. E. Soles, superintendent of post-secondary services.

"A student who had three-quarters of his fees paid at a more expensive institution like UVic got a lot more than someone who had three-quarters of their Camosun College fees paid."

The new award was announced along with changes in eligibility requirements for government bursaries which will make it easier for students to obtain free grants.

The bursary plan, which is co-ordinated with the Canada Student Loans Plan, assists students who would be unable to continue their education without financial aid.

Under the new regulations scholastic ability will no longer be a consideration in granting money, provided the student has successfully completed his year of study.

"Bursaries will be available to anyone who can demonstrate real need," Soles said. "They'll be eligible if they have a clear pass, are on a full program and plan to continue their studies."

Soles said eligibility requirements had been broadened to include granting of bursaries to students studying outside the province.

He said the number of students receiving aid will increase and the amount of individual bursaries may at times exceed the old maximum of $400.

"We want to try to support more students on the basis of need," Soles explained.

"A great many scholarship winners in the past came from socio-economic groups that already have educational advantages, such as libraries in their homes. We're attempting to make it more equitable."

Vegetable Frost Toll: $250,000

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

South Vancouver Island growers suffered a gross loss of $250,000 as the result of last week's heavy frost damage to vegetable crops, Alan Barker, manager-secretary of Island Vegetable Co-operative, said today.

The frost wiped out most of Saanich peninsula's cabbage, turnips, cauliflower and carrot crops.

The loss is expected to result in a sharp rise in vegatable prices — perhaps as much as 50 per cent in local markets.

"The damage was not only confined to the Island, but to the mainland, Washington and Oregon," Barker said.

"This means higher consumer prices for vegetables as they will have to be brought in from California and other southern states."

He described the crop damage as the worst since Nov. 11, 1955, when similar weather conditions destroyed the vegetable crop, as well as many ornamental shrubs and trees.

No Insurance

Growers hardest hit were Geoff Vantreight, Harvey Lim, Tom Michell and Willie Mar.

Vantreight said the crops were not insured.

"It is a gamble," he said. "But we are not the only ones. On the mainland, the losses are as heavy."

Barker said the vegetables were ready for harvesting, but are kept in the ground during November and most of December because of the lack of storage.

"Normally we get our frost later," he said, "and by January when cold weather usually sets in we have our vegetables out of the ground. But this year the frost and cold weather came earlier."

He said if snow had preceded the heavy frost, the carrots and turnip would have been spared. Snow acts as a protective covering.

New 12-Page Forms Tax Minds as Well

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The federal income tax department will be issuing its new income tax forms (it hopes) in February, replacing the four-page short form with a 12-page document.

Along with the forms will come a new slogan: It's Easier Than You Think.

Commented a Victoria accountant: "It is?"

Delivery of the forms will be held up pending passage of income tax legislation in the session of Parliament opening in January.

But Victoria income tax officials estimated that, with speedy passage of the measures, the forms could be out by February.

"February is the target," said S. B. Jenkins of the Victoria office. "Companies have until the end of February to get their T-4 forms to employees and there is no point in having the forms before then."

What if the tax proposals bog down in the splintered House of Commons?

"Well then it would become a new ball game," Jenkins said. "Then they might have to consider delaying the tax deadline beyond the end of April."

He said he was not particularly fond of slogans although in this case there may be a point to the new one.

"There sure is a lot of paper in the new forms and some people tend to panic. But for the average salary or wage earner it won't be much more complicated than before. Most of the pages deal with capital gains and things that apply mainly to businessmen."

His advice when the forms finally arrive: "Read them carefully. Don't panic. There may be a bit more work but not much more for the average person."

He would not hazard a guess as to how long the new forms would take to fill out but said it would be a bit longer than with the old forms.

An accountant estimated it took up to three hours for the average person to complete the old short forms.

The new 12-page tax forms are not yet in general circulation because they are subject to revision as a result of legislation to be passed (or defeated) in January.

The department of revenue's slogan last year at tax time was Play It Again Sam, The Old Way. This was to emphasize the new rules had not yet come into effect.

However, this time Sam's playing a new song and taxpayers might be forgiven if they said: "Aw come on, Sam, the old way — just one more time."

Extra Mail Day

Last minute Christmas mail will have an extra chance to reach its destination with post offices across Canada opening for regular service on Saturday, Dec. 23.

Victoria post office and two postal stations will open from 8.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. the Saturday before Christmas to take care of last-minute postal needs and mail will also be delivered that day.

6 Months for Arson

An 18-year-old man who pleaded guilty to charges of arson, wilful damage, and two counts of setting fires Nov. 20 was sentenced to a total of six months definite and six months indeterminate by Judge William Ostler in provincial court today.

Rhys Allan Thomas, of 811 Leslie, admitted to setting fires in two houses, a garden shed and a car between Aug. 1 and Nov. 14.

The only explanation offered by Thomas was that he wanted to prove he was capable of handling an emergency situation.

"Well Mr. Thomas, the hero turned out to be a wolf in sheep's clothing," said Ostler.

"I recognize some of the motivation for what you did. What you need is to develop your sense of self-respect and self worth," said the Judge.

PENSION BOOST FOR CHRISTMAS

About 110,000 cheques, containing between $4 million and $5 million in government money, will be going out in the next two weeks to recipients of B.C.'s new $200 monthly guaranteed minimum income plan.

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Tuesday he expects the cheques will be in the mail by Dec. 18, which would get some if not all of them to recipients by Christmas.

But a department official said today there had been problems with the plan's computer Tuesday, which could result in a delay. The official said it is hoped the cheques will at least be in the mail by Christmas.

The cheques are going to people over age 65 and to handicapped persons as a result of legislation passed at this fall's special session of the legislature. The December cheques are the first to be mailed out to recipients, which accounts for some of the problems being encountered by department staff.

Stiff Zoning Control Urged

Because developers have shown they can circumvent the city's normal machinery for zoning control, Mayor Peter Pollen says Victoria should adopt a more rigid system to ensure that planning policies, once established, are binding and free of loopholes.

The way to accomplish that, Pollen said Tuesday, would be to establish official community plans for various areas of the city and then register them with the provincial government so that they become "locked in."

Once this is done, a plan cannot be altered in any way without the express consent of the minister of municipal affairs, Pollen said.

Saying he couldn't understand why there had been no encouragement to use such a system in the past, the mayor commented that without it planning is "a rather sophisticated hoax."

"Without it anyone can rezone land even if there is a zoning plan — we've seen it happen time and again in this city," he added.

Winning Candidates Cool To Fund Disclosure Idea

Ald. Tom Christie's suggestion that the three other successful candidates in the Victoria civic election follow his example by revealing the amount and source of their campaign funds got a cool reception today from two of those concerned.

When he issued the invitation Tuesday Christie disclosed that he spent $57.28 on his own campaign, every cent of it from his own pocket.

Ald. Percy Frampton said he had no comment to make in reply to Christie.

"I have checked with the city solicitor and he says you can get your funds wherever you wish, from friends or anywhere else," Frampton said.

"I admit I spent some money, that's true. But I have my own offset printing press and run off material on that, so it might look as if I spent more money than I actually did."

Frampton's campaign included poster, newspaper and radio advertising.

The third successful incumbent, Ald. Alf Hood, who comfortably topped the polls, said he saw no reason why he should react to a suggestion made indirectly by someone else and not directed to him personally.

But Hood added that if he receives any official request to submit details of his election expenses, and source of funds, "I will certainly do so."

Alderman-elect Sam Bawlf could not be reached for comment.

City solicitor Terry O'Grady confirmed Frampton's point that "no disclosure" is required, and said the subject of campaign funding is not even mentioned in the Municipal Act.

USC Brings Her Dream to Life

Florina Ntabeni is a clever, quiet girl from Lesotho, southern Africa, who has her heart set on becoming a doctor.

However, Florina is the youngest in a family of six children and her father, a teacher, makes only about $6.50 a month. On this salary he is struggling to educate his children.

Last year Florina got lucky.

She won a Unitarian Service Committee of Canada scholarship which gives her $166 a year to help pay for fees, midday meals, uniforms and books.

The scholarship program is only one of the programs that the Unitarian Service Committee (USC) has undertaken since its efforts spread to Africa in 1971.

But it has had such success in Lesotho that USC executive director Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova is going to recommend to the board that the Lesotho budget be doubled. And she is anxious to extend the scholarships to another tiny African state, Swaziland.

Dr. Hitschmanova is hoping to have a $70,000 budget for southern Africa this year, to finance 12 projects in Lesotho, 10 in Swaziland and three in Botswana.

One such project provides nourishing midday meals to 5,000 school children in Swaziland, a cup of fortified soup and a portion of boiled crushed maize each.

Another is the Nutrition Rehabilitation Village in Botswana. Here groups of mothers come with their children for a two-week stay to learn about nutrition, hygiene, family planning and child care, while their children are being cared for by trained staff.

In Tutume, Botswana, a medical clinic co-sponsored by the USC serves 50,000 people in an area of 10,000 miles.

Two African nurses shoulder the entire medical responsibility for this area.

The USC now has three children's homes in Swaziland, as well as 21 others in Korea, Hong Kong, India and France. Children in the homes are supported by Canadian foster parents, who pay $168 per child per year.

To support its work in Africa, India, Bangladesh, Korea and other areas, the USC is hoping to raise $1 million in funds and $500,000 in gifts-in-kind in its 28th annual campaign, which ends Christmas Day.

This year's special project is to build houses for refugees in Bangladesh. The USC has pledged to finish 1,000 of these houses with matted bamboo walls and corrugated iron roofs by Christmas.

The USC campaigns in Victoria began in 1953. Last year $16,641 was collected in the Milk for Bangladesh campaign, the highest total since the annual appeals began here.

All donations to this year's Housing for Bangladesh campaign may be sent to P.O. Box 300, Victoria, or taken to any Bank of Nova Scotia. Official receipts will be sent from Unitarian Service Committee headquarters in Ottawa.

Hawks on Top Perch Even Without Hull

By The Canadian Press

Inconsistency has dogged Chicago Black Hawks this season, their first in 15 years without the big shooter, Bobby Hull.

Jim Pappin, a workmanlike performer of recent Black Hawk years, pins the Chicago problems on loss of the Golden Jet to the World Hockey Association.

Coach Billy Reay looks on Hull's departure as an opportunity for another star to take his place. Reay goes so far as to say that it was the line of Pappin, Dennis Hull and Pit Martin that pulled the Hawks to the top of the National Hockey League's West Division last year.

The in-and-out Black Hawks of 1972-73 finally opened some space in their bid to repeat as division titlists Tuesday night by ripping Vancouver Canucks 5-1.

It moved Chicago three points ahead of Minnesota North Stars in the battle for first in the West and left the Canucks, sixth in the East, with 20 points, 15 out of fourth spot and a playoff berth.

In the only other game Tuesday, St. Louis Blues needed Fran Huck's late goal to salvage a 4-4 tie with the Islanders at New York.

Stan Mikita, laboring with back injuries and playing in Bobby Hull's shadow for most of his NHL career, scored twice to pace the Black Hawks at Vancouver.

The Canucks never posed a serious threat after Dennis Hull's 17th of the season 16 seconds into the second period gave Chicago a 3-0 lead.

"A lot of people are asking why we're not winning as much this year," Pappin said recently. "Well, the reason is that we really miss Bobby Hull."

Pappin explained that opposition forwards concentrated so much on keeping Hull from scoring that it took the pressure of his team-mates for "30 to 35 minutes a game."

There also is a problem in goal where the Black Hawks have already given up 75 goals after 28 games. After 30 games last season, the goaltending tandem of Tony Esposito and Gary Smith had allowed just 53 goals.

Barry Wilkins averted the shutout, beating Esposito at 11:55 of the middle period.

At New York, with 9,437 in the stands, the Islanders spotted St. Louis a 3-1 lead early in the second then rebounded on goals by Germain Gagnon, Dave Hudson and Craig Cameron to take a 4-3 lead at 5:47 of the third period.

The hustling Bruins, who take on the potentially high-scoring Sabres at Buffalo tonight, aren't looking for a push-over.

Buffalo, in fourth place, is only four points behind Boston and the Rangers and has yet to be beaten in Buffalo Auditorium this season.

"We really are faced with two of the biggest games of the season back-to-back," said Boston defenceman Don Awrey as the Bruins departed for Buffalo.

"Buffalo is going good. We need a win there and then we come right back and play the Rangers at home Thursday night."

'Free to Go' Says Ronnie

"I'm free to go," Ron Lancaster commented today after saying Tuesday at Regina that he doesn't "put much stock" in denials by Saskatchewan Roughrider officials that the veteran quarterback is on the Canadian Football League trading block.

"I haven't been contacted by anyone," said the American-born Lancaster, who has just completed his 12th CFL season and his 10th at Regina, "but these rumors usually have some basis."

Does the man who is now classified as a non-import and holds just about every passing record in the CFL book want to leave the Roughies?

"Maybe deep down I do. It wouldn't really upset me.

"I think I could make more money with another team and that has to be factor now that I'm unemployed. I'm free now to go anywhere I want."

That move became less likely last weekend when the Lions boosted their supply of quarterbacks to four by signing Karl Douglas, who was cut this year by Baltimore Colts.

Another report has Ron going to Montreal, but that shift might depend on who takes over in place of deposed head coach Sam Etcheverry. The Alouettes apparently are interested in John Michels, an assistant-coach with Minnesota Vikings for the past six years.

Michels, of course, denies an official approach from Montreal but, as Lancaster says, "rumors usually have some basis."

Also on the football front, CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Tuesday at Ottawa that none of the nine Canadian pro clubs wants to expand to the United States "for the sake of expansion or to make a quick buck."

Gaudaur said the league this year turned down a bid from New York that would have meant a $2-million entrance fee "and untold dollars" in other benefits, including television.

He said expansion talks arose only because of long-range apprehension over rising costs and the possibility that new stadiums being built might be occupied by a rival team from a U.S. league.

Also on Tuesday, the chief of security for the National Football League commented at Atlanta that legalized betting on major-league sports "would completely destroy the nature of our sports interest.

"Right now, the way it is, people are hoping for their team to win the game," John J. Danahy said. "But if we had legalized betting in sports, they'd be booing if their team was winning by too many points."

Stakes were high in a pair of curling finals Tuesday night in Edmonton, where rinks skipped by Donna Clark of Burnaby and Harold Worth of Delisle, Sask., collected the gaudiest baubles.

Miss Clark skipped her foursome to a 11-5 victory over Edmonton's Mailyn Johnston to win the Tournament of Pearls title, worth $1,200 in pearls to the Burnaby quartet.

Worth captured his third Canadian open car bonspiel with a last-rock 8-6 triumph over Alberta champion Mel Watchorn. Worth's rink had previously won new cars in a pair of Saskatchewan bonspiels.

Hotelmen Move Up

Hotel Douglas took a 32-16 lead by half time and then went on to trip YMCA 68-50 in a Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League tussle Tuesday night at Cedar Hill Junior High School.

Victory boosted Hotelmen back into a tie for first place with London Boxing Club.

Bob Hucul paced Hotelmen with 20 points while Dave Virtanen and Barry Turner each added 12. Jim Cunningham, the regular YMCA point leader, was held to 13 points.

Foot Surgery For Slugger

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Harmon Killebrew, Minnesota Twins first baseman, entered hospital Tuesday for surgery today on his right foot.

A Twins' spokesman said surgeons would remove a benign bone lesion from Killebrew's big toe and also correct a contracture of the second toe on the foot.

Boxers Tame Lions

London Boxing Club juniors defeated Oak Bay Lions juveniles 85-75 in an exhibition boys' basketball game Tuesday night at Central Junior High School.

Hockey Coach's Home Is Wherever He Finds It

bill walker

If Johnny Wilson goes, that will make it 18 in less than three years, won't it?

Wilson is the coach of the Detroit Red Wings (that could be "was" before this gets into print), and if he is told to find work elsewhere, what else is new in the NHL?

Yes, since the expansion of 1970, that was the second one, there have been 17 coaching changes, and Wilson would make it an even 18. And he isn't on very solid ice because the Wings have done an el foldo after an impressive start. And 18 changes? Gee, that's more than the number of teams in the league, isn't it? It's difficult to keep track these days.

Of course, a couple of clubs have cheated. They've changed more than once, and that isn't fair to the coaches' union. Perhaps that's why when Fred Glover got back in, after twice being pushed out, he moved up to the managerial chair. If any decisions were to be made, he'd make them. Now he has three jobs at Oakland to show for it, and his just has to be the strangest case of all, if Al Arbour's isn't.

It wasn't too long ago that Glover was relieved of his duties as coach of the California Seals. That was at the beginning of the 1971 season, and Vic Stasuik, who had left Philadelphia, not of his own volition, got Glover's job.

. . . And All the Way Back Again

But Glover wasn't completely bereft of friends, and down in Los Angeles, GM Larry Regan was making one of his many changes. He was replacing himself. He was out as coach, and Glover was hired. But only for one year. When summer came, Glover was unemployed and former player Bob Pulford had the coaching position with the Kings.

Suddenly, however, Glover surfaced again, back at Oakland. He now was executive vice-president. Stasiuk had been fired by owner Charles O. Finley, former general manager Garry Young was coach, and soon to be out of work as well.

Sure enough, when the Seals, who had lost more players to the World Hockey Association than any other club, started off on a losing note, Young threw in the towel. Glover picked it up, installed himself as coach — again, to go with his other duties of general manager and executive vice-president. At least, that's the way it was yesterday.

Al Arbour has a similar case history. Just ask Scotty Bowman, who took over from Al McNeill, who took over from Claude Ruel at Montreal. Because before Bowman left St. Louis he was the GM, and when he decided to chuck coaching, he put Arbour in charge.

That, originally, was in 1970. But Arbour couldn't hack it, and before that season was over, Bowman was in again. Then when Bowman left town, for good, Arbour moved up to assistant GM, and Sid Abel (remember him?) was named coach.

Perhaps Even 'Coach of the Year'

Abel lasted until about the first of November of 1971, and was replaced by Bill McCreary. This didn't seem to work, either, and on Christmas Day, guess who was back? Al Arbour.

A few weeks ago, Arbour was desk-bound again, and defenceman Jean Guy Talbot was the mastermind at St. Louis. He still is.

Detroit has had its troubles before now, and before Wilson. After Abel, it was Ned Harkness, then Doug Barkley. Philadelphia got Fred Shero when Stasiuk exited. Hal Laycoe was coaching the Canucks before Stasiuk arrived, and Buffalo had the old master Punch Imlach calling the shots before Joe Crozier came on to run up that amazing home streak the Sabres enjoy.

Granted, Punch had a health problem. But the change was made. Now, Crozier might turn out to be coach of the year.

So who' left? Six, that's all.

There's Billy Reay at Chicago. He's the dean of all incumbents with eight years at the helm of the Hawks. Tom Johnson at Boston has a Stanley Cup to show as his badge of office. Emile Francis wears two hats at New York, and has a solid club. Jack Gordon at Minnesota has a consistent record; and Red Kelly at Pittsburgh and John McLellan at Toronto appear safe for the moment, although McLellan needed help from King Clancy last year.

But don't count on it, eh, Johnny . . . or Vic . . . or Fred . . . or Al . . . or . . . ?

Gulls Surge To Top

Juan de Fuca Gulls rapped in three quick goals during the third period Tuesday to ensure a 6-1 victory over Racquet Club Kings and sole possession of first place in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Gulls, ahead 1-0 after the first period but deadlocked 1-1 after the second, scored the tallies to go ahead within a span of 58 seconds — at 2:17, 2:35 and 3:15.

Ed Nichols and Brian McLachlan each scored twice to pace Gulls while singles were added by Barry Hilton and Dave Archibald. Perry Carrigan scored for Kings.

In the other game, Esquimalt A and W defeated Fuller's Lake Flyers 7-3 to stretch an unbeaten streak to four games.

Rick Anglin made 32 stops for Flyers while Tom McEvey turned aside 22 shots for Esquimalt.

Phils' Hurler Statistical Star

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Steve Carlton, pitching for Philadelphia Phillies, who had the league's worst won-lost record, led National League pitchers in eight categories, official statistics released today showed.

The 27-year-old left-hander had a 27-10 record for the most victories, despite playing for a team that finished at 59-97.

Carlton's earned-run average, of 1.98 shaded Cincinnati Reds' right-hander Gary Nolan, 15-5, who had 1.99. He started the most games, 41; completed the most, 30; and pitched the most innings, 346.

Carlton faced the most batters, 1,351; allowed the most hits, 257; and had the most strikeouts, 310. Unbeaten from June 7 through Aug. 17, his 15-game winning string was the league's longest.

Right-hander Don Sutton, in his seventh season with Los Angeles Dodgers, had the most shutouts — nine to Carlton's eight.

Clay Carroll, Cincinnati righthander, set a major league record with 37 saves. Wayne Granger established the old mark of 35 in 1970 with the Reds. Carroll and Mike Marshall of Montreal Expos appeared in the most games, 65 each.

Both Coaches Moaning After Tie

MONTREAL (CP) — The theme was familiar.

After the bolstered Montreal Red, White and Blue battled to a 3-3 tie against Moscow Selects in an exhibition hockey game Tuesday night, Soviet coach Boris Mayorov complained about the Montreal team's rough and aggressive play.

"The game was very rough," Mayorov said in a post-game news conference.

"We came here to play hockey not to fight. Hockey is a game of brains, not boxing and wrestling.

"This game was the toughest we have played thus far. Maybe it was because this team was stronger and rougher."

Mayorov said three Russian players were hurt in the game, one of them seriously. Eugeny Kotlov took a seven-stitch cut on the back of the head in the first period after defenceman Larry Robinson, who normally plays with Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League.

"First he body-checked Kotlov," Mayorov said, "then he cross-checked him. Kotlov did not know where he was for a while after he left the ice."

Mayorov did not complain about the refereeing of Marcel Vaillancourt, but Montreal coach Roger Bedard did.

"How many times did they hook and spear right in front of Vaillancourt?" Bedard stormed, when asked if he felt the referee should have assessed more penalties.

Bedard has praise for the junior and college players that made up the team but hinted he was not overly impressed with the Voyageur forward line of Yvon Lambert, Dave Gardner and Randy Rota, despite the fact they accounted for two of three Montreal goals including the tying marker with 1:07 left in the final period.

"The university players were very good," Bedard said. "Francois Ouimet played well on defence and Mark Shewchuk is a pretty smart hockey player. He really played well and wasn't afraid to throw his weight around."

Rota scored the tying marker and Lambert scored another Montreal goal. Andre St. Laurent of the junior team scored the other goal for the Canadians.

Eugeny Karachin, Vladimir Popov and Nikolay Shorin were the Russian marksmen.

The teams played scoreless hockey in the first period and Russia led 3-2 after 40 minutes.

The Selects had previously beaten Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A series 3-2 and trimmed an Ontario Senior all-star team 8-2 in their two previous Canadian outings.

Draw Was Last Straw

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Mike Quarry bolted out of the ring and threatened to retire Tuesday night after being held to a 10-round draw by Frankie Evans, the Texas light-heavy-weight champion.

"I've put in my career," said Quarry, 21, of Bakersfield, Calif., who broke into sobs in his locker room after the bout. "I'm going to retire. Boxing is too dirty for me. I'm going back to school."

Quarry, who weighed 181½, four pounds more than Evans, said he thought he had won every round as he sought his 36th victory. His only loss was to Bob Foster in a light heavy-weight championship fight last June. He had never drawn before.

The referee, Eddie Eckert, scored it a 46-46 draw. When judge Barry Pearlman scored it 47-45 Evans, Quarry stormed out of the ring, before the 48-46 Quarry decision by judge Bunny Lovett was announced.

Victoria Skater Rates Gold Medal for Desire

DALE GORCAK
. . . overcomes handicap

Dale Gorcak never quite made it to the winner's dias, but his second-place showing in the pre-novice men's singles competition at the British Columbia figure skating championships last weekend has to rate as a gold medal achievement.

Technically, there were better skaters than Gorcak anl more important events than the pre-novice singles. But in the departments of fortitude and desire, the 18-year-old Racquet Club skater emerges as a champion to be respected.

Born with deformities in both feet, Dale once was informed he would never be able to skate properly. Calf muscles were non-existant and deformed feet created great fitting problems.

As a 13-year-old, he thought he "would enjoy skating" after attending an ice show. Dale joined the Victoria Figure Skating Club and began skating competitively the following year.

Custom-made boots, extra-expensive because they could not be resold once he outgrew them, helped solve the fitting problem.

He overcame his early awkwardness on the ice with hour upon hour of practising. The constant practice also provided a beneficial therapy for his legs. Today, Dale strides, spirals and jumps with a confidence and ease that hides his physical handicap.

"You really have to admire Dale," says professional Jean Westwood, an authority on overcoming handicaps. Jean still was walking with the aid of a crutch, recovering from an automobile accident, when she skated to her first world dance championship in 1951.

Effort and dedication produced Gorcak's first big dividen in the 1971 B.C. championships when he teamed with Maralee Bray to share the novice mixed pairs title.

Success notwithstanding, there is an even greater quality that stamps the dark-haired skater as one of the most popular individuals among Victoria's skaters.

A member of both Racquet and Victoria clubs, he is totally involved with club activities, averaging more than three hours a day on the ice. Involvement includes assisting young skaters and beginners.

Those efforts have been recognized. Two years ago, Dale and Karen Lawson shared a coveted Victoria club trophy awarded to the skater contributing the most in the way of club spirit. The citizenship award went to Gorcak again last year.

Crown Zellerbach Gates Still Spoil Access Scene

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Crown Zellarbach's Nanaimo Lakes operation continues to be a blight on an access picture which, although far from perfect, is getting better year-by-year . . . Gates are being locked in times of even marginal fire hazard during peak recreational periods . . . Other "lockouts" occur while slash burning is in progress, despite the fact that only a small area is directly affected by the burning . . . This latter closure also, unhappily, sometimes coincides with the early part of the hunting season . . . and when the gates are open for weekend-only access, they are closed unrealistically early . . . Anglers miss out on the evening "bite" because they have to be out of the area before 5 p.m. . . . It's about time Crown Zellarbach learned the facts of life . . . Other timber companies are waking up.

Along the same theme is a complaint about antiquated signs on several Vancouver Island logging operations . . . "Active logging" signs, which designate areas where there is no access, should be removed right after the operation on that particular branch road ceases . . . Local people disregard the signs after a time but newcomers often turn back . . . In other cases, directional signs are poorly maintained or non-existent . . . Again, it's a case of devil take the hindmost.

Bud Blackburn, the former owner of Angler's Anchorage Marina, sends greetings from sunny Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, where he is staying . . . Bud passes along a tip that fishing is "slow" in his area . . . "Mostly sail fish. Up to 148 pounds" . . . In addition to the fantastic weather, Bud notes that his little bit of paradise features derbies with less entrants but larger prizes than in B.C. . . . This set us to wondering what the entrance fee must be?

Good news for skiers in the audience . . . Something for free, except for the postage required to send a letter . . . Toko Wax of Switzerland is offering an introductory package of wax, applicator and a booklet on how to wax your skis . . . Almost 98 per cent of all professional and top amateur skiers coat the bottom of their skis with wax suitable to the type of snow encountered at the time they set out . . . Advantages of waxing are many (although we must admit to being too lazy before now to try it ourselves) — faster sliding, no flutter, easier control, smoother transition between snow types and protection of the undersurfaces . . . The address for the free sample kit is: Toko Wax, Department NWS, P.O. Box 3836, San Francisco, California 94119, U.S.SA.

Word comes in from headquarters in Montreal that members of the Canadian Ski Patrol System will soon be sporting a new insignia on their rust-colored jackets and other equipment . . . The symbol, replacing the familiar crosspatch, will consist of a gold cross on a blue maple leaf . . . This bit of Canadianization should be complete by 1975.

Talk about the winds of change . . . Seattle City Light is currently looking for an environmentalist "with at least a bachelor's degree in the biological or physical sciences" . . . Maybe they should have hired one before the Skagit Valley controversy came up.

Although rifle, pistol and shotgun competitions at the Olympic Games in Munich did not attract as much attention in the media as the glamor sports, this doesn't indicate their actual popularity . . . Shooting had the second largest number of individual entries and countries represented of all sports.

We'll be interested in what the new provincial government comes up with in its investigation of the land-swap deal involving acquisition of park land at Cape Scott . . . Snow has probably sealed off the area of Strathcona Park where the logging company gained cutting rights in exchange for the Cape Scott land . . . So this might be an opportune time to do something about it before further damage is done.

WHA Paves the Way For Ignored Junior

By The Canadian Press

The World Hockey Association has opened the way for many young Canadians to earn a living at something they do best—play hockey.

Andre Gaudette had more strikes against him than baseball's legendary Mighty Casey when he graduated from Montreal Junior Canadiens in 1968.

Not only was there a bumper crop of juniors on the Junior Canadiens that year, the elite were being culled elsewhere.

The biggest drawback Gaudette found was that National Hockey League clubs were reluctant to overlook his size—5-foot-6 and 160 pounds.

The native of Sherbrooke, Que., toiled in the American Hockey League—three years with Quebec Aces and one with Richmond Robins in the Philadelphia Flyers chain—before his chance came with the WHA.

Tuesday night, Gaudette had his biggest night in the big time, scoring three goals to lead Quebec Les Nordiques to a 5-2 win over Philadelphia Blazers.

Elsewhere it was Houston Aeros 6, Alberta Oilers 4; Minnesota Fighting Saints 3, Los Angeles Sharks 3.

The Oilers and Aeros meet again tonight at Houston while Quebec visits New York Raiders, Winnipeg Jets are in Philadelphia with the Blazers and Chicago Cougars entertain New England Whalers.

Gaudette, who celebrates his 25th birthday Saturday, scored a goal in each period to bring his season's total to 10.

Frank Golembrosky, called up recently from Grand Falls Cataracts of the Newfoundland Senior league, and Alain (Boom Boom) Caron also scored for Quebec.

Hatters Hop to the Top

By The Canadian Press

Medicine Hat Tigers jumped past New Westminster Bruins into first place in the western division of the Western Canada Hockey League Tuesday night with a 9-4 victory over the Bruins.

Saskatoon Blades moved one point away from top spot in the east with a 4-2 win over tail-end Winnipeg Jets and Flin Flon Bombers tightened their hold on third place in the east with a 5-1 victory over the western division fourth-place club, Calgary Centennials in other Tuesday games.

Ed Humphreys stopped 35 shots for the Blades while Frank Turnbull made 31 saves for the Jets.

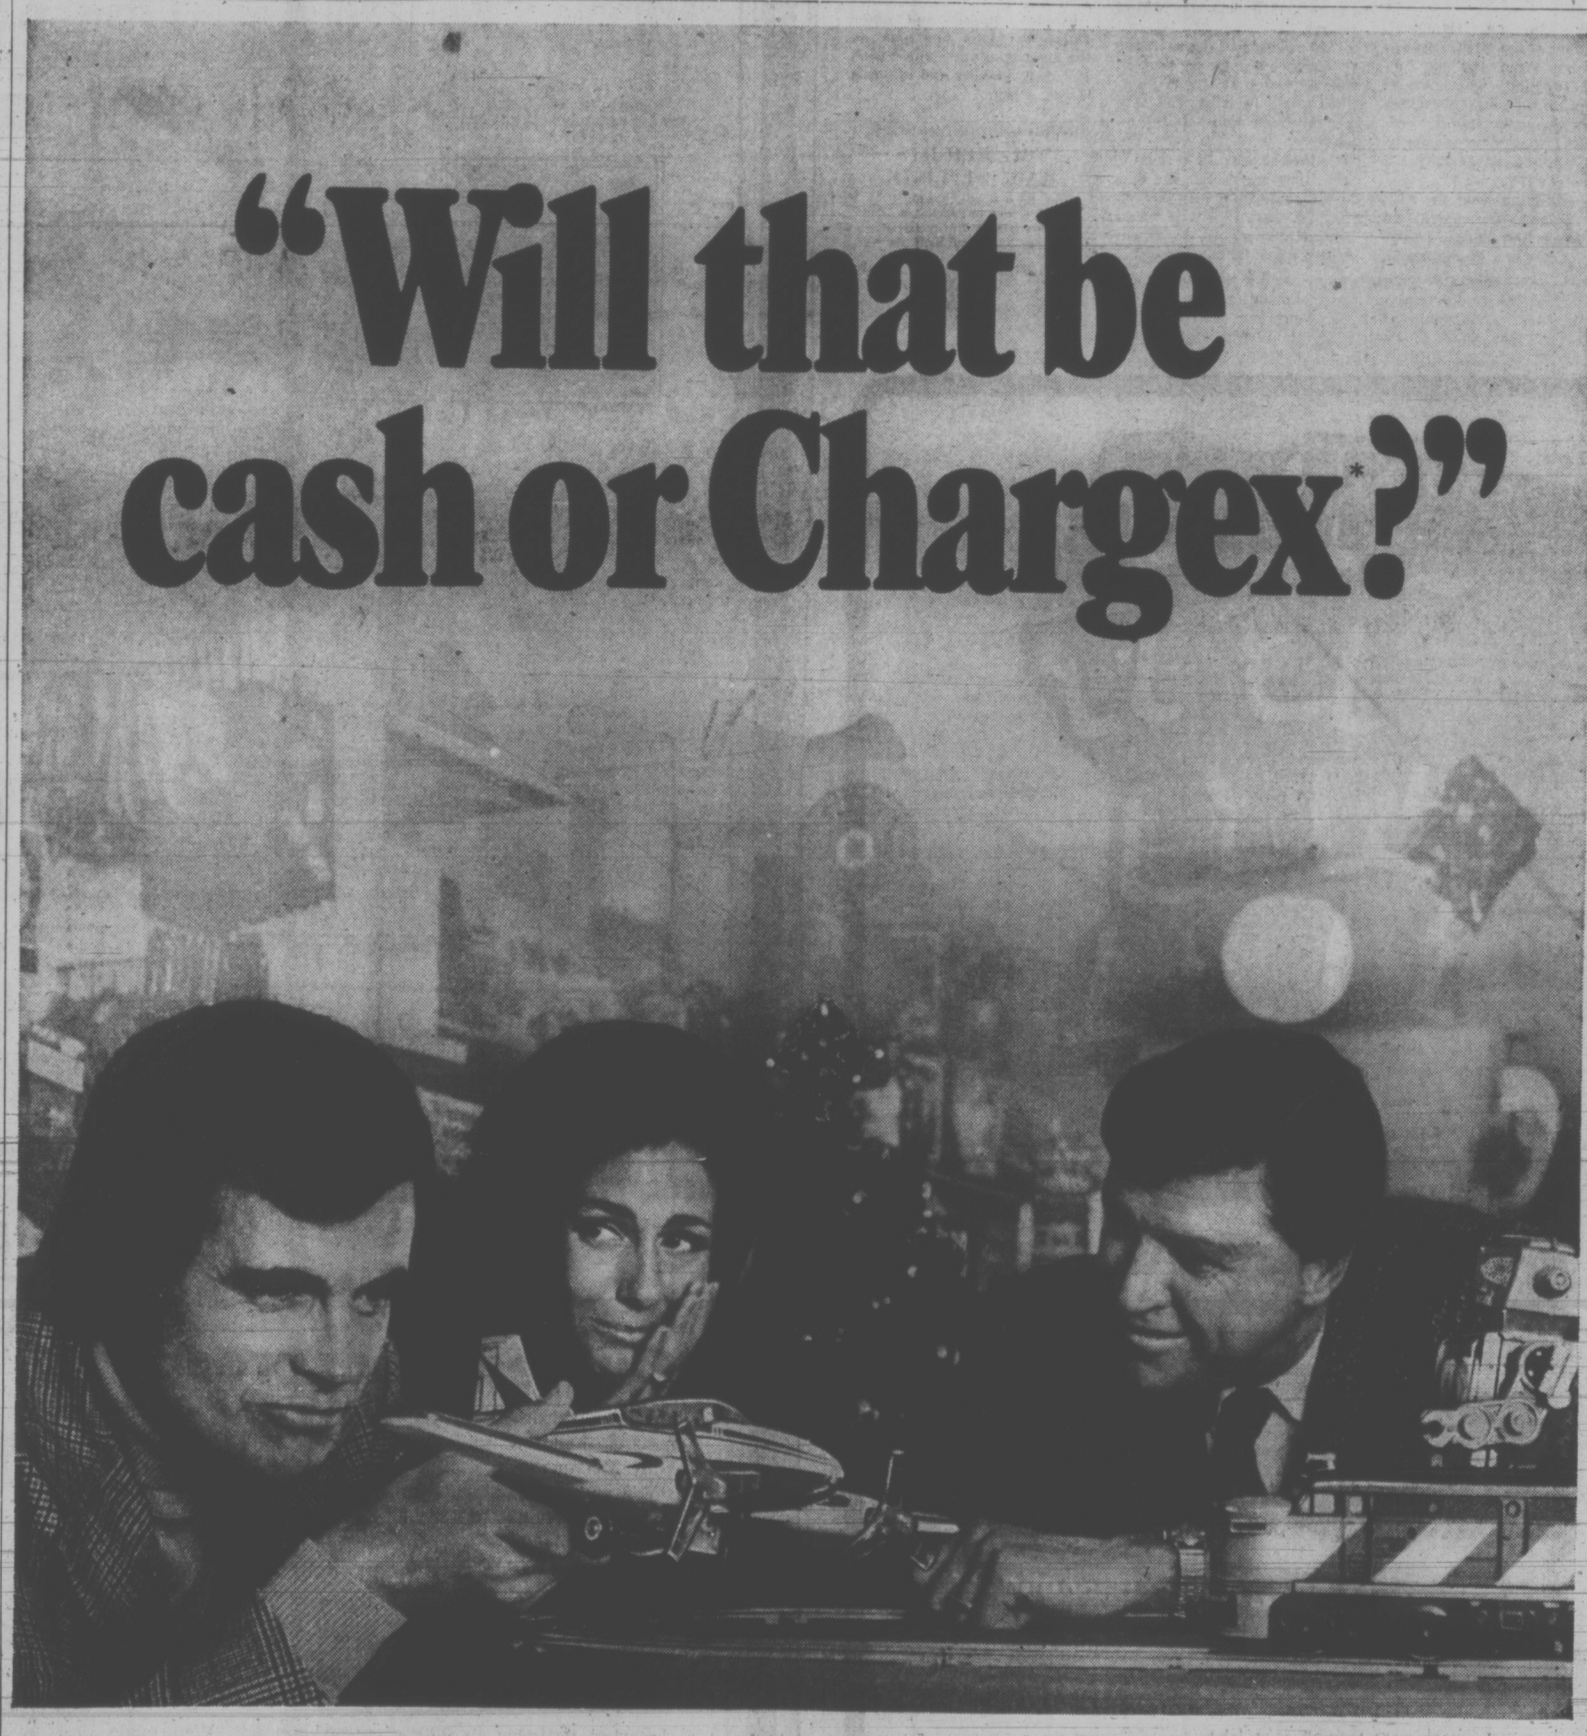
"Will that be cash or Chargex*?"



When you're Christmas shopping for children, it almost takes you back to being one yourself. That's part of the fun. And Christmas shopping is so simple with your Chargex Card. It's as good as cash at thousands of stores, for almost every gift imaginable.

Your Chargex Card is also more convenient to carry than cash, and it doesn't have to cost you one cent more to use. You receive one organized monthly statement and if you pay for your purchases within 25 days of your billing date you avoid any interest or carrying charges whatsoever. Or if it's more convenient, use the extended payment plan.

If you still don't have a Chargex Card, pick up an application wherever you see the blue, white and gold Chargex symbol. (You don't have to bank at a Chargex bank to obtain a Chargex Card).

Junior Clubs Join Hockey's Jet Set

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is looking to the junior level as the "next most exciting place that international hockey is going to be played," CHA President Joe Kryczka said Tuesday.

Kryczka told a news conference via telephone from his Calgary office that Czechoslovakia is planning a world junior hockey championship in 1974 "and we have had some preliminary discussion within our organization about perhaps hosting such a championship in 1975."

"The beauty of that area is that you don't have to worry about who's a professional and who is not a professional because the junior ages throughout the international federations are all the same now."

The news conference was called to announce details of an international tournament to be staged in Ontario starting Dec. 26. Kryczka was unable to attend but joined in a question-and-answer session with reporters via a special telephone hookup.

Kryczka's statement regarding junior competition came in reply to a question on whether the CAHA was currently trying to initiate further series against the Soviets or Czechs.

"If we're talking about a series involving professional teams or a team of the nature of the Team Canada organization, my answer is no.

"We will continue to promote exchanges between the European federations and the CAHA with our club teams in the senior category.

"We're sending our Memorial Cup junior winners to Czechoslovakia in May for a seven-game exhibition series to explore the junior area because we feel that the next most exciting place that international hockey is going to be played is on the junior level."

Asked about the possibility of Canada ever re-entering the world championships, he said this was an area that is still open.

Canada withdrew from world championship play in 1970 when it was not allowed to use professionals on its team.

"That matter will come up for further discussion during the world championships in Moscow in March," said Kryczka.

It's All Talk, No Decisions

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiations between the National Hockey League and representatives of the Soviet Union's hockey federation for an international series between teams from the two groups next season continued here Tuesday.

But Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, said following a three and one half hour meeting with Andrei Starovoitov, general secretary of the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation, that "no decisions were arrived at" during the session.

Also on hand from the NHL were Bruce Norris, president of Detroit Red Wings, Walter Bush, president of Minnesota North Stars, Detroit vice-president John Zeigler, and Brian O'Neill, executive-director of the NHL.

Campbell said the two sides continued exploration of the proposal for further competition "between members teams of their respective organizations during the 1973-74 season."

"No decisions were reached," he said. "But it was agreed that the negotiations would be continued at a mutually convenient time and place."

Following the NHL governors' meeting in Chicago earlier this month, it was learned that the proposed series would include six games in North America and four in Russia.

TOTEMS GET BCAHA GRANT

VANCOUVER — The British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association, at a weekend meeting, voted a grant of $2,000 to the B.C. Totems.

Totems, a team composed of Western International Hockey League players and coached by Norm Johnson, are leaving Christmas Day for a European tour starting with a game on Dec. 28 in Finland.

Sweden, Russia and other European clubs are also on the agenda of the team. There will be 25 players and officials in the group.

Soccer Plans Probe

Canadian Soccer Association officials soon will probe the summer-time dispute between the Premier League and B.C. Soccer Commission.

Dave Fryatt, a former president and now life member of the national body, will head a committee to look into both sides of the issue and come to a decision in the shortest possible time — although the matter is not expected to be concluded before the New Year.

Frank Bain, who has served with both the BCSC and CSA, and Merv Ferguson, who is involved in many amateur sports, have been selected by Fryatt to sit on the committee.

The dispute came to a head Oct. 6 when the commission suspended the league for non-payment of transfer fees. An emergency CSA meeting in Calgary the following weekend suggested that the two parties try to settle the issue.

When the league continued to operate despite the suspension, the commission imposed a series of fines and additional suspensions on Oct. 16. The league was fined $1,000; league executive members were suspended for five years; teams were find $300 each; team managers, coaches and officers were suspended for three years while players and trainers who continued in the playoffs were suspended for a minimum of 12 months.

Alberta Declines Visit by Koreans

OTTAWA (CP) — South Korea's Olympic men's volleyball team has cancelled its scheduled visit to Calgary and Edmonton because the Alberta Volleyball Association won't help defray travel costs, an official of the Canadian Volleyball Association said here Tuesday.

The South Korean men's and women's volleyball teams are at present touring the U.S. The teams planned to play in British Columbia and Alberta if their $4,000 fare for travel from Los Angeles to Canada was picked up by the host associations.

The B.C. group agreed but the Alberta association declined, said the CBA official. The Korean teams will play in Vancouver Dec. 17, Nanaimo Dec. 18 and Chilliwack Dec. 19.

This Doctor's Problem People, Not Patients

ROCKFORD, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Lloyd Miller has more trouble with people than the animals he deals with.

A case in point:

A frantic woman banged on his door and there was a bleeding dog cradled in her arms.

The part collie was whimpering and his paws and legs were torn and mangled.

Dr. Miller abandoned his dinner and took the dog in.

"She told me her husband had tied the family pet to the car and she accidentally drove off a few blocks before she heard it," he said.

"I didn't ask for more details."

Dr. Miller injected a painkilling drug and when he started to operate, he asked his assistant, his daughter Marlene, to leave when she started to cry.

The heave of life in the dog's chest stopped and Dr. Miller gave adrenalin and blew air into the dog's lungs.

Two minutes later, the heaving was back.

Dr. Miller sewed up the bleeding limbs. The dog recovered.

WORKS HARD

Dr. Miller does not lose many patients and the veterinarian in this little community just south of Owen Sound is loved and respected by his clientele.

"Rural practice is hard work and the overhead is big when a vet starting out can expect to earn about $12,000," said the 37-year-old 1962 graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College at Guelph.

Besides his dedication to animal care, he has 40 Herefords and a 63-acre farm.

But the people know he's more than a farmer.

Since returning from a two-year course at the University of Maryland, his green radio-dispatched truck has been a familiar sight to farmers.

Dr. Miller and his three veterinarian associates operate in a $75,000 clinic at Rockford.

COVERS AREA

The new clinic has an 85-foot radio tower that works with two-way control and with three trucks, the clinic has a good working radius of 25 miles.

"All of this has given us a chance to get into preventive medicine for the first time," said Dr. Miller.

That program alone now has 12 herds registered for regular visits to check udder infections and pregnancy tests.

But Mr. Miller spends most of his time answering house calls.

On the way home one night —supper was already in the oven—he got an emergency call from a farmer who had a cow with birth problems for more than a week.

"Why do they always wait until the weekend to call a vet?" he asked under his breath.

When he got there, he inserted his arm into the cow's birth canal and strained to pull the calf, about to be born, backwards.

After awhile, he inserted a small chain around the calf's neck and winched it out.

UIC Benefits Rise 165% in 12 Months

OTTAWA (CP) — Benefits paid to unemployed persons under the Unemployment Insurance Act were 165 per cent higher in October than in the same month last year. The number of those claiming benefits was 63 per cent greater than a year ago.

Changes in unemployment insurance laws last January reduced the waiting period before benefits can start and increased the level of payments.

Benefits paid in October increased to $138 million compared with $52 million in October, 1971. They were eight per cent higher than the $128 million paid out in September this year.

At the end of October 709,000 claimants were registered for unemployment insurance compared with 436,000 in October last year. The monthly rise was two per cent from the 692,000 registered in September this year.

New and renewal claims for insurance totalled 199,000 in October, up 15 per cent from the previous month and 21 per cent from October, 1971.

Dunlop Faces Global Strike

LONDON (AP) — Union delegates from 15 countries, including two communist nations, said Tuesday they are prepared to tie up the giant Dunlop - Pirelli Rubber Co. in the world's first global strike.

Delegates came from Canada and 14 European countries — Austria, Belgium, France, West Germany, Britain, Italy, Ireland, The Netherlands, Norway, Romania, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Yugoslavia.

The announcement came during a meeting of union leaders to discuss joint action on a world scale against two other multi-national companies, the French Michelin Tire Co. and the Royal Dutch Shell Oil Co.

The delegates have been meeting in London since Sunday under the auspices of the International Federation of Chemical and General Workers Unions. The federation has been active for several years in promoting international action by unions to meet the threat they see from the growing number of multi-national corporations.

The delegates said in a statement that industrial action against Dunlop-Pirelli, including a strike or a ban on overtime and plant-by-plant demonstrations by employees, will be ordered if the company refuses to discuss measures to safeguard the interests of its workers.

The firm has so far refused to meet delegates representing its personnel on a world scale.

There have been international strikes in the past where workers in one country have supported employees of the same firm in another, but Tuesday's announcement was the first hint of a global tie-up.

In New Glasgow, N.S., a Michelin official said he did not expect the talk of multi-national strikes to have any effect on the Michelin Tire Corp. plants at nearby Granton and at Bridgewater, N.S.

The official said that, as far as he knows, the international union has not had any activities in the Nova Scotia plants.

"Our employees have seen fit not to organize," he said.

He said the Nova Scotia plants operate independently of the other Michelin plants around the world.

Trudeaus' Christmas In B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal political party leaders and some of the cabinet are packing their bags and Christmas stockings for holiday celebrations in warmer climes than the federal capital.

Justin Trudeau, whose birthday is Christmas Day, will be with his grandmother in Vancouver while his father and mother ski and soak up West Coast sunshine.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and his family will spend the holiday on the Caribbean Island of Guadaloupe; New Democrat Leader David Lewis goes to Britain and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette goes home to Rouyn, Que.

Gov.-Gen. and Mrs. Michener will spend Christmas week in Ottawa entertaining relatives.

Youths Convicted

BANGKOK, Thailand (Reuter) — The juvenile court of Bangkok has convicted 1,700 teen-age boys this year for robberies in gangs. Robbery by teen-age gangs in Bangkok now is more frequent than petty theft and physical assault.

SKAGIT LOOPHOLE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Law professor Charles Bourne of the University of British Columbia says the only valid legal challenge to the Skagit Valley flooding agreement is that it would interfere with the delicate balance of control of international boundary waters.

In an interview Tuesday, Bourne, legal adviser to the federal government on the Columbia River Power scheme, said: "The only way we can get out legally is by challenging the validity of the order made for the deal in 1942 by the International Joint Commission."

He said that order said, in substance, flooding of the Skagit Valley could proceed, provided Seattle City Light made adequate compensation.

"We could attack the order on the grounds this is an invalid delegation of authority," said the law professor.

Bourne said it's a good technical argument, but would damage the International Joint Commission. He added that the best thing that could happen would be for the U.S. federal power commission to refuse Seattle's application to raise the level of the Ross Dam on the Skagit River.

He said that legally B.C. has already agreed to the flooding of more than 5,000 acres of the valley and the only issue remaining is the matter of compensation.

Man Leaps to Death

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — One man leaped to his death from the fourth floor and two others were injured when fire swept through a Santa Monica hotel mainly inhabited by old people late Monday night.

About 200 residents of the Carmel Hotel fled from the four-storey building, once a favorite resort of the movie colony including John Barrymore.

Michigan Woman Gets $1.7M From Hospital

DETROIT (AP) — A malpractice judgment of more than $1.7 million was awarded Tuesday to a 26-year-old Detroit woman who said she was blinded and lost control of her arms and legs as a result of surgery performed at a Detroit hospital.

A six-member Wayne County circuit court jury awarded $1,740,020, plus interest to Lucille Leneair after a six-day trial. Detroit General Hospital was defendant in the suit.

"This is probably the largest malpractice verdict in Michigan history," said Judge Horace Gilmore, who presided over the trial.

Because Detroit General is a city hospital, the judgment will be paid from tax money. It will pay for Miss Leneair's care for the rest of her life.

Ten years ago, Miss Leneair underwent relatively simple exploratory surgery at the hospital to determine if she had cancer. The suit contended three doctors performing the operation were unaware Miss Leneair was getting only about 10 per cent of the oxygen she needed while under anesthetic.

As a result, the suit said, she suffered a heart attack and permanent brain damage.

None of the three doctors now is employed by the hospital.

After the operation, Miss Leneaire found herself legally blind, with control over her arms and legs subject to spastic muscle contractions, Judge Gilmore said.

City attorneys were not available for comment after the ruling was made, but the judgment is likely to be appealed, Gilmore said.

Bob Hope's Last Tour

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Hope's first trip to entertain serviceman in wartime almost was his last. It started in early 1942, and the destination was Anchorage, Alaska.

The Hope troupe was in a twin-engined Lockheed Lodestar flown by army pilots. A sudden storm knocked out the plane's radio gear and left the crew completely lost at 13,000 feet.

Parachutes were being issued when a commercial airliner also bound for Anchorage passed through the Lodestar's propwash. Its pilots apparently sensed the army plane was in trouble and radioed ahead.

Anti-aircraft searchlights at the Anchorage airport were turned on. Hope's flight crew spotted the lights during a momentary break in the storm. They landed the plane safely, and the Hope show went on.

The troupe then consisted of actress Frances Langford, comedian Jerry Colonna and guitarist Tony Romano. All now are out of show business.

OFF TO VIETNAM

But Hope, at 69, still is going strong. Friday, he'll be off on his 29th overseas tour to entertain U.S. servicemen —including a day with those still in Vietnam. It'll be his 20th consecutive Christmas tour.

And it'll be a sentimental journey of sorts for him. He says it probably will be the last he'll make with the king-sized troupe he's travelled with at Christmas time the last five or six years.

"I think it'll be the last Christmas tour of any size I'll make," he said at lunch when he was in town last week taping an NBC television special. "But I may still go overseas again."

The first stop on this year's 15-day tour—as in the 1942 trip—will be in Alaska, at a tiny, miserable atoll called Shemya. It's a military refuelling base near Attu at the end of the Aleutian chain. About 800 servicemen call it home, reluctantly.

He's doing three shows in South Korea. He's spending Christmas Day at the Bien Hoa Air Base northeast of Saigon. He did his first Vietnam show there in 1964.

It may be the last time he plays that combat zone. He says he hopes so.

CLIP AND TRY THIS DELICIOUS ROGERS' RECIPE

Fruit Cake

½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup Rogers Golden Syrup
3 well-beaten eggs
½ cup ground almonds
½ cup chopped almonds
6 tablespoons orange juice
¾ cup chopped dark raisins
¾ cup chopped light raisins
¾ cup chopped glacé fruit (cherries, citron, orange, etc.)
2 cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon mace
¼ teaspoon cloves

The day before baking, sprinkle chopped fruit with 4 tablespoons of the fruit juice. Leave juice to soak into fruit. Preheat oven to 300°F. Cream butter and sugar. Beat in syrup and eggs. Sprinkle fruit with ground almonds. Sift flour, soda and spices. Sprinkle fruit with enough spiced flour to make a dry mixture you can handle with your fingers. Add spiced flour to butter mixture alternately with 2 tablespoons fruit juice. Fold in floured fruit and chopped almonds. Bake about 2 hours in a six-inch pan 2½ to 3 inches deep (middle sized Christmas cake pan).

NOTE: Line pan with several thicknesses of greased brown paper or foil. Fasten a jacket of brown paper, cardboard or newspaper around cake pan to help cake bake evenly.

Sunday Sailors Problem

VANCOUVER (CP) — Inexperienced boaters, both in and out of their craft, are a prime source of concern for the six-man squad of the Vancouver police department's marine division.

On the water, Sunday sailors often break safety and speed regulations, police say, and out of their boats, they often make thefts easy.

"No reasonable person would consider driving an automobile without first having obtained instruction," said Sgt. Harvey Brown, head of the squad. "The same degree of common sense should be applied to boating."

During the summer, the marine division's primary function is to enforce safety regulations. Often a routine check turns up a pleasure craft with no fire extinguisher on board, or an insufficient number of lifejackets.

Department of transport regulations require all craft to carry a lifejacket or floating cushion for each person on board, although wearing the jacket is not mandatory. Police, however, recommend that children and non-swimmers wear lifejackets at all times.

"It is nearly impossible to place a jacket on someone after he is in the water," said Constable Bob James, a member of the marine division. "Add the panic factor and it becomes impossible."

SPEEDERS CHECKED

The squad also hands out an average of 20 speeding tickets each month in the congested Coal Harbor area of Vancouver's waterfront, where there is a limit of five knots. Many more speeders receive a warning.

Boats or equipment are frequently stolen. During the winter months, when boats are in storage, theft prevention becomes the prime function of the marine squad.

Nowhere in the city is there more portable property than that located on the waterfront," said Constable James.

"You can reckon on $1,000 a foot, and it's nothing to see a 50-footer in these berths. There's probably at least $20 million worth of marine craft moored on our beat.

"Boat thefts are becoming pretty common. It's a simple matter to sand off the registered number, repaint the boat, and apply to the nearest customs house for a new licence.

"It's a simple matter to remove an outboard motor. I can't see why all owners don't take them in at night, or at least padlock them to the boat."

It's taken more than 30 years to establish a modern marine division within the police department.

OWNERS COMPLAINED

In 1945, the old police boat became unseaworthy, and irate boat owners complained to the police commission about boat thefts in Coal Harbor.

Two years later, the city bought a seven-year-old war surplus vessel that eventually proved to be unfit for service in the choppy waters of the First Narrows, the harbor entrance.

It remained in service until 1963, when the marine squad's two existing vessels were specially built at a total cost of $42,000.

The bigger one is a 29-foot launch with twin 250-horsepower engines capable of travelling at 29 knots, or 34 miles an hour. It is equipped with a standard police radio, an additional very high frequency link, foam and chemical fire extinguisher, plus oxygen and resuscitating equipment.

The smaller one is a jet-propelled runabout with speed and handling qualities similar to a hydroplane. The boat can hit a top speed of 42 knots while turning in little more than its own length.

The absence of propellers enables it to travel over floating logs, clear sandbars in narrow inlets and even zoom up onto a beach.

OLIVIER, CUMMINGS BEST ACTORS

LONDON (AP) — Laurence Olivier and Constance Cummings have been named best actor and actress of the year for their performances in Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey into Night.

In their annual awards, the London Theatre critics selected Jumpers, by Tom Stoppard, as best play of 1972.

All Over, by Edward Albee, was voted most underrated play, with Angela Lansbury receiving a bouquet for the "Most under-rated performance" in the same play.

By JOHN STOWELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing a danger of "acute and chronic toxicity" in high doses, the Food and Drug Administration today moved to limit the strength of Vitamin A and D products.

"The availability without prescription of these vitamins in high dosage levels contributes significantly to their misuse and the occurrence of serious adverse effects," the agency said.

Interested persons have 60 days to comment on the proposal, which will be followed "in the near future" by broad regulations covering most other vitamins, minerals, and other food supplements.

The immediate effect of the A and D proposal would be to require reformulation of an undetermined number of multi-vitamins, the FDA said.

The restrictions would apply also, FDA added, to vitamin products marketed as foods for special dietary purposes and as over-the-counter drugs.

The FDA said it has received reports of heavy promotion of both vitamins A and D for the treatment of acne, night blindness and arthritis although "neither is proven effective for these conditions in well-nourished people."

DOSAGE LIMITED

The proposed daily limits are 10,000 international units for Vitamin A and 400 for D, which the FDA said would be "within the recommended daily dosages" established by the National Academy of Sciences.

Some products now on the market contain 10 times the recommended intake of D, the FDA said.

Natural sources of Vitamin A, necessary for growth and good eyesight, include liver, butter, margarine, yellow cheese, carrots, sweet potatoes, apricots, cantaloupe and green leafy vegetables.

The FDA said overdoses of Vitamin A can cause a wide range of complications, such as anorexia, growth retardation in children, drying and cracking skin, increased pressure in the skull, pain, irritability and headaches.

Vitamin D in excessive doses can be even more toxic the FDA said, resulting in the extreme in hypertension, hypercalcemia in children, irreversible kidney failure and death.

Regional Equality 'Unrealistic'

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — It would be unrealistic to expect regional and national economic disparities to be solved within a few years, Finance Minister John Turner told the local Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

Mr. Turner said the federal government would continue its efforts to make job opportunities equal for all Canadians, regardless of geographical difference or economy trends.

However, it was politically essential for the provincial and federal governments to refuse to be stampeded into taking economic action at the expense of the long-term welfare of the country.

He said seasonal variation of jobs was a problem in Canada, but a winter job expansion program, providing funds for local initiatives projects and on-thejob training programs, should help alleviate the situation. He said between $325 million and $375 million was being spent on these programs.

The minister returned to Ottawa Tuesday night.

$13.5M Plan To Combat Mill Pollution

CROFTON (CP) — B.C. Forest Products Ltd. has applied to the provincial pollution control branch for permits for more than $13.5 million spending on pollution abatement at its pulp and paper mill here.

Mill manager W. S. Reynolds said Tuesday the most significant improvements will be a new chemical recovery boiler and high efficiency precipitator, scheduled for completion by early 1975, to reduce mill smell and fallout of chemical ash.

Although the major expenditures on air emissions are focussed on the recovery units, other air contaminants will also be dealt with, Reynolds said.

The company has applied to the provincial pollution control branch for the necessary permits but, because of the long delivery time on major pieces of equipment, Reynolds reported that the company is proceeding with some of the major changes that are known to be required.

"This will make it possible to get the program started sooner," he said.

As well as the new chemical recovery boiler and the high efficiency precipitator, the most significant phase of the program, Reynolds said another part of the air improvement program already underway includes the installation of scrubbers on the waste-wood burning boilers. He claims the scrubbers will reduce the emission of carbon particles to the atmosphere.

"These scrubbers will operate in conjunction with existing cyclonic separators and the collected flyash will be settled in presently-installed settling ponds," he added.

Installation should be completed in mid-19073.

Scrubbers will also be installed on the chemical plant stack to eliminate release of chemical fumes from this source. Modifications will also be made to the existing lime kiln scrubbers to substantially eliminate the release of sulphur compounds.

Volunteers Provide Savings

Duncan Bureau, Phone 746-6181

DUNCAN — Volunteer ambulance drivers saved the Cowichan Valley Regional District thousands of dollars last year when they answered 532 calls, chairman of the board's ambulance committee, Margaret Robertson said.

Although the average cost for an ambulance journey in the district is $20, Mrs. Robertson claims that most people do not realize that all of the 25 drivers are volunteers.

"People just don't realize the dedication of these drivers," she added.

As well as the drivers there are four dispatchers, who are some of the drivers wives.

CONTINUAL TRAINING

Several of the drivers have their industrial first aid tickets while the rest have St. John's Ambulance training. "They are always undergoing continual training," Mrs. Robertson said.

One difficulty, director Robertson said, is that because of an inadequate alarm system, while on call drivers are practically "tied to their phone. We are trying to work out a solution to that."

Mrs. Robertson feels that "in our automated and deserviced society service recognition and involvement is of prime importance. Not only now but more so in the future."

The best type of citizens' participation is where you have the volunteer serving his community and you have local governments supporting them, Mrs. Robertson said.

"In this capacity, as well as ambulance drivers, are volunteer firemen and those who participate in recreation."

Mrs. Robertson reported that the ambulances in the regional district are running very successfully since the Duncan Kiwanis Ambulance Society was taken over in 1971.

DEFICIT TAKEN

When the district took over the society, Mrs. Robertson said it picked up a deficit of 1-25 of a mill for operating.

Last year maintenance of the two ambulances and modern facilities, on Canada Avenue, and supplies cost the regional district over $20,000.

Mrs. Robertson said the board has a program, directed mainly at senior citizens, where for $8 monthly a family is covered for all ambulance trips including transfers.

Single people are covered for $5.

The ambulance service, under regional directorship, runs from the Chemainus River to the Shawnigan Lake cutoff to west of Paldi.

Also in the Cowichan Valley, but under different controls, are ambulance societies in Chemainus, Lake Cowichan and Ladysmith. All drivers are volunteer.

SASK. BOOSTS INCOME TAX

REGINA (CP) — Increased personal and corporate income taxes designed to raise an extra $8.7 million in revenues were announced today by Finance Minister Elwood Cowley of Saskatchewan.

Effective Jan. 1, 1973, personal income tax will rise by three percentage points from 37 to 40 per cent of the federal tax payable.

Calculated as a percentage of personal income, this would amount to an increase of less than one per cent of personal income.

Corporate income taxes will be increased by one percentage point from 11 to 12 per cent.

Cowley said the personal income tax increase will raise an additional $7 million while the corporate tax increase will raise $1.7 million more.

Cowley, now preparing his first budget as minister of finance after taking over the portfolio earlier this year from Premier Allan Blakeney, said the increases are designed to aid the government in continuing the tax shift away from the property tax.

The minister said there may be other "small changes" when the budget is brought down in February or March.

He said he doesn't think the higher increase for personal tax was inconsistent with New Democratic Party philosophy.

The governmment has been forced to hit the "little man" to pay for its programs, Opposition leader Dave Steuart said today following announced personal and corporate tax increases.

"This isn't unexpected," Steuart said.

"When you increase government staff by 600, 700 or 800 people and when you hire advisers to advisers, tax increases become necessary."

He said Premier Blakeney was talking tough to business but not acting tough.

"What's happening is he's not pleasing anybody."

Covent Garden's Rats Get Notices

LONDON (AP) — Where will all the rats go when Covent Garden, London's central fruit and vegetable market, closes after 300 years in business?

Local residents fear a breakout of thousands of rodents suddenly robbed of squashed tomatoes, rotten apples, stray nuts and potatoes.

But Westminster City Council, which is responsible for the area, believes it can cope with any rat explosion.

Covent Garden, 6½ fragrant acres tucked away in a maze of narrow old streets behind the busy traffic of The Strand and within hailing distance of plush tourist hotels, is to be closed by 1974.

A new 64-acre site, linked with the railway and equipped with modern facilities, is being built a mile away across the river. The old market, once the location of a convent garden, is rich in old London flavor. It won fame as the place where Prof. Henry Higgins first heard Eliza Doolittle murder the King's English in Pygmalion and then My Fair Lady.

There has never been a reliable census of the rats living in Covent Garden, but they are estimated to number in the thousands, maybe tens of thousands.

The old market still is operating, and there is plenty for the rats to feed on. Anything which is not in cold storage is attacked. The creatures nibble at sacks of potatoes and munch their way through bagged carrots and crates of tomatoes if they are left lying around too long.

"There's one rat that lives round the corner—as big as a cat—so fat it can hardly waddle," said Bert Jacobs, a porter.

Jim Monahan, an executive member of the Covent Garden Community Association, fears that demolition of the market and its surrounding 58 acres will disrupt one of central London's biggest sewers and send the rats scattering outwards.

One fear is that the rats will use the maze of sewers as a subway system to penetrate other parts of the city in their search for food.

Westminster City Council officials say that when a building comes down and it is not going to be used again, they'll see that its sewer connections are sealed off immediately. Rat poison also will be dropped down sewers.

THE ODD IS HIS COMMONPLACE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bearded, burly Ben Schlossberg is a balloonatic.

"The technical name is an aerostator, but I like balloonatic better—or would you prefer aeronut?" he chuckled. "But whatever you call it, and however you look at it, ballooning is the only way to fly."

Recently Schlossberg was tethered 300 feet above a shopping centre in New Westminster, B.C., playing an electric piano from his gondola slung beneath the balloon.

This may sound odd to non-balloonatics, but in the crowded life of the 30-year-old New Yorker, the odd has always been the commonplace.

"A few years ago, he said in an interview, he was looking at a map of the world and noticed that Alaska and Siberia were separated only by a 50-mile stretch of water.

though there was only 50 miles between the two places, there was a whole world of ideological difference between them," he said. "So I figured I would attempt to bridge the gap by staging a 'swimcident' —that is, swim the 50 miles from Alaska to Siberia."

SWIM TO RUSSIA

Two months later, he entered the water off the Alaskan coast and set out to swim to Siberia, accompanied by a launch captained by a priest who smuggled Bibles into Russia as a sideline.

Schlossberg's aquatic diplomacy was stifled by a Russian patrol boat off the Siberian coast.

"The 'swimcident' almost became more of an incident than I had planned," he said.

The transition from aquanaut to astronut came some time later when Schlossberg decided to get married.

"I figured it would be nice to get married in a balloon," he said. "We were eventually married in a balloon floating over Trenton, N.J., and from that moment, I became a balloonatic."

Six months later he had a balloonist's licence, but not without some hair-raising incidents.

THINGS WENT WRONG

He recalled one in particular. He and his instructor were in a balloon when things went wrong and they found themselves swinging through the treetops and telephone wires.

"We finally came to rest in some trees and I climbed down to the ground," he said. "I was suddenly surrounded by people all very eager to help free the balloon and help us any way they could.

"But quite a few of them looked at us in a funny kind of way and I heard one man tell another that we had to be nuts to climb into a contraption like the balloon."

It wasn't until much later that he learned they had brought the balloon down on the grounds of a state mental hospital.

"But that's the way some people regard balloonatics," he said.

OPENED SCHOOL

When he became a balloonatic, Schlossberg opened a training school in California and now trains would-be astronauts to become qualified in the art.

On the technical side of ballooning, Schlossberg said "every landing is a controlled crash." Once up in the air a balloonatic had absolutely no control over where the journey would end.

"You are entirely at the mercy of the wind," he said. "Where it goes, you go and if you are lucky you end up on a flat surface and not on the top of a mountain."

Party Funds Public?

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation will be introduced which will require disclosure of donations to Ontario political parties from public and private corporations, Premier William Davis said Tuesday.

He also told the legislature that he was "not yet certain as to whether limitations as to the amounts contributed should be imposed."

The premier said that with respect to contributions to parties from private individuals, "I frankly wish to maintain the right of individuals to confidentiality, providing such contributions are not . . . and could not be presumed to be other than a nominal amount.

"I do not know precisely what such an amount would be, but I would give the assurance that such would be well within the limits which would allay public apprehension or concern," he said.

GIVEN $50,000

The Davis government has come under heavy opposition fire since it was revealed that in 1971, the Conservatives received a $50,000 campaign contribution from Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. a Swiss-based firm which has a $15-million loan from the government-controlled Workmen's Compensation Board.

Mr. Davis said there were many factors to be considered before legislation was introduced including such questions as "public funding of political campaigns."

He said the matters would be referred to the Ontario commission on the legislature headed by Dalton Camp.

Scopes Trial Again?

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Don't put Adam and Eve and the Garden of Eden on the same level as Darwin's theory of evolution, 19 Nobel laureates are pleading with the California board of education.

In a letter to the board Monday, the California scientists revived again the 113-year-old controversy begun when Charles Darwin published his theory of man's origin. The board is scheduled to select new science textbooks Thursday, and the subject of man's origin may get a revised treatment.

"Creation 'theory' is not based on science and does not belong in a science textbook," wrote the Nobel Prize winners, adding their prestige to a list including the National Academy of science and a half-dozen other professional societies.

Religious fundamentalists want the biblical version of the origin of life place side by side with Darwin in the new science textbooks the board will select this week.

The scientists want only evolution discussed in science textbooks, arguing it is the sole scientific explanation of life's origins generally accepted in the world.

In a covering letter to the board, Dr. Arthur Kornberg, Stanford University professor of biochemistry, wrote that the two theories cannot live together in the same book because the Bible's version "is clearly not scientific but religious."

Close Tabs On Strike

B.C. Labor Minister Bill King said today his department is keeping in "close touch" with the Ontario labor department following resumption of negotiations in the protracted elevator strike.

He said that "some headway" has been made in the talks although there still are "some problems."

Some 2,400 elevator installers and repairmen across Canada have been on strike for three months for a new contract with five companies — Turnbull Elevator Division of Dover Corporation (Canada), Otis Elevator Company, Montgomery Elevator, Armor Elevator Canada and Westinghouse Canada.

Twenty-three men are on strike in Victoria, most of them at Montgomery Elevator.

Wage Freeze Set

BELGRADE (Reuter) — The Yugoslav government has decided to freeze the salaries of white-collar workers and of some other categories of workers for their first six months of next year, it was announced here.

Electoral Knife Slices Into Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec is the latest province to come under the knife in the two-year operation to carve the country into new federal electoral ridings.

The redistribution of the 264 ridings will leave Quebec and four other provinces with fewer Commons seats than they have now. Quebec's allotment will fall to 72 from 74. The others are Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The changes reflect shifting population patterns as revealed in the 1971 census. Generally, the cities will get a bigger share of seats as they continue to attract people from the countryside.

Newly-published maps of proposed Quebec ridings show Montreal will retain 25 seats, with the rest of the province losing two.

The redistribution process began last spring, when boundary commissions in each province began drafting new ridings.

HEARINGS SLATED

Under the co-ordination of federal representation commissioner Nelson Castonguay, the commissions in Quebec, New Brunswick and Newfoundland have already proposed new boundaries.

The next step is public hearings. In Quebec they start Jan. 9. Hearings begin Dec. 22 in Newfoundland and Jan. 17 in New Brunswick.

Newfoundland is to fall to six seats from seven, and New Brunswick is to retain its 10-seat quota.

After the hearings the commissions will report to the Commons. Any 10 MPs may request changes, but the final decision is then up to the commissions.

The redistribution will not affect any election held before late 1973, when the work is to be completed.

The only two provinces to gain seats—Ontario and British Columbia—will publish their new maps within the coming month.

Ontario will move to 91 seats from 88, and B.C. will have 26 instead of the present 23.

DATES NOT SET

Publication dates for the other provinces have not been set.

Allotment of seats to each province is based on a formula written into the British North America Act.

First, no province may have fewer MPs than senators. The three Maritime provinces are at that minimum—P.E.I. with four, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia with 10 each.

Yukon and the Northwest Territories have one MP each.

The other provinces share the remaining Commons seats among them, roughly based on their share of the remaining population.

The other rule is that no province may lose more than 15 per cent of its seats in a single redistribution, no matter how much its population falls.

The new quotas for the other provinces, with present seats in brackets: Manitoba 12 (13); Saskatchewan 12 (13); Alberta 19 (19).

Aerospace Company Reneges on Contract

BETHPAGE, N.Y. (AP) — Grumman Aerospace Corp. says it will not fulfil a contract option and build 48 more F14 Tomcat jet fighters for the United States Navy unless the contract terms are renegotiated.

The company stated its position Monday after the navy announced that it was exercising its option to buy the planes at no increase in price over the terms of a 1969 contract.

Noting that it already has lost about $1 million on each of the 86 swing-wing supersonic F-14s ordered so far, Grumman said it had told the navy that it "refused to proceed under the option."

The actions set the stage for a showdown between the defence department and a major aerospace manufacturer over who must pay for cost overruns in such contracts.

Grumman board chairman E. Clinton Towl told Congress last April that the company was "financially unable" to build the 48 additional Tomcats and that it would lose another $105.5 million if it did.

Grumman initially bid $8.3 billion to build 722 of the sophisticated fighters. Cost increases pushed the price a plane to $16.8 million from $11.5 million, and the contract order was reduced to 313 planes.

The navy now estimates the unit cost will rise to $18.8 million.

Of the first 86 planes ordered, 19 have been delivered.

Boys Want Girls

LONDON (AP) — Boys at Eton, Britain's No. 1 public school, want to let in the girls. A survey made by the school newspaper reported nearly 80 per cent favored co-education and only 11 per cent supported the single standard. The paper predicted, however, that Eton will stay all-male.

Hikes in Unemployment Benefits Endorsed by the Majority

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

While about half the Canadian people (53%) endorse the recent increase in unemployment insurance benefits, there is solid opposition to it from about a third of the adults (33%).

The great majority of those who approve the increase (70%), do so on qualified terms. Payments, they say should go only to those who really need them. For those who can't get work, the larger sums are necessary to match the rising cost of living. "A family man who is laid off can't live on less" is their opinion.

Compared to this basic attitude, less than one in ten approve because they believe payments were not enough to live on previously (7%), or hold that when workers have paid into it for a considerable time, they are entitled to the increased benefits (6%).

On the other hand, top reason given for objecting to the increase (45%) is a belief that the higher rates now paid, only increases unemployment because many people won't work if they can earn as much, or enough to live on, without taking a job.

Another large segment (17%) refer to abuse with the system, and demand stricter controls, a means test, and longer work periods.

Less than one in ten (6%) complain either of increased taxes for workers resulting from the high payments, or claim that there are plenty of jobs if people want to take them.

Whether Canadians live in homes of the well-to-do, such as executives of professionals, whether they are in the ranks of labor, or on the farms, they agree in their points of view at very much the same levels. A majority approval is found in all occupational segments except among sales and clerical workers where just under half the workers endorse the increases.

These fact were established in a study with in-home interviews among 671 adults on October 20-21. A sample of this size produces results accurate within a 4 percentage point margin of error, 19 out of 20 times. The question:

"As you may know unemployment insurance benefits have been increased recently. In general do you approve of this, or not?"

	Approve	Disapprove	Undecided
CANADA	53%	33%	14%
Executives; professionals	53	35	12
Clerical; sales	47	34	19
Labor	56	33	11
Farm; other	51	34	15

Those who gave an opinion were asked their reasons.

Approve Increase (53%) because:

It is needed for those who can't get work; has to keep up with cost of living; some deserve it	70%
It was not enough to live on before	7
People who have paid into it deserve it	6
Other (including; I get it and need it; longer work period needed before getting it; people should be made to work)	4
Can't say why	16
(Some gave more than one reason)	103%

Disapprove Increase (33%) because:

Makes people lazy; increases unemployment; people won't work if they get so much for not working; leave jobs too easily; no incentive to work	45%
The system is too full of abuses; people take advantage of it; should be means test; longer work period	17
Increases our taxes; costs too much; country running into debt	6
There are enough jobs; people can find work if they want it	6
Other reasons (including: hard to find people to employ; increase jumped too much; should have been gradual; paying enough before)	12
Can't say why	14

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

HOW TO WRITE
A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader; prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

The Truth About Arthritis Care

"The Truth About Arthritis Care" is a splendid little book, well and interestingly written, and full of facts about arthritis which could be of great help to arthritics, or to the parents of an arthritic child. As the authors, John J. Calabro, M.D., and John Wykert say in their preface, "Year after year, you have arthritics suffer in silence, too often grasping at any remedy or cure, however unorthodox it may be. Frequently, you either avoid doctors or are not helped by them . . . This book hopes to provide you with the know-how, the basic truths you need."

Particularly helpful are the sections that tell how thousands of North Americans are fleeced every year by quacks who guarantee to cure arthritis in some simple way. As the authors say, always beware of any man who guarantees a cure; quackery causes a cruel waste of money, and sometimes it takes away a person's life by keeping him from going quickly to an able physician who could have removed him from danger.

Some unscrupulous people dispense either ineffective drugs or those that are potentially dangerous. There are also persons who inject vitamins into all of their arthritic patients.

Some men cause serious injury to the kidneys of some of their patients of giving overdoses of salt of gold. Many able physicians have tried gold salt injections for rheumatoid arthritis, but they have known enouth not to give too large a dose, and also they have known to stop giving the medicine the minute symptoms of gold poisoning appear.

Dr. Calabro warns his readers of devices sold by mail, and especially electrical or radioactive instruments that are sold as "arthritis cures". Also, there are a number of "irregular practictioners" (not medical doctors or licensed physiotherapists) who will use what they call "natural methods", which include strict diets of foods sold at special stores, purgatives, enemas, and lying in the sunshine, perhaps at "health resorts" or "spas".

Recently, there has been great excitement over copper bracelets, which are supposed to cure arthritis and are completely useless. I have been surprise to see even well-educated and usually sensible people spending money to acquire one of these copper bracelets.

Dr. Calabro quotes Dr. William E. Reynolds, the medical director of the Arthritis Foundation, who says, "Wearing a copper bracelet for relief of arthritis is comparable to wearing an amulet containing a dead toad to ward off evil spirits.

Thief Lights Cache

MONTREAL (CP) — Extra police are patrolling the Lachine Canal on the lookout for a car thief who dumps his stolen goods in the canal and then brags to police of his accomplishments.

The man not only telephones police to tell them where he has dumped the stolen cars, but he leaves the headlights on so they can be easily spotted in the water, say police.

Police received the first call last Wednesday and a short time later a small European car was pulled from the icy canal.

At the same time the next night, the second call came and the second car was dragged out.

Tuesday night the man called again and told police he has dumped six more cars in the canal.

Technical squad divers were called away from the fishing expedition to investigate an explosion—they are also bomb experts—but they expect to find six cars when they get back to the canal.

Police Halt Welfare Protesters

NICOLET, Que. (CP) — Police were called Tuesday to restore order at the local office of the social affairs department after about 30 welfare recipients were barred from the office's conference room.

The welfare recipients, who have been occupying the office since Monday, were banging on the doors of the conference room and booing.

Nicolet is 70 miles northwest of Montreal.

The demonstrators have demanded an increase in social welfare payments, retroactive payments in line with the proposed increases and the dismissal of two local social affairs department employees.

A spokesman for the demonstrators said the two employees, Jean Brassard and Roger Leblanc, "have proved their professional incompetence and their flagrant lack of goodwill."

Environment Film Festival Scheduled

MONTREAL (CP) — The first international film festival on the human environment will be held in Montreal in June, Pierre Dansereau announced Tuesday.

Mr. Dansereau, project director for the National Research Council's ecological study of the Ste. Scholastique airport site, is president of the festival.

Feature length films, shorts, amateur films, trailers and posters on the theme of technology and resources in man's service will be accepted for competition.

But it's a happy, mutually beneficial experience.

With the first ring, you tell the public about some useful item you'd like to sell. This is easy. All you do is dial 386-2121. A friendly voice answers your call and helps you with the wording of your Classified Ad.

The second ring is that of your telephone, bringing response to the Classified Section. And that second ring brings you cash in exchange for the item you have for sale.

Take the big step with a classified ad. Offer for sale some of the valuable but seldom used items around the house: golf clubs, furniture, appliances, bicycles, power tools, outgrown wardrobe, unnecessary rugs or carpets, you name it!

'Frosty' Dividends . . . Maturing Buds

One dividend granted by frosty weather in early winter is the hastening towards maturity of dormant flower buds.

These are to be found on many of our commonly grown late winter blooming shrubs, all of them deciduous, without leaves at this time.

A neighbor already has two low bowl arrangements of yellow Jasminum nudflorum, which with their bright green stems and soft yellow starry flowers look lovely in brown pottery.

Next to be noticed was our own Viburnum fragrans, sheltered by other shrubs but catching the low winter sun. The bud clusters at the tips increased in size daily in spite of the cold air. A few budded twigs brought into the house will scent the air with a delicious fragrance as they open in the warmth.

Another shrub for Christmas perfume indoors, now that frost has touched the buds, is Daphne mezereum. Called simply Winter-daphne by English country people, this twiggy low shrub grown easily from seed, will have either white or rosy flowers.

Both contrast well with the dark wood of the twigs. These respond quickly indoors if immersed in lukewarm water for an hour, first crushing the bottom inch of each stem with a hammer.

The fall flowering plum (or cherry) Prunus subhirtella autumnalis will open indoors now if you choose budded twigs. Treat them as explained for the Daphne. The warm water softens the covering of the buds just as happens in warm spring rains, thus enabling flowers to emerge.

Choosing twigs with flower buds already formed, needs an observing eye but no great skill. Blossom buds are, in nearly all plants, much rounder than leaf buds or growth buds. We refer to them all as "buds," a word in botany meaning new, or incipient, growth, of any kind.

An early blooming forsythia shrub, is worth looking over for likely twigs. Second year branches are the most likely source. They are further from the natural flowering time, so may need a week of warm water treatment.

Sometimes, in a particularly sheltered garden, flower buds will have grown up among the leaves of the Algerian Iris unguicularis. These need only the warm house air to induce opening, no laying in warm water.

With so much winter fragrance possible, one ponders the reason for the lack of winter interest by many home gardeners. Is it because they don't know? Hardly, we write these up every year.

Today's deal is presented as a top-echelon bridge mystery. You are informed that our South declarer misplayel the hand, if expert standards are applied. Can you find South's error?

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♡	Pass	4♡	Pass
6♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

North's jump to four hearts was a conventional call. It announced (1) the possession of fewer than six high-card points, (2) four or more trumps, and (3) no voids or singletons in the hand.

After cashing the club king, West led the club ace, which South ruffed. South then played his ace and king of trumps gathering in the three outstanding pieces. Next came the ace and king of diamonds — and East discarded a club on the second diamond lead. Declarer was now doomed to defeat, for although he could ruff out two of his diamonds, West could not be prevented from making a diamond trick. What was declarer's mistake?

South was, of course, extremely unlucky in running into a 5-1 division of the six outstanding diamonds. Had they been divided either 3-3 or 4-2, he would have fulfilled the slam contract as he played the hand. Nevertheless, the blame for his defeat must be placed squarely on his shoulders.

After ruffing the second club lead, declarer should have cashed only one round of trumps. Then would come the ace and king of diamonds. If, in theory, both opponents followed to the two diamond leads, declarer would then pick up the outstanding trump. It would now be a routine matter to ruff two of his diamonds, and thereby promote his fifth diamond into a winner.

On this given day, East would not have followed suit to the second diamond lead. But, since he had started with but one trump, he couldn't ruff the second diamond lead.

South would next cash his ace of spades, after which he would proceed to cross-ruff diamonds and spades.

Of course, if East had started with one diamond and two trumps, then he would ruff South's second diamond lead. If this were the set-up (with West possessing five diamonds), then declarer couldn't fulfill his contract whether he drew two rounds of trumps or didn't.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"You know something?" asked Jim. "Pete's twice as old as Sally was when he was a year older than she is now."

Mike smiled. "Okay. But she's half as old as he will be when she is a year older than he is now."

What were the ages?

Thanks for an idea to J. Bunnell, Huntsville, Alabama.

Korean Curbs Lifted

SEOUL (AP) — President Chung Hee Park announced today that he is lifting martial law at midnight Thursday night, a few hours before voting for an electoral college that will name him to a new six-year term.

Press censorship ended with Park's announcement.

The 55-year-old general-turned-president declared martial law Oct. 17. He dissolved the national assembly, banned all political activity and wrote a new constitution enlarging the president's powers and allowing him to remain in office indefinitely. The constitution was overwhelmingly approved in a referendum Nov. 21, a sure indication of Park's re-election.

SMUGGLERS TO DIE

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Fifteen persons have been sentenced to death for clove smuggling, the Zanzibar government announced.

The announcement gave few details of the trial by the people's court, but said that the defendants — 11 Kenyans and four Tanzanians — had pleaded guilty.

A mandatory death sentence was introduced for clove smuggling earlier this year in a drive to stop the traffic, which cost the government an estimated $2.3 million a year.

'Branch-Plant' Economy Lashed

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadian corporations have been sold to foreign firms with Canadian money while this country is actually a net exporter of capital, publisher Mel Hurtig said today.

Mr. Hurtig, co-chairman of the Committee for an Independent Canada, made the points in a lengthy submission to the Alberta government's select committee on foreign investment.

Asking the committee to recommend that Alberta call on Ottawa to take strong steps to curtail the growth of foreign ownership, he said Canada has much more of it than any other developed country and, at the same time, has higher unemployment than any other developed country.

These problems will continue as long as we have a branch plant economy, he said.

"The greatest irony in the sellout of Canadian business and natural resources has been the massive funding of foreign expansion with Canadian money. Less than $1 in every $5 used in the massive buy-up of Canada during the last 10 years came from outside Canada."

Mr. Hurtig said that at the same time he knows of no evidence to support the allegation that Canadians invest more outside of Canada on a per-capita basis than foreigners invest in Canada.

Canadian investment outside of Canada may be in the neighborhood of $17 billion "but a substantial portion of this is actually investment made by foreign subsidiaries operating in Canada."

NET EXPORTER

Mr. Hurtig, an unsuccessful Edmonton Liberal candidate in the Oct. 30 federal election, said he believes Canada has been a net exporter of capital for at least 30 years.

"In any case, in the decade starting in 1961 . . . new direct investment in Canada by foreigners was less than the outward flow in dividends and profits to non-residents."

From 1966 to 1969, he said, dividends and interest to foreign investors was $3.6 billion, while the total inflow of investment capital for the same period was $2.5 billion.

"Hence there was a capital deficit of $1.1 billion."

Mr. Hurtig told the committee that any policies which fail to halt the growth of foreign ownership would be "non-policies," and suggested that recommendations to the government need not be timid.

"With careful consideration, a set of economic policies could be implemented whereby companies owned by Canadians could occupy dominant positions in all industries in this province and this country.

"Without some kind of legislative action, increased foreign ownership will soon leave Canada a country in name only without the control of vital economic decision-making processes normally characteristic of a sovereign nation."

New Corporations Act Passes Despite Fire

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government Tuesday introduced its new Corporations Tax Act and despite heavy opposition criticism gave it approval in principle.

The act, 256 pages long, now needs only one more presentation to the legislature before becoming law.

The act, under preparation for several years, continues a 12-per-cent tax on corporations but also provides for tax deductions such as exploration and development expenses and depletion allowances.

"We believe that we should be getting a better return from the activities of corporations and particularly from the exploitation and development of our natural resources in this province," Opposition leader Robert Nixon said.

Depletion allowance should not be deducted from tax paid unless there is evidence that "it is being used to the benefit of the people of the province, for particularly the establishment of new jobs and expanding a number of jobs in the community where the natural resource exists."

He said government policies encouraging industries to expand plant machinery "have cost the taxpayers of the province a good deal of money indeed and nobody on the government side . . . can indicate that this in fact contributed one job to the economy."

"It was in fact a handout to these industries which was unwarranted and uncalled for, poorly planned—a waste of taxpayers' money." The Liberal leader said.

James Renwick (NDP—Toronto Riverdale) said a decreasing percentage of tax revenue is derived from corporations.

The system, he said, was unfair to the rest of Ontario's taxpayers.

He said proper taxing of corporations would help to provide revenue, create employment and permit the province to continue the "social program which . . . it appears fashionable should become the whipping boy and the area in which the (spending) cuts are made."

Mr. Renwick said that speeding up depreciation on investment tax credit is not a job-producing device.

"What they do is . . . produce a distortion in the economy, in the tax structure of the country, for the purpose of inducing big business, not to maintain jobs but to do away with jobs by adopting modern and up-to-date methods too soon, and at the expense of people who are employed in the economy."

Mr. Renwick said a continuance of such a policy "will increase rather than counteract the degree of unemployment in Canada and in the province of Ontario."

It's All There But The Toot

MONTREAL (CP) — The first Canadian-designed simulator for training railway locomotive engineers will be built by Canadian National, Keith Hunt, company vice-president, announced today.

The simulator, to be completed by 1975, will be used for teaching new engingers and retraining existing engineers and supervisors, Mr. Hunt said.

The apparatus will consist of a mock-up diesel cab, a semi-circle movie screen in front of the cab and computers and will be capable of duplicating real-life train handling.

It will also be used to train railway employees in the proper observance of and response to operating rules, regulations and signals. It will eventually be installed at CN's engineer training centre at Gimli, Man., 60 miles north of Winnipeg.

Mr. Hunt said the use of advanced computer technology in the project will make the simulator the most advanced in the world. Two U.S. railways already use similar devices.

'Sorry Food Hucksters, I Think Too Much of Kids'

By COLMAN McCARTHY
Special to The Times

WASHINGTON—The other morning, a Saturday when I had charge of the children, we took an outing to the supermarket. It is about a half-mile walk round trip, through a field with a small watercourse and plenty of trees. The purpose of the trip was apples. I've been trying for some time to introduce the two older boys, 4, and 5, to fresh fruit, to get them into the habit of reaching for an apple, orange, banana or grapefruit to eat rather than a Milky Way.

At our supermarket I have learned to go in by the left door; you walk into the fresh food section that way. At the right door you are hit immediately with the six gumball machines, the potato chip rack, the cupcake display and other wrapped stuff.

We went for the apples. The kids were ready for them: it had been three hours since they had eaten. Amazingly, scattered among the apples were large bags of Kraft caramels and Brach's gum drops. The kids saw them. "Let's get the caramels," one said. "Yeah," said the other. Both sensed the delight of eating the forbidden non-fruit.

Savage Caramels

My good plan to get an apple into their bodies, not to mention getting a fresh-fruit attitude into their heads, was suddenly savaged by the caramels. Management, whatever its motives, was not content to leave the sugar food in the sugar food aisle, but was now fouling the one sanctuary I had thought was sacred.

The scene, aside from the frustration I felt, symbolized one of the major challenges of raising children: how do you get nutritious food into their bodies and a nutritious food attitude into their heads? How do you shield them from poor food, when on an average day it snows down on them in great blizzards of sugared and plastic cheapness? And how do you keep the kids from sensing that you are forcing something onto them, keep them from resisting you and your healthy food just for the sake of resisting?

All these questions are among the hardest a parent faces, assuming you care about protecting your children from that large and powerful part of the food industry that cultivates the kid market with cunning and guile.

At the supermarket that morning the apples won out, but victory was not easy. My kids came near to throwing a fit. They love excuses for this anyway, because it gives one a chance to perform for the other. They sense also that adults, me included, dislike scenes, so a loud one in a supermarket aisle is bound to do me in.

The children know about the tasty delights of caramels from friends they visit, whose parents bring the candy into the house, perhaps on the notion of well-the-kids-deserve-a-treat-once-in-a-while.

I believe that, too. Apples, oranges and other fresh fruit are the treat, no factory-made sugar and corn syrup concoctions. I ended the argument by explaining that I had enough money only for apples and not the 44 cents for the caramels. The kids grumbled, but they understood. In the end, going home through the field, each ate his apple, was glad to get it and thought nothing more about it.

By coincidence, while in the checkout line, I noticed a 5-year-old with a woman, presumably his mother. Her basket had enough for a whole kindergarten field trip: four six-packs of soda, bags of potato chips, pretzels and corn chips, lollipops, ice cream — the half-air kind — frozen pizzas, fruit punch, cookies and donuts. All of it was mingled with a large order — everything from valloon bread to frozen corn souffle — but I saw few fresh vegetables and fruit. In that house, snack time is all the time.

Assuming you want to make the struggle—a broad assumption perhaps, less because parents might not care about their kids' food than because the struggle may already have been lost—the first reality to face is that you get little co-operation outside the home. This is learned early. Many pediatricians care little about nutrition, because, like us, they were taught little about it in school.

Some of them pass out candy to a child after giving him a needle. Why not a pear or banana or a piece of pineapple? Some pediatricians are so lightweight as to tell parents to give Coke, or gingerale to a child with a "tummyache."

Then also, I've never known or heard about a pediatrician who cautions parents against manufactured baby food. The problem is less that strained carrots, potatoes, apples or whatever contain low percentages of the daily nutritional need; it's what the manufacturers often add in —salt, sugar and modified food starch.

I was aware too late of the methods of the baby food manufacturers to counter them—by making the food at home from fresh vegetables, fruits and eggs in a blender—but at least I was put on the alert against future attacks.

One of them came soon enough—from the Good Humor man. By the time his jingling bells began contributing to the neighborhood noise pollution, I was sufficiently crafty to offer a challenge to his power.

The first day I went out with the kids to the curb — they were attracted both by the bells and by the smiling man in the white suit they saw dressed like the pediatrician — I carried with me two oranges. The children, 2 and 3 then, didn't see them and I, 33 then, didn't show them. While diverting their attention—"look at those bluejays darting"—I opened the rear door of the truck and put in the oranges.

I let the Good Humor man know the fix was in and gave him a dime to play along. "Let's see now, boys," I said, "what should we have? How about an orange?" The Good Humor man went around back. "Sure enough," he said, "there's just two oranges left, and you boys get them."

The kids were thrilled. They liked the Santa Claus ho-hos of the Good Humor Man and they liked getting the oranges. "Eat 'em all up," their new friend said, going along with what he must have seen as one of the classic dupings of the Judeo-Christian era. No matter. The kids did indeed "eat 'em all up." They couldn't wait until the "fruit truck" came round again. Sometimes the Good Humor man had oranges, other times peaches, pears, apples, bananas, sometimes even a slice of cantaloupe. The boys never knew the fruit came from their own refrigerator. As for the Good Humor man, no doubt I was only the latest addition to his list of nuts-you-meet-in-this business.

The next summer I had planned the same strategy but by now, a year older and 10 years smarter, my children knew about Good Humor ice cream. They were at a friend's house one afternoon and the friend didn't ask for an orange. He called for, and received, a lemon-grape lollijet. I can imagine the scene—my innocent ones piping up for an orange or apple and evoking some wild response from a different Good Humor man: "An apple? You out of your head, kid?"

In much the same way they learned about low-quality ice cream, the children soon learned about inferior food of all kinds. We travelled by air once, and the stewardess — well-meaning but witless— gave the children hot dogs and coke. It might not have been the stewardess's fault. That's what management supplies.

Recent full-page ads for both American and United Airlines—on flights to California or some other paradise—announce that you'll be fed some exotic delight, and for the kids hot dogs and hamburgers. No thanks. My kids don't get that trash at home, and I'll avoid airlines that serve it when we aren't at home.

If you go to the drugstore, the hardware store, even the shoemaker's, invariably a row of penny gum or candy machines is there to tempt your children. The merchants bet that most parents would rather give their kid the candy than have a scene.

So the kids eat the stuff and then tell you an hour later at supper time that they aren't hungry. Or if they are hungry, they don't want the fresh food you've put before them; they want to go out to Roy Rogers, McDonald's, Gino's, Shakey's, Hot Shoppes, Red Barn, Donut Delight.

Diets Bad

Small wonder the agriculture department recently rated only 50 per cent of family diets as good, compared with 60 per cent of families who were rated as having a good diet 10 years earlier.

Naturally the kids pant for the sweet stuff. Gerber and Heinz started them out that way, the candy machines nailed them at age 4 and television advertising hooked them at 7.

Even Virginia Knauer, President Nixon's consumer affairs adviser, hardly on the barricades, cannot be silent. Recently she went before the national advertising wards luncheon and asked: "In all the crunchy, crackly, yummy, chewy, colorful foods paraded before children's eyes, where are the meat and potatoes, the fruits and vegetables, the eggs and milk that should be the staples of their diet? Sweetness becomes a cardinal virtue in food products — a virtue totally out of proportion to sugar's place in the diet. As one nutritionist described it, children's advertising cultivates a 'dessert taste' with a limited range of flavor ranging from a 'kind of fruity to a kind of chocolatey sweetness.'"

Add 'Gunk'

Rarely are the essential foods advertised, and if they are, such as milk, the kids are urged to make them tolerable by adding some type of syrup, powder or other gunk.

If pediatricians, merchants and even school officials—who permit vending machines on the premises—work against you, so also do several of the nation's holidays. At Halloween, to take one, the children go to the friendly neighborhood neighbors and are handed little more than wrapped sugar and corn syrup, artificially flavored.

The masked boys and girls who have knocked at my door the past few years have not received a Tootsie Roll, Powerhouse, Clark or Hershey bar. I give them apples. Last time I noticed several children look up at me, as though I had cheated or insulted them. One kid even handed the apple back. The next morning I found three apples on my front lawn, discarded from the night before by kids conditioned to see fruit as the junk food.

Michele Murray, a Washington woman gifted in both her talents of raising children and writing, has noticed her teenage children "slowly becoming aware of healthy food on their own. They're repelled by the empty calories, all the junk stuff sold in the stores. They've come to this new awareness believing they discovered it all on their own. Actually, I've tried to give them good food all along. They're just getting an appreciation of it now. There's time lag, but it's worth waiting for."

A difficult choice for Alan Woolston, 4

That appears to be a useful guide to the parent who cares about his children's nutrition: create a home where fresh and healthy food is important not only because our bodies need it, but because each of us as a person is valuable. Throw something artificial and cheap on your child's plate and that's the message to your child: you're artificial and cheap, worth nothing.

If many of the food industry officials work full-time on ways to get at children with inferior food, it is important that parents work at least part-time on behalf of the superior food.

America has no tradition—our national dish is the hot dog, the watered-fat delight—hence we have no cultural richness to draw on. Instead, individual stances must be taken—not rabid, but firm ones—that say, "sorry food hucksters, I think too much of my kids to let you near them."

Alcoholism Still Worst Drug Problem

PARIS (UPI) — At a time of growing concern over the spread of drugs among the young, alcohol remains the No. 1 drug problem in developed nations, an international conference on drugs has concluded.

One of the delegates to the meeting said alcoholism was spreading to children as young as 12.

They also concluded that the drug problem was worsening but in some areas "the panic period is over."

More than 50 experts from 20 nations opened a nine-day symposium on drug patterns at the U.N. educational, scientific and cultural organization (UNESCO) earlier this week.

Peter Bennink-Bolt of the Hellinek clinic in Amsterdam, told the group "there are 3,000 hard drug users in The Netherlands, but 150,000 alcohol problems. Because The Netherlands is considered by the rest of the world as the country where everything is possible as far as drugs are concerned, 80 per cent of our clinic drug patients are foreigners, from the United States, Italy, Southern Europe."

Marcel Bougie, director of the Drug Prevention and Treatment Service in Quebec, said "more alcohol is consumed by young people. They drink more."

Bougie said as far as hard drugs are concerned, "the panic period is over. Young people know how to take drugs, and the population is learning how to live with this phenomenon."

"Alcohol remains the U.S.' No. 1 drug problem," said Donald A. McCune, director of the California Drug Education Program. "It is increasing at a rate far exceeding other drugs. There is also an increasing number of persons using heroin since the Vietnam war. It has spread like a shotgun rather than a ripple."

A delegate from Denmark said alcoholism has spread to 12-year-olds — "we have 12-year-old alcoholics in our clinic."

Belgium's biggest problem is alcoholism although narcotics misuse has increased from four arrests in 1964 to 321 arrests in 1971, delegates said. Belgium started its first drug study program only in September.

Czechoslovak and Bulgarian delegations announced that, except for an increase in the use of alcohol, drugs are no problem in their communist countries, statements that brought smiles from other delegations.

PART-TIME DEGREE LIKELY AT ST. F.X.

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — A part-time studies program with no residency or full-time study requirements has been approved in principle by the St. Francis Xavier University senate. The program is designed for those persons prohibited by social or economic conditions from attending university full time. The proposal would allow a student to obtain a general degree without spending one year of full-time study at the university campus. If approved, the project would be implemented next year. Initially it would be offered in arts and business administration.

CREDIT VICTIMS NEED ASSISTANCE

VANCOUVER (CP) — People who live in a credit and consumer goods-oriented society must be given help if that society's pressures plunge them into debt, a consumers conference was told this week.

Philippe Gibeau, chairman of Alberta's Debtors Assistance Board, said Canadian consumers owed $1 billion in 1950. By 1970, the amount had increased to $11 billion.

The number of persons seen by the assistance board, an agency of the Alberta government, rose over the same period from 580 in 1959 to 6,089 in 1970.

"This clearly indicates that the more credit there is available, the more credit casualties there will be," Gibeau told the conference.

The meeting was sponsored by the Consumer Action League Society and the Vancouver Community Legal Assistance Society.

Gibeau said the assistance board is empowered to advise and discuss debts with debtors, to act as a liaison between persons who owe money and their creditors and to help draw up plans for the orderly repayment of debts.

The DAB, he said, can also appear in court to oppose foreclosures and garnishees and seek extensions of time so debtors can try and meet financial obligations.

Gibeau said the board has no coercive powers and must rely on what he called "the art of gentle persuasion" to ease matters between debtors and their creditors.

He said there is a growing need across Canada for increased debt-counselling services for people who go into debt because of easy credit arrangements and the pressure to buy consumer goods.

No single segment of the country's population is free from the problem of debt, he said, but the effect is worse on low income families who find it hard enough to purchase the basic requirements of life without finding extra cash to meet time payments.

Fruit pudding is topped with all-purpose sauce

Two Sauces Add Crowning Touch To Puddings

By MARY MOORE

Cooks, who know they are going to be overwhelmed with visiting families and guests for Christmas dinner, are writing asking for former years' cake recipes, shortbread, cookies that will keep and steamed puddings.

Several want steamed puddings that are "not too rich".

Today I will give you the pudding and two sauces to serve with it — spicy hard sauce and a lovely hot pudding sauce.

STEAMED FRUIT PUDDING
(not rich — serves 12)

1 c. beef suet, ground or finely chopped (packed)
1 c. dark brown sugar
3 eggs — yolks and white separated
1 c. milk
¼ c lemon juice
1 c. chopped dates (see note below)
One and one third c. raisins (see note below)
1 c. chopped nuts (I used cashews)
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ tsp. powdered ginger
2 c. breadcrumbs (gently packed)
2 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt

If desired substitute 2½ cups chopped apples for the raisins and dates.

In beater bowl cream suet and sugar together until light and creamy. With beaters on "low" add all remaining ingredients except egg whites and beat to combine. Remove beaters and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. (I beat the whites in a small bowl with a hand rotary beater.)

With two buttered 2-inch wide strips heavy brown paper, crisscrossing, line buttered 6-cup mould (to facilitate removal). Turn in pudding batter. Cover top with doubled foil and tie it on with string.

Lower into large pot or steamer containing enough boiling water to come half way up mould. Cover pot and steam 4 hours. Water should be gently boiling. Replenish water as necessary.

This pudding may be made any time now but if it is in an aluminum mould it must be removed when you store it. To reheat for Christmas dinner (return to mould if necessary) lower into hot water and steam 1 hour.

Serve with hard sauce or all-purpose pudding sauce.

SPICY HARD SAUCE
(serves 12)

Make all of this for it is very popular. It keeps perfectly too, if some is leftover.

2 c. icing sugar (well packed)
½ c. butter
¼ tsp. salt
2 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. cloves

Put all ingredients in beater bowl and beat until perfectly blended and creamy. Pile in a mound on your most attractive shallow bowl. Peak the top up with a fork, sprinkle lightly with nutmeg. Chill until hard. Serve with hot steamed pudding. This hard sauce may be made three or four days in advance and covered with saran and stored in refrigerator.

ALL-PURPOSE HOT PUDDING SAUCE
(makes 2½ cups)

Two thirds c. dark brown sugar
2 Tbsp. corn starch
¼ tsp. salt
2 c. boiling water
¼ c. butter
¼ c. lemon juice

In a medium pot mix well together the sugar, corn starch and salt. When thoroughly mixed stir in boilding water and cook stirring until thick. Remove from heat and add butter and lemon juice.

If desired this pouring sauce may be made in advance and reheated at dessert time.

Revitalizing your nerves is a small 32-page booklet, packed with sound advice. It points out, for example, that by subjecting your nervous system to prolonged, undue stress, you may make yourself physically ill, because nervous stress causes a chemical imbalance in the body.

To minimize such stress you should learn how to relax. The booklet presents several illustrated relaxation exercises and suggestions how to obtain restful sleep.

A famous British nerve specialist believes that people who are overly nervous do not drink enough wated. The color of your urine will indicate if this applies to you. This specialist believes that by drinking enough water people could prolong their lives by 10 or 15 years. Two or three glasses of water should be drunk first thing in the morning and one glass should be sipped just before going to bed.

The booklet also urges you to cope better with your problems. Among the golden rules for a happier outlook on life is learning to live one day at a time, facing reality without fear and having faith in something beyond oneself.

New Science Minister Won't Forget People

Science Minister Jeanne Sauve

OTTAWA (CP) — Jeanne Sauve, the new federal science minister, considers social science research one of the important duties of her ministry and says research policies in any country have to include social sciences.

"People are the ones affected by science and technology," she said in an interview this week.

"We are very far ahead in our technology and we have to address ourselves to the ways that we can adapt our technology to people."

Social Sciences

Although she would not comment specifically on any policies of her ministry —"You couldn't expect me to, I'm still being orientated" —she did say in general terms that she considers social sciences extremely important.

"In developing a national policy for research, we certainly have to include the social sciences," she said.

"There's no doubt in the world that they would be part of policy . . . It's so obvious."

Sauve, 50, a former journalist-broadcaster and a freshman MP for the Montreal riding of Ahuntsic, was given the science portfolio two weeks ago in the cabinet shuffle following the October election.

The minister is the first woman in the cabinet since Judy La Marsh, then secretary of state, retired from politics at the time of the 1968 election.

Only three women Liberals were elected Oct. 30. All were from Quebec and Sauve was the only one appointed to the cabinet.

Her appointment pleased her, she said, and she is anxious to take up the challenge of a cabinet position. It did create some difficulties in arranging her personal life, however, although she already had adjusted to the idea of a heavy work load because a minority government was returned.

One major problem was breaking into the new job so quickly.

She will continue to keep her home in Montreal where her husband, former Liberal forestry minister Maurice Sauve, now is a vice-president of Consolidated Bathurst Ltd.

Her 13-year-old son Jean-Francois, is in school in Montreal. Sauve said he's quite enthused at having a mother who is a minister.

She will live in Ottawa with a widowed sister during the week and commute on weekends to Montreal, where she also will look after constituency responsibilities.

Her role in Ottawa now will be much different from when she was here as a cabinet minister's wife, she said.

"That was a social role," she said. "I never opened my mouth then."

Asked if she was concerned about her appointment to the science position when her background was not in science, Sauve said she felt she had a lot to learn, but she was not unduly disturbed.

She had been one of the founding members of the Institute for Research on Public Policy, a government-sponsored think-tank which was appointed to advise the cabinet on future policy for Canada.

This institute has looked into some of the areas where science policy might be applied and has considered some of the problems that she now is likely to meet in her cabinet post.

Public Affairs

As well, she was a free-lance broadcaster preparing public affairs programs for both English-and French-language networks, so she is informed on many policy areas in a general way.

Despite her lack of specific knowledge on science subjects, she feels she can contribute to the ministry from these points of view.

She was concerned about women's problems and part of her reason for seeking a parliamentary seat was "the problems that touch women." However, she said she did not believe she would have to be a spokesman for women in the cabinet.

"I am confident that the other two women will see to this problem as well."

Speaking generally — "I cannot speak about specific issues in the ministry yet" —she believes Canada must identify areas of need and specify policies and ways to meet these.

Some of the areas of research "that we have to treat with great regard" include undersea continental boundaries, climate, bilingualism, natural resources and cultural components of a nation.

No Laughing Matter —Call Your Lawyer

DEAR ABBY: By coincidence, a woman named Bonnie has a phone number similar to ours, and I keep getting calls for her. My wife works at nights and I am home alone in the evening so I started having a little fun when people would call up asking for Bonnie.

One night last week a guy called for Bonnie and I said she was in the shower but she'd be out in a minute. The guy on the other end of the phone said, "Well, I'm her husband and you'd better be out of that house before I get home or I'll blow your head off!" Then he hung up.

That evening on the TV news they reported a local shooting. It seemed a husband came home and found his wife with another guy so he shot him, and the guy was in critical condition. The husband admitted the shooting, and said he warned the guy on the phone to get out of his house.

Bonnie's name and address were in the evening newspaper, so I looked it up in the phone book and the number was the same as ours — only the last two numbers were reversed!

Now this has taught me a lesson, but here's my question: Should I confess this phone bit to the authorities?—Strictly Confidential.

DEAR CON: Whether it will make a difference to the authorities to learn that the husband thought he had given the victim fair warning is anybody's guess. But in matters that deal with the law, tell your story to a lawyer and let him handle it. This is no laughing matter.

DEAR ABBY: I am a singer and have been told by many that I should sing professionally, but I prefer to remain an amateur because I have family obligations, which I consider more important than a career.

Recently I was invited to sing for a local civic club. I rehearsed many hours on a well-planned program and presented it from memory perfectly. (I accompanied myself on the piano). Afterwards, I received no gift, nor memento for my performance, nor did I receive as much as a "thank you" note from the organization. Furthermore, when the event was reported in the newspaper, my name was omitted.

I have found that this has happened to many musicians who have been asked to play for civic and social organizations. It's even happened when musicians are asked to play or sing at weddings and funerals.

Why are people and reporters so thoughtless?—Never Sing Again.

DEAR NEVER: I don't know, but I'm sure your complaint is valid because I have heard it often.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thursday, Dec. 14, 1972

BY SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Old ways, procedures could be cast aside. Be ready for new start in different direction. Stress originality. Bring forth creative resources. Emphasize personality, personal appearance. Wear bright colors.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Unusual situation exists in connection with employment, dependents. Something probably is occoring behind scenes. Don't rush to judgement. Weigh various factors. Time is on your side. You could be on brink of discovery.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friendship takes unusual turn. Don't take people too seriously. In affairs of heart, some prove fickle. Maintain balance and humor. Avoid scattering forces. Light touch wins. Take overall view. Leave details for another time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick to facts. Let rumors go — insist on valid information, not rumor. Essential now to be aware of basics. Fancy techniques will not suffice. Key is to dig deep and get to heart of matters.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on journeys, major decision. Obtain hint from Cancer message. Get puzzle pieces together. Analyze and synthesize. Find reasons. Reject superficiality. If persistent, needed information is obtained.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Different approach is necessary in connection with investments, financial transactions. Home, family commitments should be considered. You gain through diplomacy. Persuade key person that change of procedures is abvisable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Study Virgo message. What you thought was secure may be otherwise. Check assets. Get accountin. Count change. Mate, partner may be misinformed. Eschew wishful thinking. Go after facts, especially where money is concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Nothing now occurs halfway—it is all or nothing. Know it and prepare accordingly. Pace yourself. Check appointments, including medical, dental. You may be called upon to perform unusual service.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): More persons are attracted to you. You gain universal appeal. Now is time to put product, ideas on market. Many people come to you for advice. But in personal life, there could be lovers' quarrel.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.19): New start indicated; accent is on security, building, elimination of safety hazards. Leo could play prominent role. Key now is to reach understanding with one at top who holds views contrary to your own.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hold off on major decisions. You require more time to absorb available information. Another Aquarian is likely to be in picture. Opposition comes from relative who may be travelling. Avoid scattering your efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Study Aquarius message. Guard assets, valuables, especially while in transit. Social contacts now are fine but business prospects require review. Be flexible. Utilize creativity imagination.

Equal Chance —Almost

OTTAWA (CP) — Women finally will get equal opportunity in the Canadian Armed Forces — almost.

The defence department announced today women will have equal opportunity in a number of officer classifications and other rank trades but will still be excluded from classifications and trades that call for service in primary combat, sea-going duty and duty in isolated areas.

"This new policy is the result of a long study arising from certain recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women and is not linked to any shortage of male applicants for the CAF," the department's news release said.

Under the policy, women will be accepted for such employment as aerospace engineer, air weapons controller, communications and electronics engineer, meteorological technician and machinist.

Present female strength in the forces is 514 officers and 1,143 other ranks. The news release said these numbers are expected to rise to about 2,000 officers and 5,000 other ranks.

The news release said exclusion of women from combat duty is "in keeping with social mores existing in Canada and countries with whom we are militarily and politically aligned."

"The new policy is in line with the government's equal employment opportunities for both sexes," the news release said.

No Time for Why

Into the lives of everyone — man, woman or child — there comes at one time or another, circumstances that confine and hurt. When this happens, it's difficult not to rail at fate and to question why . . . why . . . why?

Only when the person concerned succeeds in overcoming the feeling of being sorry for himself and begins to look ahead again, does the word why lose its power to frustrate and hurt and eventually is forgotten.

That, in a few words, is the way Norman Lidster explains the title of his book, No Time For Why, just off the press and ready for Christmas gift giving.

In case you don't know who Norman Lidster is, let me say immediately this is no idle explanation. He speaks the truth and that truth is gleaned from his own experience.

Blind, partially deaf and completely paralyzed from a particularly vicious form of arthritis, he has created a way of life for himself that keeps him looking ahead.

It's his own story he tells in the book. One that started with a normal boyhood and teen years up to the age of 18.

Around then rheumatoid arthritis in its most virilent form commenced its inroads and gradually over the years it has blinded and stiffened Lidster from heel to toe.

The time eventually came when he was unable to perform the simplest acts most people take for granted, such as turning in bed, dressing and brushing his teeth.

His way of living required co-operation and assistance first of his parents (especially his mother), then his family and finally of many men and women.

In his book he touches lightly on his sufferings, and rather recounts with quiet humor, incidents in hospital life observations about patients, staff and other people he has come in contact with over the years.

Gradually as his story evolves, you are aware of a change in his thinking, from despair to a deep urge to shape his life in a fuller richer way. With no more brooding over his immobility, grieving about his disabilities or asking that unanswerable question why?

With the help of many people he started going for walks in a wheelchair, to concerts, to the legislature, to club meetings and he participated in many other activities. Events that now have become his normal way of living.

No Time For Why was constructed first in Lidster's mind, then dictated to a tape recorder.

During the eight years it took to complete the story at least 40 loyal friends and volunteers helped by preparing drafts, typing manuscripts, checking facts, making phone calls and gathering up the bits and pieces.

The book has a full share of photographs, cartoons and other illustrations. It's filled with humorous incidents.

Much of the work was done at Mount St. Mary, where Lidster has lived now for some years. Many of you have seen him in his wheelchair sitting under a tree on the boulevard in front of this building.

In his book he tells you of the sounds he hears when he is there and how he developed the ability to name those sounds and place them in proper perspective.

A game, he calls it. And somehow, as you read this fact, you hear him laugh.

Copies of No Time For Why are available at the Victoria branch of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, on Blanshard Street.

By the time you read this they will also be on book shelves in some Victoria stores. The CNIB office will give you these outlets if you telephone there.

In a Family Page article Tuesday, the price of the new Preserve-A-Life course now being offered in Victoria was given as $21 due to a typographical error.

NFU Book Helps Producer, Consumer

WINNIPEG (CP) — A book designed to illustrate how producers and consumers are exploited by the concentration of economic and political power in Canada's food industry is to be prepared by the women of the National Farmers Union.

Evelyn Potter of Biggar, Sask., women's president of the union, told delegates as the third annual convention opened this week that the project is designed to involve women at "all levels."

"It will be a learning process for our numbers through the research they will be involved in and it will serve as reference material for all those who read it, both in rural communities and the cities."

Potter said the book should provide a greater awareness of the food industry and of the food industry and "serve in building stronger alliances with rural-urban groups throughout Canada."

Originally planned to be completed by the end of 1972, the project was suspended because of inadequate financing, she said.

"We plan to begin this project in the near future."

The book is expected to show food production processing and distribution patterns and also provide alternatives to the consumer through recipes and different means of food preparation.

Potter said it was evident the union could not "do a proper job without making use of women's energies and capacities."

"We in the union should be proud that we have recognized the need for special status for women and have built this principle into the constitution."

But, she emphasized more effort must be made to involve women effectively, particularly at the local level.

Much of the discrimination against women today in Canada is socially acceptable and it exists in many locals and districts of the union.

"In many . . . women are not considered equal in the area where it really counts, having a say in policies, being part of presentations to governmental bodies which influence the direction of policies."

She urged the delegates, both men and women, to work together as a team through the union organization and in so doing increase their understanding of each other and other people.

Abortions Rise 33%; B.C. Has Highest Rate

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of abortions in the first six months of 1972 increased by nearly 33 per cent over the same period in 1971, Statistics Canada reported this week.

Hospitals reported 18,801 abortions on Canadian residents in the first half of 1972, up from 14,168 for the same period in 1971. As well, there were 16 abortions performed on women with foreign residence.

In terms of the number of live births, the abortion rate is one for every 10 live births or 10.1 per cent.

The figures were reported in the daily bulletin issued by the health and welfare division of Statistics Canada.

All provinces showed increases compared with rates for the first half of 1971. The largest increase in actual numbers was in Ontario, where there were 9,844 abortions in six months of 1972 compared with 7,267 in the same period in 1971—an increase of 35 per cent.

The largest percentage increases were in the Yukon and Northwest Territories. They showed an increase of 300 per cent, based on half-year figures of 24 in 1972 and 6 in 1971.

Newfoundland, which reported 77 abortions in the first half of 1972 compared with 30 in the same period in 1971, had a percentage increase of 156 per cent.

British Columbia again had the highest rate of all provinces, the report said, with 22.4 abortions for every 100 live births. However, it showed the smallest increase —16 per cent—compared with the 1971 period.

Newfoundland had the lowest abortion rate with 1.2 abortions for 100 live births.

UVic Stage Vehicle For David

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Theatre of the 15th century was wholly a people's theatre and wholly religious in inspiration, theme and expression.

The first dramas were part of the church festivals and ceremonies and when they came outside the church into the marketplaces and town squares, they retained their liturgical character.

The Wakefield Cycle, for example, contains 32 plays that start with God's creation of the world and end with Doomsday.

Turning point in the cycle is that part that deals with the Nativity and it is from this part that the UVic theatre department will offer the Second Shepherd's Play and The Adoration of the Magi in special Christmas season performances.

These will be presented Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the university's Maltwood Museum at Royal Oak.

Director of the plays is London-born David Parry, a graduate of Hull University in England, who is working for his Master's degree at UVic, in theatre and English.

His special interest is medieval theatre and he also intends to pursue studies in Oriental theatre, probably at the University of Hawaii where there are excellent comparative courses in East-West theatre.

Parry sys he decided to seek his MA in Victoria on the recommendation of a Canadian professor at Hull.

"I had made up my mind to seek a change in educational environment," he says, "so I took his advice and came here in September."

Concerning the Wakefield plays, Parry says that they were originally set up on pageant wagons and moved about from one outdoor setting to another — "so the staging has had to be adapted from outside to inside."

"They're very emblematic. The audience identifies the various characters by the things they carry or wear or their manner.

"The actors also have to establish where they are by what they tell you and by their actions."

Costume colors, for example, are chosen to help the symbolism, he explains Inspiration for the costumes is taken from 15th century painting, stained glass, wood carvings and so forth.

"The angel you see is not the all-white of later convention but in jewel-like colors in keeping with the medieval painter's view."

Music that accompanies the two plays signifies "divine intervention in human affairs," and will be played from the Maltwood gallery which elevates the divinities from the mortals below.

Chris Butterfield, who is responsible for the music, has selected compositions from the 15th Century and they will be performed on the antique instruments of the period.

Peter McKinnon as Herod and Christine Puhl as the Angel in the Wakefield Cycle play, The Adoration of the Magi, at Maltwood Museum this week.

Wins $290.00 in time for Christmas! Mrs. F. Hall, of 1711 Coronation St. will be on a spending spree Downtown after winning $290.00 Christmas shopping dollars. Mrs. Hall correctly identified Royal Trust as the Downtown Business of the Day on C-FAX. Mr. Candlish of Royal Trust is presenting the money to Mrs. Hall.

South Seas Dreams Hard to Realize

BALI, Indonesia (AP) — Every hour on Bali some tourist, overcome by visions of Gauguin and food prices, announced he is staying. But only a few outsiders have settled here, and they're an unlikely bunch.

Anyone can name the resident westerners: four painters, a few restauranteurs and innkeepers, some missionaries and a handful of others. Fewer than half a dozen are Indonesian citizens.

"It's not easy to stay," says painter Han Snel, 47, who came in 1950 as a Dutch soldier and dug in. He married a gorgeous Balinese, whom he kidnapped in traditional fashion, and took up citizenship.

"Everyone wants to settle here," he said. "But they need a work permit, they need this and that. And I'm happy about it because otherwise we'd have a second Spain. Myself? I'm white but an Indonesian."

Work permits and long-term visas, if granted, require much effort, money, luck and usually a friend in Jakarta. Indonesian passports are a lot harder. The governor must personally approve any lease of land to a foreigner.

WON SUKARNO'S FAVOR

Each resident here has his own story. Tony Pogenic, once a Yugoslav footoball hero who coached Indonesia's eleven, was granted a corner of Bali by grateful leaders.

Painter Antonia Blanco, born in the Philippines to Spanish parents and now a naturalized American, was let in by the late President Sukarno who liked his work.

Others, like Captian Jack from Turkey Creek, Ky., just stay arond on regularly renewed work permits. Jack has been the star, and sometimes only, pilot for the interisland Zamrud Aairways since 1968.

Bob Hargrove, a San Franciscan who first came out as catering manager to the 10-storey Bali Beach Hotel, settled in the hills with his own restaurant.

Hargrove collects Balinese art and weird experiences. He had a motorcycle, he says, until all four cooks decided to ride it to town and ended wheels-up in a rice paddy.

BURNED PASSPORT

With tourism building up, there is a slight loosening. New York publisher Malcolm Forbes is being allowed to build a large estate to the south and John Pillsbury, of the flour family, is putting up a villa-style hotel.

Just a few years ago, local lore recounts, an Australian millionaire tried to invest in a tourism project. He was so frustrated that he offered to underwrite a high school education for every child on Bali if he was permitted to come in, but was still refused.

Some young travellers at Kuta simply ignore the rules and stay around until immigration authorities deport them.

One American told officials he no longer had a passport — he burned it as an offering to the Hindu god Shiva.

Although the foreigners on Bali know each other and consider themselves friends, generally, there is no real community.

KKK Going Legitimate . . . Rebuilding Empire on PR

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan that ruled Indiana with pagentry and terror in the 1920s says it is rebuilding its empire in the 1970s with ballots, bumper stickers and ballpoint pens.

The hooded order now holds conventions at Holiday Inns and files complaints with the Indiana Civil Liberties Union.

In rural areas, it is not unusual to see Klan posters nailed to telephone poles and KKK daubed on a weathered barn in a cornfield. In urban areas, a few stores display signs that read TWAK-Trade With a Klansman.

Grand Dragon William Chaney, a part-time paperhanger in Indianapolis, says Indiana's Klan "is the largest and most open north of the Mason-Dixon line."

Chaney won't divulge the membership, but police say there are 500 Klansmen in 15 units, or Klaverns, throughout this state of 11 million persons. Police who have infiltrated the Klan say that, five years ago, the membership was virtually zero.

They attribute the resurgence to a backlash against court-ordered school busing and Chaney's salesmanship.

TRAIN VIGILANTES

Chaney, 50, the son of a Baptist minister and grandson of a Kentucky sheriff, says:

"Our new Klan doesn't want to burn and destroy. We're going to bring change in the political arena. If we use violence, we might as well blow our own brains out."

But, if the ballot box doesn't work, King Kleagle Paul Book, a jukebox repairman in Mikkomo, readily admits the Klan will use other means.

"We are training vigilantes and will use them for self-defence if blacks, socialists and Communists take over and we lose individual freedom," says Book.

The Klan claims to be organizing junior Klans in racially troubled schools, giving them robes, training them in karate, law, pamphleteering and public speaking. Klan literature promises its young converts "intelligence materials" about the Black Panthers and Students for a Democratic Society.

Crude crosses still are burned for intimidation, say police.

Virtulent literature about "Communistic niggerism" still appears in manufacturing plants, suburban neighborhoods and high schools. The Klan still has its brushes with the law over weapons permits, illegal mailings, court injunctions and alleged possession of dynamite.

SEEKS NEW IMAGE

But the heritage of the night rider and the taint of violence is being played down in favor of slogans of law and order and policital change.

Chaney says Indiana is especially fertile ground because it also is the fountainhead of the John Birch Society and the American Legion. But Indiana is only one of the clearest examples of a nationwide campaign to recruit members and legitimize the Klan.

The Indiana Klan plans to open its first public state headquarters in Indianapolis and obtain a listed telephone number.

In the 1920s the Klan openly elected a governor, senators and numerous state and local officials. Today Chaney says the Klan endorses candidates but dares not identify openly with them.

Acupuncture Graduation

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Acupuncture Association held its first convocation Tuesday night. Five graduates of a three-year course sponsored by the association received diplomas.

The courses are given by association president Oscar Wexu who studied acupuncture in France and has practised it here for 21 years.

Three recipients of diplomas are naturopaths and a fourth is a chiropractor. The other has no previous medical experience.

Hunch Proves Correct

BOSTON (AP) — Catherine Epstein, 60, of Boston, became the Massachusetts lottery's ninth million-dollar winner Monday night, a feat she had expected to accomplish. Mrs. Epstein, a hat check woman for the Hotel Lenox here, said: "I just had that feeling I would win." She will receive $50,000 a year for 20 years.

GAGLARDI

PHIL SPENT $17,941.99

KAMLOOPS — Defeated Social Credit candidate Phil Gaglardi spent $17,941.99 on his campaign in Kamloops for the Aug. 30 election.

The amount was nearly double the $9,214 spent by New Democratic Party candidate Gerry Anderson, who defeated Gaglardi.

Little Sarah's Chatter Helps Save Mother

FAREHAM, England — Telephone operator Eileen Smith kept the little girl talking, asking her about Santa Clause and other things about Christmas.

Mrs. Smith said she kept Sarah Jane Chase, four, chattering for 15 minutes Tuesday while engineers traced the telephone number of the Chase home, where the girl's mother lay unconscious and bleeding.

When ambulancemen reached the house, Sarah Jane was still talking. Doctors said the girl probably helped prevent her mother from bleeding to death.

Mrs. Smith said the drama began when Mrs. Chase, bleeding from injuries sustained when she fell through a window pane, telephoned for help but collapsed before she could give her address.

"A little girl came to the phone and said her mummy was asleep," Mrs. Smith said. "I kept her talking for 15 minutes. We talked about Christmas and what Santa was going to bring her."

Krieghoff Gets The Last Laugh

OTTAWA — Cornelius Krieghoff, a painter who always emyhasized people in his pictures, would no doubt be pleased to know that he has helped to slow down the machine age a century after his death.

His winter scene, The Blacksmith's Shop, reproduced on a commemorative postage stamp, is causing problems with automatic cancellation in post offices.

Light-sensitive cancellation machines in main cities across the country have been rejecting letters and Christmas cards that carry it.

The machines, soon to be replaced by new ones working on a different system, operate by picking out the stamp as a dark blob.

The new stamp is not dark enough.

HIS FIRST WISH WAS A WHISKY

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Thirteen years after losing his title as poet laureate of Cuba, 86-year-old Agustine Acosta left his homeland to live with his daughter in Florida.

The first thing he asked for was a shot of whisky.

He wanted a little sip of whisky," said Mrs. Michael Torres, his adopted daughter, after Acosta and his second wife, Consuelo, 62, arrived here Tuesday.

Acosta and his wife were among the 85 Cubans arriving in Miami Tuesday on the second Freedom Flight in six months.

"I didn't want to leave the country which I served as a senator and poet laureate," Acosta said after arriving at the Miami airport's Cuban refugee reception centre.

"But what could I do? They're not the same people anymore."

Acosta was named Cuba's "national poet" by the Congress in 1955.

He was stripped of the honor shortly after Premier Fidel Castro came to power in 1959.

Since 1959, he had lived in retirement on the $400-a-month pension the Castro regime allowed him to receive.

It's a Boy!

HOLLYWOOD — Recording star Helen Reddy, whose current pop hit is I Am Woman, gave birth Tuesday to an eight-pound, four-ounce boy.

The 31-year-old singer named her son Jordan Sommers Wald, the first child of her five-year marriage to Jeff Wald, 29.

GENEVA—Drug cultist Timothy Leary has been given a final deadline of Dec. 31 to leave Switzerland and is looking for a "suitable country," his Swiss lawyer said today.

Lawyer Horace Mastronardi said there is no question of Leary being extradited to the United States.

"We don't know yet where he will go. We are looking for a suitable country," the lawyer said.

Leary fled prison in California in 1970.

He was serving a one-to-10-year sentence for possession of drugs.

Leary first went to Algeria and then in 1971 came to Switzerland.

BAUGHURST, England — Municipal officials have commended bus driver Tony Harrison, 32, for running 15 miles in the rain in order to get to work in time to start his bus run on schedule. Harrison said he ran the distance when his motor scooter failed to start.

MACHYNLETH, Wales — Each time city workers sprinkle poisonous powder on the streets to try to kill pideons, Edith Vaughan, 69, sweeps it up.

"The town council is taking legal advice to try to stop me," she said. "But I will keep right on doing it. It's cruel."

LONDON — A London newspaper says that King Bhumibol of Thailand, a jazz-loving saxophonist, will play with the Rolling Stones when the British pop group tours the Far East next month.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The mayor of Knoxville and a lawyer for soul singer James Brown say the entertainer's weekend arrest here apparently resulted from a misunderstanding.

Brown, who said he had been beaten by police, had threatened to file a $1-million damage suit against the city as a result of the incident.

Saanich Ice Vote 'Frozen'

Saanich residents should not expect to vote on a skating rink referendum before the end of February in view of the B.C. government's proposed grant for one-third of the cost of recreation projects.

Acting mayor Leslie Passmore, who is also chairman of council's indoor recreation committee, said he had been in touch with Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall to try to learn more about the grant.

But he concluded that until a bill is brought before the next sitting of the legislature, which opens in late January, specific details will not be known.

The consensus in the provincial secretary's department seems to indicate an outright grant retroactive to Aug. 30, 1972, Passmore said. It appeared obvious the grant would not be established by order in council.

Saanich council is committed to prepare a borrowing bylaw for a second ice surface and present it to ratepayers at the earliest opportunity, which Passmore said still stands. The council resolution was adopted in the fall.

"In my opinion (this means) early in the New Year," he said.

But meanwhile, the indoor recreation committee will not be in a position to study data being assembled by municipal staff until there has been an opportunity to peruse a private operator's proposal for arena development, Passmore said.

If a bylaw referendum were put before details of a provincial grant are known, or before the private developer's plan were spelled out, the ratepayers could legitimately ask why, the chairman pointed out.

He said he thought there would be no difficulty in dealing with the private offer — by Burnaby-based Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd. — once council has discussed the question of available land.

In the absence until next week of Mayor Hugh Curtis no further discussion is anticipated, Passmore said.

Aid From Ottawa Pleases Passmore

B.C.'s success in negotiating more federal support for social service costs is encouraging to municipalities, Saanich acting mayor Leslie Passmore said Tuesday.

Passmore said he was hopeful Prime Minister Trudeau's reversal of an earlier decision not to increase the federal share of welfare costs is a sign of further relief for local governments.

Saanich has been in the forefront of municipalities seeking to have the education tax entirely removed from property taxation and to have the social service burden cost eased or assumed entirely by senior governments.

"I am quite sure we will continue to press for the elimination of these taxes," Passmore said.

Ald. Frank Waring had said education tax must go — along with the homeowner grant

Over several years Saanich has pressed for tax reform at the local-provincial level through resolutions to the Union of B.C. Municipalities, which in turn has presented briefs to the B.C. government.

Canadian chefs win gold medal at Culinary Olympics with Butterball Turkey

At the recent International Culinary Olympics in Frankfurt, Germany a team of top Chefs from the Canadian Federation of Chefs de Cuisine won a total of eight gold medals and showed the world that Canadian cuisine is really something to be proud of.

Because every single Butterball promises moist, juicy tenderness slice after slice you can assure your family tempting Butterball Turkey meals this holiday season. Just choose the right size Butterball and perhaps try the recipe the Canadian chefs made famous at the Olympics.

(Enough for a 16-18 lb Turkey)

1 medium-sized loaf French bread
1 cup milk
½ cup chopped onions
2 tablespoons butter
1 lb. minced pork shoulder
1 teaspoon ground savoury
½ cup parsley sprigs
2 cups chestnuts
2 eggs beaten
salt and pepper to taste

1. Gash the ends of the chestnuts. Cover with boiling water and simmer 20 minutes. Remove shells and skins. Chop coarsely.
2. Cut the bread in large chunks (about 12 cups) and soak in milk.
3. Sauté the onions and pork in butter until brown.
4. Put the bread, onion-pork mixture, savoury and parsley through the food chopper.
5. Add the chopped chestnuts. Season to taste.
6. Blend in the beaten eggs.
7. Stuff turkey lightly.
8. Roast as directed on giblet bag.

Illiteracy in Canada Attacked by Professor

By BERNIE GOEDHART

EDMONTON (CP) — It's difficult to think of illiteracy as something existing in a growing, technological society.

More often, it's thought of in terms of the past or in terms of underdeveloped countries.

Yet Eric Robinson, director of continuing education at Edmonton's Grant MacEwan College, warns there could be 10,000 illiterates in this city alone, and says something must be done to alleviate the situation.

"We can no longer afford to bury our heads in the sand and pretend that a problem doesn't exist," he said in an interview.

Mr. Robinson defines illiteracy, when applied to an industrial, technological society, as meaning an inability to form the letters of the alphabet—primary illiteracy—or a lack of the minimum requirements to be flexible and trainable—functional illiteracy.

"If you call them illiterate it leaves a nasty little taste in the mouth. The preferred term is educationally handicapped."

But the term "illiteracy" instantly conveyed the gravity of the situation.

Mr. Robinson said that 3.8 per cent of Alberta's population has a Grade 5 education or less, and that the national average is five per cent.

A Grade 6 level is "operable" in Canada, he said, "but someone under Grade 6 is looked upon as hopeless and just a welfare case."

And this is where Mr. Robinson disagrees.

Instead of shuffling these people off on welfare, he suggested the government spend its funds on adult basic education to raise the illiterates to an operable level.

It would be money well spent—"better than keeping them on welfare"—and would open up a source of labor at present untapped.

"We're trying to draw some attention to the primary illiterate," Mr. Robinson said. "He's been sort of given up on."

Mr. Robinson first became involved in the plight of the illiterate while principal of Frontier College, a private voluntary agency based in Toronto, which provides adult education, recreational and community services to northern communities and "problem communities such as the outports of Newfoundland." He was principal from 1954 until 1971, when he joined Grant MacEwan College.

In 1963, Frontier College conducted a three-month pilot project in adult education with 19 men living in residence at Elliot Lake, Ont.

During those three months, "we had no dropouts," said Mr. Robinson.

The project had considerable success.

"There was a hardrock miner . . . who'd been earning a lot of money . . . (until he had an accident in a mine.

"We tested his IQ and established it about 130. We tested him on arithmetic and reading and found he was at the Grade 3 level."

After three months, "we left him at the Grade 7 level."

Another man, who had worked as a boilermaker's helper, "got upgraded to a level where he could be classified as undereducated and could qualify for the Program Five level (a section of the old dominion-provincial agreement dealing with the training of an unemployed person)."

During the years with Frontier College—"When we were teaching hundreds of illiterates and were in contact with thousands in the North" — agencies such as UNESCO were reporting that the problem of illiteracy didn't apply to Canada, said Mr. Robinson.

"But we're not in the lead as we think we are. . . ."

He said there is evidence that many of those cast aside as hopeless can be educated. "With Frontier College, I can document an average of 25 to 30 per year who actually moved from total illiteracy."

But there must be incentive "If a person has to just get an education, he won't. He'll get drunk and quit.

The 'Perfect Sailboat' Needs Nothing . . . So Far

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Build a better mousetrap, goes the old saying, and the world will beat a path to your door. Gerald Holtom has improved on that by building what he claims is a better yacht — faster, safer and cheaper to construct than conventional types.

An artist and designer who lives on the Channel coast at Hythe, Kent, Holtom has spent four years evolving his craft, which he calls the Foiler. A vessel of shallow draft with no keel, it has a mono hull with hydrofoils supported by twin booms and carries the rig of a Tornado catamaran but with a slightly larger jib.

Its inventor claims it is "unsinkable, non-heeling, self-righting and self-steering" and that its hydrofoils, lifting it out of the water, give it a speed potential twice that of the prevailing winds. Furthermore, it needs no harbor or marina, being designed to run up a beach, aided if necessary by beaching wheels lowered from the hydrofoil booms.

Holtom, a tall man of 59 with craggy good looks under a thatch of white hair, had never designed a yacht before although he has sailed most classes of dinghy. He got the idea after a meeting four years ago with Dr. John Morwood of Hythe, a pioneer of catamarans, trimarans and proas who had been working on hydrofoil yacht designs since 1954.

Holtom's plan was to adapt his old 30-foot lifeboat to provide a fast cruising vessel for himself and his family which could be run up Hythe's shingle beach without expensive mooring facilities.

"The catamaran can't really develop much more, or its structure becomes heavier and more complex," he said in an interview. "In a mono hull, all the strength is concentrated in the centre."

Working first from scale models, he built a 26-foot version for open-sea testing and has just completed the hull of a 52-foot model which will sleep seven persons. Eventually, he dreams of a 72-foot version which he reckons could carry 50 passengers across the Channel — a non-polluting form of transport capable of beating conventional ferries by eliminating docking time and putting a new sparkle into travel.

He also sees the basic design adapted to a surfing canoe and, for Canada, a snow yacht. He has had inquiries from as far afield as Singapore, Finland, Hong Kong and the United States, but is disappointed at the lack of response in Britain.

The Foiler is constructed sandwich-fashion of polyester resin with glass fibre enclosing a core of plastic foam. Holtom, who has largely financed his project himself, says materials cost about £800-£900 (about $1,900-$2,150) and mould costs can be kept low. He reckons the 52-foot Foiler could be sold for £10,000 and the 26-foot dayboat version at £1,000.

Block-Builder Talks Language

SASKATOON (CP) — Grade 1 students may soon find themselves building with blocks — creating sentences this time, instead of the castles of their pre-school days.

The blocks, developed by Prof. Robert Scott of the University of Saskatchewan's English department, are designed to teach Grade 1 students the grammar and semantics of written sentences.

Two sets of the color-coded word blocks have been developed—one to teach English and one to teach French. The blocks are based on a new kind of grammar developed by Prof. Scott.

The grammar, called "transformational rhetoric," has all sentences regarded as variations of one basic pattern, subject-verb-object-qualifier. Once this pattern is understood, students can experiment with all possible variations and move from writing sentences to constructing paragraphs, stories and essays.

Prof. Scott found that first-graders, without realizing it, already know a variety of sentence patterns when they picked up while learning to talk.

PUT IN CATEGORIES

The word blocks enable them to use the language they already know in new ways and to develop a more critical awareness of patterns and meanings.

The blocks, resembling children's construction blocks, can be cut from wood or folded out of construction paper, with words painted or pasted on the sides. The words, selected for children at the Grade 1 level, are arranged according to their functions in sentences—verbs on one block, nouns on another, adverbs on another, and so on.

Related words are on blocks of related colors: red for nouns; pink, orange and salmon for the pronouns, adjectives and numbers which replace or qualify nouns; blue for verbs; bluegreen for auxiliaries; yellow for adverbs; black, white and grey for punctuation and structural words.

The two sets of word blocks have been tested with English and French-speaking students in Saskatoon with favorable results. The French-language blocks have also been tested in Paris and a Tunisian school official recently asked about their use.

Doomsday Syndrome Explained

NEW YORK (AP) — A leading British scientist blames "doomsday prophets" in the ecology movement for scaring people with exaggerated predictions and for diverting interest from the big problems: poverty, disease and avoidable death and misery.

"They see the day when we'll breed, starve or poison ourselves to death," said John Maddox, author of The Doomsday Syndrome and editor of the 103-year-old Nature magazine.

"I think it's absurd to say that unless we do something, we'll all be dead."

"The demographic catastrophes which are prominent in the doomsday movement are unreal threats," he wrote in his book, published recently.

Maddox examines the problems of population, pollution and use of natural resources. He acknowledges these are issues to be dealt with in a pragmatic, non-hysterical way.

However, he does not see the popular environment issue as a threat to life on earth. Instead, it's a question of the quality of life and how much money people can afford to pay for it.

In an interview, he added that some ecologists have created an intellectual atmosphere in which people are losing their sense of hope and spirit of adventure.

"People have not been afraid to build large cities, build aircraft, because they felt they could deal with the side-effects," said Maddox, who is concerned that technological advances could be stymied by anti-progress sentiments.

Film City Winner Tops—Regardless

It's what Hollywood calls a "movie movie."

Critics may dismantle the 20th Century-Fox film, as they did "Airport." But "Airport" went on to become the greatest box office picture ever filmed at Universal Studios.

Well, "The Poseidon Adventure" is something of an aquatic "Airport" but with a bigger and better case, more suspense and stark drama.

The story deals with nine ship passengers who attempt to escape a sinking, upside-down luxury liner on its final cruise.

The movie is no "Midnight Cowboy" nor "Easy Rider." It makes no social comment. There is no nudity. No drugs. No homosexuality. And director Ronald Neame doesn't play Freudian numbers in his head.

Audiences come away from "The Poseidon Adventure" wondering why Hollywood doesn't make more movies which simply entertain.

There is nothing esoteric in the story of the characters. The plot is as complicated as "Ben Hur."

Instead of a chariot race, "The Poseidon Adventure" has as its most dramatic moment the New Years celebration in the main saloon of the ship when it suddenly turns turtle after being struck by a mountainous wave caused by an undersea earthquake.

Hundreds of extras—most of them stunt men—are tossed around the screen like rag dolls in one of the most spectacular sequences ever attempted for the movies.

Producer I. Allen devoted three years to shaping up the script, casting, pre-production and finally principal production and editing.

"I think it was worth the three years," said Allen after the picture's initial screening in Hollywood. "We did our best."

Red Buttons was jubilant at the tough Hollywood audience's reaction. "Nobody got up and left," he said. "In fact hardly anyone moved an eyelash. I was watching."

Portions of the picture were filmed aboard the Queen Mary in Long Beach which gave a fullness to the opulence of the sets before the pivotal capsizing scene.

Only the man in the street may like "The Poseidon Adventure" — but he and she will like it very much indeed.

"Thank You!"

I would like to thank most sincerely, all those who helped and supported me during the recent School Board District 61 Election. I pledge untiring effort on your behalf.

This Drunk Tank Endorsed on High

TORONTO (CP) — Somewhere in the LeDain report on the non-medical use of drugs is mention of a Donwood Institute and a Dr. Gordon Bell. The LeDain commission spoke favorably of the institution and the doctor, finding they have achieved a high level of success in working with alcoholics.

Dr. Bell, who has treated addicted drinkers for 26 years, developed his Donwood program five years ago. The commission said he has reformed roughly 50 per cent of his patients. An additional 25 per cent have showed improvement in coping with their problem.

The Donwood Institute works with adult alcoholics, roughly a three-to-one ratio of does not accept people suffermen to women. The institute ing from brain damage, psychosis, character disorders or inability to understand English.

Dr. Bell said his patients are often offensive when first admitted, and some are so depressed that they must first be treated to iron out their depression before beginning the general program of rehabilitation.

GIVEN GROUP THERAPY

The first phase of the program involves dealing with withdrawal reactions and other acute disabilities. The patient then undergoes thorough examinations for physical, psychological and sociological disorders.

The actual rehabilitation program then begins with patients, admitted at a rate of 10 to 12 a week, meeting for a 28-hour program of group therapy. This is scheduled over a period of 2½ weeks and includes lectures, films, physical training and relaxation.

Dr. Bell insists a patient remain at the hospital for a fourweek period and then continue the treatment as an outpatient on a weekly basis for a year.

During the patient's last week at the institute, he meets the people he will be seeing and working with for a year. The "community team" is made up of non-clinical people, housewives for example, hired to keep in regular touch with the patient. The team also includes a former patient of the institute.

FAMILY COURSE VITAL

Also included in the program is an orientation course for family and those close to the patient. Staff members agree that this course is essential to help treat the paient in a new light as a reformed member of society.

Although Dr. Bell said he is open to new ideas, he stands firm in one line of thought—a reformed person must never take a drink again.

Just as a former heroin user might not try heroin again without harm, or a reformed smoker take up cigarette smoking again and keep it controlled, a reformed alcoholic is unable to trust his reactions again with liquor.

"So we don't try to turn people back into social drinkers," Dr. Bell said. "It is not our job to compromise."

Ghost of Christmas Past Invited to Toronto Party

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Anyone who would like a little of the cheerful ghost of Christmas past around the place this year should be able to have some fun helping to evoke him.

You may not be able to chop down your own tree, but making the sort of decorations people made a century ago is not difficult. You might decorate an outdoor tree for the birds, using real things instead of plastic.

The Toronto Historical Board is decorating three 19th-century homes for Christmas.

Colborne Lodge will have a tree done as Dickens described one, with tiny antique toys and marzipan fruit.

Mackenzie House is done to an earlier era pre-dating Christmas trees, with kissing balls, ropes of evergreen and of popcorn and cranberries.

Gibson House will have an outdoor Christmas tree for the birds hung with suet, nuts and seeds, just as they were a century ago.

CHILDREN HELP

Marie Oldham, a board staff member, says every year staff and their children help to make trimmings as families once did.

"A drum is the easiest ornament to make because you can use the tubes from wax paper or whatever."

For each drum, you need a cardboard tube 1½ inches long, red felt ½ inch longer than the tube, black construction paper, a piece of cardboard 1 by 4 inches, two round pieces of cardboard, 12 pins, string or embroidery, thread and needle.

Cover the tube with felt, leaving ¼ inch extra at each end. Sew felt in place. Roll extra felt into each end of the tube. Cut two round pieces of cardboard using the inside diameter of the tube as the pattern. Press the round pieces into each end of the drum.

The rolled cardboard already inside, will prevent them from slipping too far.

Cut a narrow band of black construction paper and place around each end of the drum. Paste or sew to secure. Place six pins on each black band. Lace white string between pins.

MAKING CORNUCOPIAS

For cornucopias, you need: a piece of white cardboard with a radius of 4, 6 or 8 inches, cellophane tape, pieces of fabric ½ inch larger than cardboard, ribbon for handle, scissors, needle and thread. For trimmings you might use velvet, flowers, ribbon, lace, braiding.

Cut a quarter circle from lightweight white cardboard with a radius of 4, 6 or 8 inches. Roll into a cone shape. Overlap edges and secure with invisible cellophane tape.

Cut fabric—brocade satin, velvet—half inch larger than the cone and tape on, turning in fabric edges neatly. Sew overlap. Tape a handle inside cone for hanging.

Colored eggshell baskets were filled with candies.

To make the baskets, you need: clean eggshells with the small end cut off, white glue, box of artificial snow, scraps of trimming such as rickrack, beading, sequins, gold-colored gift wrap cord, scissors, tiny shells, seeds.

Cover the shell with glue and pat on a thick coating of snow. Attach a tiny band of trimming around the top edge or a row of sequins or tiny shells.

Attach a cord for a handle, using glue. Hold the ends in place until the handle is set. Make a little picture design or inscribe initials on egg shell.

The framework for a kissing ball can be made out of five circles of wire. One becomes the "equator," the others the meridians. The board uses them two feet in diameter, but they can be smaller.

Wrap the frame in pliable evergreen. Mrs. Oldham says they use boxwood foliage or myrtle, available from florists.

The whole ball is hung from an archway or ceiling and mistletoe hung from it.

NUDE HIKER HAS TROUBLE GETTING RIDE

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — A 20-year-old hitchhiker stood nude on a corner waving frantically for help, but passing motorists ignored her, police reported.

The Berkeley woman said a man gave her a ride from San Francisco and drove to a deserted warehouse area where he forced her to undress. She said she fled, leaving her clothes behind, when the man tried to attack her.

A reserve police officer noticed the naked woman after she had stood on the corner 10 minutes. He gave her a coat and called Oakland police.

MPs Slate Pen Tour

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Liberal MP Len Marchand said Tuesday he hopes to accompany Solicitor General Warren Allmand on a tour of B.C. penitentiaries because he is alarmed about the unprecedented number of native Indians now lodged in them.

Marchand, Canada's first Indian member of the Commons, said in an interview his tour with Allmand is a matter of personal interest rather than parliamentary business.

The Kamloops-Cariboo MP said he believes the reasons for the heavy native population in Canadian penitentiaries are rooted in social conditions on Indian reserves.

Authors Get Yule Awards

Cmdr. C. J. Little, national president of the Canadian Authors Association, was special guest at the Victoria and Islands branch Christmas award party Saturday at Goodacre Towers.

First prize awards were to Bette Storin for an article, Fred Hall for short story and juvenile, Gertrude Charters for a personal experience article and Olive Johnston for a short-short.

Toymaker Eyes Market

VICTORIA (CP) — When children visit the play area provided by Victoria toymaker Richard Latte, the girls sometimes choose to play with the forts and the boys inspect A-frame doll houses.

Mr. Latte thinks if his designs are interesting enough children won't be divided by preconditioned notions of what toys appeal to what sex.

His custom-made toys, in 50 designs, are made of wood; even when they're scarred and scratched they are solid and safe. He says they're much better than plastic toys that break leaving rigid, sharp edges.

Mr. Latte learned from watching his own children, 11-month-old Rain and Michael, 2. A former economics student, he has spent more than five years in Victoria in arts and crafts. House repairs gave him a feeling for carpentry and toys.

His wife Sheila helps him run a "toybrary" where for a yearly fee of $3 a child can come and use the play area. For an additional fee the family may rent toys to take home.

The Lattes' business theory is the children will want one of the toys they have borrowed and parents will order one custom made. A fort costs $24 and prices go up to $145 for a multi-dimensional indoor-outdoor piece of play equipment.

"I'm at the point where my larger structures can be dismantled piece by piece so they can be carried to the family car," Mr. Latte said.

Seemingly simple at first, the toys do prove to involve a child's creativity, learning powers and muscle power as well as time. The tug boats have hatches that open, close and are removable; anchors let out or wind in and there are barges to tow.

The climbing apparatus has additional features such as a slide, and a canvas set of covers that click into place and transform the structure into a tent or secret castle.

SUNSET in the north comes early, at this time of year. The three youths silhouetted against a sundown sky at Ketchikan, Alaska, were photographed about mid-day as they enjoyed one of the last warm nights of this season. (AP Wirephoto.)

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old Esquimalt man was sentenced in provincial court Tuesday to five months definite and six months indefinite by Judge William Ostler for breaking and entering and theft.

Edward Smith, of 922 Old Esquimalt Road pleaded guilty to the Nov. 26 offence, in which he broke into the home of Herbert Tate, 1201 Rockcrest, and stole cash and jewelry to a total of $500.

Smith will serve his sentence concurrently with another term of five months definite and six indefinite for a similar offence.

Myrtle Young, 79, of 211-1475 Pandora, was given a suspended sentence and put on six months probation for theft under $200.

Mrs. Young pleaded guilty to stealing items of a total value of $8.90 from the Bay Dec. 11. She had $26 in her possession at the time of her arrest.

Nickolas Smylitopoulos, of 4005 Wiseton, was fined $450 and had his driver's licence suspended for six months for driving while impaired Tuesday.

In traffic court, two persons were fined $350 and one person $150 for driving while impaired by Judge Harold Aider.

Kenneth E. Young, no address, and Gerald Lloyd Lassen, 31, of 1258 Pearce Cres., were each fined $350.

James Andres, 21, of 784 Lavender, was fined $150.

New York Times

SYDNEY — Australia's new Labor government disclosed plans Tuesday to loosen the country's sentimental links with Britain. John Armstrong, a veteran Labor politician, declared after his appointment as Australian high commissioner to Britain, that Australia is "certain" to become a republic, ending the monarchial role of the British sovereign.

Speaking over national television, Armstrong, a 64-year-old former senator and lord mayor of Sydney, said a new Australian flag and national anthem, diminishing the traditional British connection, "have got to come."

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam has stated that he favors the adoption of a new anthem to replace God Save the Queen. Many older Australians of British decent oppose a change, but most young people either want the change or are indifferent.

Speaking of relations between Britain and Australia, which the British settled as a penal colony in 1788, Armstrong said, "We are a big boy now. We are growing up."

Asked if he thought Australia would eventually become a republic like India and other members of the Commonwealth Armstrong declared that "nothing is more certain."

Armstrong added that, following his country's recent estrangement with Britain over the latter's entry into the European Common Market, a move that endangered Australian advantages in commerce and immigration with Britain, the two countries will now "enter a period of coming together again," though on a new basis.

Whitlam said at a news conference in Canberra that talks in Paris on the establishment of diplomatic relations between Canberra and Peking had made "good progress."

The Australian approach to Peking was one of Whitlam's first official acts following his victory in the elections Dec. 2, which put Labor in power for the first time in 23 years.

Whitlam has recalled the Australian ambassador to the Nationalist government on Taiwan — an obvious preliminary to a severing of ties with the Taipei government, a prerequisite for diplomatic relations with Peking.

Meanwhile, The Bahamas is also planning to leave the Commonwealth.

At a conference in London Tuesday to give the Bahamas its independence, Prime Minister Lynden Pindling said he expected the 300-island colony to get independence without any rancor. July has been suggested as the time for Bahamian independence.

U.S., Saigon Stalling, Says Chou

Times News Services

PEKING — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai today accused the United States and South Vietnamese governments of trying to delay peace in Vietnam, and said China would continue to aid the Vietnamese people if the U.S. prolonged the war.

Chou said the whole world was greatly concerned about a solution to the Vietnam problem, and hoped for an early agreement ending the war.

"But up to now this hope has not become a reality," Chou said.

"The U.S. government is still attempting to make major revisions in the agreement already agreed upon, and the Saigon puppet regime is constantly setting up obstacles to sabotage it.

"This is the crucial reason for the dealay of a solution."

Meanwhile, in Paris, Henry Kissinger met for slightly more than six hours today with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho — the last and longest meeting of their current negotiations.

Kissinger is now on his way back to Washington to report to President Nixon.

The respected Paris newspaper Le Figaro said he would then present the draft of a new peace treaty to President Thieu.

Hanoi accused the United States today, however, of trying to create "the illusion of an immiment peace" in Vietnam.

An editorial in the official newspaper Nhan Dan charged that Washington was trying to prolong the war and bargain from a position of greater strength.

"While the Paris negotiations are prolonged, the U.S. side does not cease to propagate rumors aimed at creating the illusion of an imminent peace," Nhan Dan said.

The editorial again insisted that the only way for the United States to end the war was to sign the agreement concluded informally by Kissinger and Tho on Nov. 20.

In Washington, officials reported that the North Vietnamese were taking a tough line in the secret talks and said earlier hopes for a quick wrapup of remaining details have dimmed.

On the war front, nearly 100 tanks and several thousand fresh North Vietnamese troops have crossed the mountain passes that feed the Ho Chi Minh Trail, and U.S. B-52s and fighter-bombers are harassing them as they make their way south, U.S. sources reported today.

Phone Giant Told to Sell B.C. Company

A United States federal judge in San Francisco has ordered the American parent of B.C. Telephone to divest itself of nine companies, including two in Canada.

General Telephone and Electronics Co. of New York has been ordered to sell Lenkurt Electric (Canada) Ltd. which employs 1,000 people in making communications equipment in Burnaby and Automatic Electric Canada Ltd., an equipment firm in Brockville, Ontario.

General Telephone and Electronics controls Anglo-Canadian Telephone Company of Montreal which owns B.C. Tel.

Anglo-Canadian was not affected by the divesting order because it is a holding company, not an operating company. Anglo-Canadian employs no people but instead is used as an administration arm for General Telephone and Electronics Company's Canadian holdings.

In all, General Telephone was ordered to sell three of its phone equipment manufacturing firms: Lenkurt, Automatic Electric and Leich Electronic Company.

As well, it was told to divest itself of six operating telephone companies: Hawaiian Tel. Co., Northern Ohio Tel. Co., Central Iowa Tel Co., The Western Uility Group, Theadore Gary and Co. and Peninsular Tel Co. Ltd.

Carman Hughes, president of Automatic Electric, said because of appeals it might take years before the federal U.S. court order would come into effect.

In Vancouver, a B.C. Tel spokesman said there would be no immediate effect upon the company here.

B.C. Tel had been purchasing equipment from the two Canadian subsidiaries of their common parent General Telephone but equipment has also been purchased from Northern Electric, a subsidiary of the rival Bell Telephone Company, he said.

The spokesman said that while much of B.C. Tel's equipment was purchased through subsidiaires of General Telephone it was by no means a closed operation.

Bell Telephone produces microwave equipment that B.C. Tel has purchased in recent years, he said.

The court order was handed down by U.S. District Court Judge Martin Pence of Honolulu.

L.A. Speeders 'Gunned Down'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The motorcycle policeman raised what looked like a gun and pulled the trigger as the motorist sped by on the curve.

The driver saw the officer and hastily slowed down, but it was too late. He was 15 miles over the limit — and it was recorded on the scope of the hand-held Digital Doppler, a new tool police are using to catch speeders.

The police purchased eight of the devices, also known as speed guns, for about $700 each. They have been used for three months.

The detectors transmit a radio beam. It strikes a moving vehicle, bounces back to the gun and goes into a portable computer connected to the gun. The vehicle's speed is registered in figures on the scope at the back of the gun.

B.C. BOOSTS AID TO DAY CARE CENTRES

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi today announced an expansion of provincial aid to day care centres which he estimated will result in 20 new facilities for 450 children in the next year.

Costs of the program will jump from $2.3 million this fiscal year to about $4 million in 1973-74, Levi said.

Included in the new program are grants to organization which cannot afford to build centres under the present 50-50 sharing formula.

Also, financial assistance to parents will be based on a simple declaration of income, but the rates are not to be published until final overall sharing costs with Ottawa are worked out.

The day care centre aid is shared 50-50 with Ottawa under the Canada Assistance Plan.

For centres catering to children of three years and under, a new rate of $3.50 per day per child has been approved, replacing the old rate of $2.75.

Orange Moon Soil Excites Science

HOUSTON (UPI) — The men of the last Apollo mission gave scientists today one of the most important discoveries on the moon — a deep, orange-stained crater that probably was blown out by the dying gasp of lunar volcanism.

Pushing their oxygen back packs and moon buggy to the limits, the Apollo 17 explorers also drove to a mountain landslide and collected prize specimens that may range to the opposite end of the lunar life span.

Eurgene Cernan and Harrison Schmitt may now have stored in the cabin of the spacecraft Challenger the youngest and oldest rocks ever seen on the moon. It will take months of laboratory analysis back on earth, however, to confirm this.

This would finally lay to rest the theory that the moon has been stone dead for the last three billion years.

And it also revives controversy over whether the moon had water at some stage of its history.

The explorers drove a record 12 miles during their second excusion. They returned to moonship Challenger at 2:06 a.m. EST today after spending a record 7 hours and 37 minutes outside.

The third crew member, Ronald Evans, was adding to the scientific windfall by observing the moon from the orbiting command ship America. He sighted what apparently were three extinct volcanos elsewhere on the lunar surface Tuesday.

Cernan and Schmitt make one more seven-hour excursion from Challenger tonight, planting man's footprints in the lunar dust for perhaps the last time this century.

They will leave the moon Thursday.

WEATHERMAN SEES SNOW ENDING

Today's snowfall should be the last Greater Victoria will get for a while at least, says the Victoria weather office.

Two to three inches are expected to fall today before the snow tapers off in mid-afternoon or early this evening. Partial clearing tonight will give some sunny periods Thursday, but skies will cloud over again Thursday evening.

Milder temperatures are expected, with highs today and tomorrow reaching 35 degrees, but daytime temperatures will still hang generally below the freezing point. Lows tonight will be in the low 20s.

Smallpox Drug Effective

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Free Press says in a copyright story a group of Winnipeg physicians have achieved a high rate of success with a new method of treating smallpox patients.

The newspaper quotes Dr. John Foerster, one of the senior investigators of the group associated with the Manitoba Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation, as saying the treatment was tried during a recent outbreak of smallpox in Bangladesh.

It says a scientific paper on the method is to be published this week in the British medical journal, the Lancet.

The story says that while the average smallpox death rate is one of three patients, eight of nine receiving the new treatment recovered quickly.

ANARCHISTS RIOT IN ROME STREETS

ROME (AP) — Thousands of leftist and anarchist youths turned Rome's historic piazzas, gaily decorated for Christmas, into battlegrounds Tuesday night over a bombing trial delayed for three years.

Rome took the brunt of violence as young extremists took to the streets in several Italian cities demanding the release of 12 anarchists and leftists rounded up after the Milan bank bombing Dec. 12, 1969.

At least 38 persons were injured and 45 arrested during the demonstrations.

Roman youths staged three hours of violence, setting fire to dozens of cars and throwing fire bombs and stones at police.

PILOTS DOZE OFF

LONDON (AP) — Thirty thousand feet over the Pacific the pilot of an airliner carrying 125 passengers to Honolulu found himself dozing off at the controls.

He shook himself, glanced around, and saw his two co-pilots and flight engineer — his entire flight deck crew — were all fast asleep.

In another jetliner, on another route, the pilot was making his final landing approach with a full load of passengers. As the plane swooped to touchdown, he discovered both his co-pilots were sleeping. They had to be forcibly awakened to help bring the plane down.

The two incidents were among "hundreds" described to the British Airline Pilots' Association (BALPA) in response to a request to its 5,000 members to tell of their experiences of fatigue affecting flying safety.

Gordon Hurley, spokesman for the pilots' union, said some "shocking" replies had come in since the questionnaire was circulated a week ago.

Defensive Flying Course Urged in North

Times News Services

The 32-day Arctic search for Martin Hartwell's crashed plane, which cost the federal government several million dollars, may also bring about a complete re-examination of Canadian flying regulations for the north.

Defence Minister James Richardson said Tuesday the armed forces search and rescue methods are not so much in need of review as are the reasons planes get lost.

Richardson said there are always lessons to be learned, "but the area where perhaps there's some need for re-examination or further study is in the regulations about who flies."

Hartwell's twin-engined Beechcraft 18 crashed on a medical mercy flight Nov. 8 with three other persons aboard and Hartwell — who had been involved in a previous flying accident — was the only one alive when searchers found him Saturday.

Many of the details of the crash will not be revealed until the department of transport has held an investigation, but it has been learned that Hartwell was not qualified to navigate on instruments alone. He told rescuers he had been flying under heavy overcast at the time of the crash.

Hartwell had crashed once before, when coming in for a landing at Flin Flon, Man., in 1969. His employer at that time said the crash, in which no one was injured, was just a matter of misjudgement.

Richardson said the defence department is developing the concept of defensive flying — similar to defensive driving schools under which people are trained to avoid accidents.

But a former pilot who flew for Gateway Aviation Ltd. of Edmonton, the line which employed Hartwell, said stricter licensing procedures are needed for northern flying where harsh conditions magnify the smallest error.

Dominique Prinet, now an economist with a northern consulting firm, said pilots flying in the Northwest Territories should be required to have instrument rating and the aircraft they fly should be equipped with more accurate compasses.

He said men like Hartwell are caught in a trap. It costs about $2,000 to receive instrument ratings and many pilots cannot afford the price.

"The blame in accidents like this alway lies with the pilot. The company on the other hand, has no problems. It can hire another guy and start the same procedures over again tomorrow. Mr. Hartwell was caught in a trap."

Prinet said few northern

JOB PLAN BARED

TORONTO (CP) — President J. P. R. Wadsworth of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce suggests that some spending programs slated for the 1980s might be started earlier in an effort to provide more jobs.

Wadsworth told the bank's annual meeting of shareholders that the rapid growth of the labor force will start to slow down in the late 1970s.

"With this outlook for labor force growth, it would seem sensible to implement some policies that would accelerate employment through the balance of the 1970s but not necessarily be carried into the 1980s.

$.5 Millions Spent at MB's Harmac Mill

Forest Planning Awaits NDP Guide

By Al Forrest

Times Business Editor

The British Columbia forest industry may get off to a slow start with its expansion programs in 1973, awaiting direction from the new provincial government.

Forest industry spokesman Gordon Draeseke, president of the Council of Forest Industries, said "there is a good deal of wait-and-see" among large forestry companies in British Columbia.

The companies want to see details of the New Democratic Party's plans for the industry before committing additional funds in expansion. Details are expected in the NDP's first budget, likely about Feb. said millions of dollars worth 9.

One company spokesman of expansion capital were being tied up awaiting direction from the provincial government.

Another company vice-president commented: "We can't play the game until we learn what the rules are."

During 1972 the forest industry spent $368.8 million in renovations and capital expansion.

Of this total, MacMillan Bloedel, the industry leader, spent $60 million in capital expansion, not including its $30 million five-year plan for anti-pollution installations.

The company is spending more than $5.5 million of this amount on controlling water and air pollution at its Harmac pulp mill near Nanaimo.

Looking to the future, MacMillan Bloedel chairman J. V. Clyne said:

"Tthe market outlook for forest products in 1973 is generally optimistic. We expect that sales of pulp, paper and packaging materials should continue to show improvement.

"Demand for building materials, lumber and plywood should remain strong "for some time, although rates of housing starts appear to be declining moderately from recent very high levels," Clyne said.

First Article In Two-Part Series

"In common with other exportes, however, our industry continues to be troubled by world-wide inflation and the instability of exchange rates."

He said the inflation problem was becoming more severe because of expansionary monetary policies of governments in Canada and the United States.

"In Canada, much will depend on the success of a minority government in resisting pressures for policies that are unduly expansionary," Clyne said.

"In certain areas, wages are already higher than those in the United States.

"If the price and wage restraints continue to be successful in the United States, Canada may find itself in a position of growing difficulty because of inability to compete in its major foreign market."

MacMillan Bloedel is heavily dependent on American market conditions as 50 per cent of its production is sold there.

Only 21 per cent of MacMillan Bloedel's lumber, plywood and shingles is sold in Canada (British Columbia's share is 5 per cent) and only eight per cent of the company's newsprint, pulp and paperboard is in Canada (5 per cent in B.C.).

The company would not estimate its 1972 gross sales. However, based upon performance so far this year 1972 sales could top $900 million.

Clyne earlier had announced nine month sales of $658.9 million, compared with $544 million in the same period of 1971.

While 1972 was a good year for the company, it was more a case of regaining the profitable levels of the late 1960s rather than reaching new earning plateaus.

The company had net earnings of $42.5 million in 1969, tumbling to $17.4 million in 1970. Labor difficulties associated with wage negotiations and a pulp surplus contributed to the decline in earnings. Earnings rose to $25.4 million in 1971, a solid grain over 1970 but below 1969.

Earnings for the first nine months of 1972 were $25 million, ahead of the 1971 pace ($16.2 million) but behind the 1969 level of $33.8 million at the same time.

The company had sales of $535 million in 1967, $579 million in 1968 and $638 million in 1969. In 1970, sales rose only $8 million to $646 million.

Sales improved to $704 in 1971, could hit $900 million this year and top $1 billion in 1973.

Other industry leaders are Crown Zellerbach (Canada) Ltd. which had 1971 sales of $206 million and British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. with 1971 sales of $133 million.

Thursday: Forecasts for 1973.

Electrohome

Electrohome Ltd. reports net earnings of $3,164,000 or $1.04 a share for the first nine months of 1972 compared with $1,724,000 or 56 cents a year earlier.

Reitman's

Reitman's Ltd. reports net earnings for the nine months ended Oct. 31, 1972, of $1.94 million, up from $1.76 million for the corresponding period last year.

Earnings per share, taking into account a two-for-one stock split, were 43 cents, compared with 39 cents in the 1971 period.

Labatt

John Labatt Ltd. and Wine Securities Ltd., a holding company which controls Chateau-Gai Wines Ltd. of Toronto, announced jointly that Labatt will acquire more than 51 per cent of Wine Securities shares.

N. E. Hardy, Labatt president, and Thomas R. Comery, Wines Securities president, said the directors and management of Wine Securities had accepted the Labatt offer and recommended its acceptance by the shareholders.

Seagrams

Distillers Corporation-Seagrams Ltd. reports net income for the quarter ending Oct. 31 of $23.1 million or 66 cents a share compared with $20.9 million or 60 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Sales for the quarter were $449.3 million, compared with $442.7 million for the third quarter of 1971.

Both sales and net income for the quarter were records for the company.

Loblaw

Loblaw Companies Ltd. reports an operating loss of $1,502,000 or 18 cents a share for the 28 weeks ended Oct. 14 compared with a profit of $1,794,000 or 11 cents in the corresponding period of 1971.

Net income for the 28 weeks was $287,000, including $1,789,000 in special items, down sharply from net income in 1971 to $6,972,000. The 1971 figure included $5,178,000 in special items.

The company says main cause for reduction in income was the loss incurred by National Tea in the U.S.

Sales income this year was down $33 million to $1.35 billion.

How to Dodge Christmas —Yes, and Have It, Too

Our notes today, which will concern the truly tremendous compulsion of the Christmas habit, began when our friends, the Boggs, of Duncan, dropped in for a visit, positively agog with their plans.

The Boggs will not be exchanging gifts this year. They will have no tree, no turkey, no decorations. All the money they would normally spend on the festive rites will be going into a 10-day holiday on the warm Hawaiian island of Maui. They're not simply escaping from this dreadful weather. They're escaping from Christmas itself.

Did my wife and I exchange secret, knowing smiles, as Jimmy enthused over his plans? You can bet your life we did. We were remembering the time when we'd done much the same sort of thing.

To this day, of course, I disclaim any credit as the originator of the idea. Had it not been that our two teen-aged world-weary daughters vocalized at length on the predictability of the Christmas treadmill and wondered if there might not be an alternative I could not have been inspired to my proposal. But propose it I did.

"Supposing we all forget about Christmas, as such, this year?" I ventured. "Instead, we could drive down to the California desert and lie in the sun beside some motel pool and get brown as berries. It will mean giving up presents and the tree and all that nonsense, but we'll have the best time ever." To my astonishment there was a chorus of assent. My wife, as is her wont, immediately began to make lists.

Everything went beautifully. We drove the coast route and stopped for a lunch of cracked Dungeness crab at Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco. Next evening, at Indio in the desert, we found a charming little motel called Rancho Los Adelfas with a delightful pool. Tall, graceful date palms made a patch of shade as relief, if you wanted it, from the 85 degrees. You could reach out through the kitchenette window and pluck a fresh, growing grapefruit.

Without quite realizing it, of course, we were constantly exposed to the stuff of Christmas. Mindless of the temperature, the radio incessantly gave forth "Walkin' in a Winter Wonderland" or "White Christmas." The streets of nearby Indio were crowded with shoppers and Salvation Army Santa Clauses. The red and green lights blinked off and on in suburbs seen through the lattice of date palms.

We had been in a perfect state of suspended animation for five lazy, sunny days beside the pool when there it was: the day before Christmas. Yet another perfect desert day. Powder blue skies. A high, hot sun glinting on the unlikely snows of the San Jacintos. Yet as we sprawled langorously by the pool that morning, idly watching two inflated plastic swans drift with the zephyr breeze, there was a subtle something different in the air. I was aware from time to time of Meaningful Glances my way.

It was at lunch that my wife finally brought it all out into the open.

"We think," said she, "that we should at least have a small tree as a token concession to Christmas. Just a very small tree?"

A dyke was bursting, I well knew. I should at least have put a finger in it. But the bone-penetrating, unaccustomed sun was my undoing. "Right," I said.

Finding a tree in Indio, California, on the day before Christmas was not easy. In fact it was impossible. There was not a tree to be had in the entire Coachella Valley. We had driven all the way to El Centro, near the Mexican border, before we found a nursery that specialized in imported shrubs and, for $12, bought a potted, ornamental Japanese pine.

It was the saddest, droopiest little tree that ever was, yet my loved ones, having purchased a further $15 worth of decorations, painstakingly festooned it with baubles and bangles.

"If we just had one, just one, present to put beneath it," my wife mused, surveying the poor thing. "One present as a token concession to Christmas?"

Ceremonially, all resistance gone, I peeled off and signed three $25 coupons from my thinning book of travellers' cheques and gave one to each of the females in my life. "Everybody into the car," I cried.

It isn't easy for four people to shop independently in Indio's Woolworths and J. C. Penny stores, but somehow we managed it. On Christmas morn the little Japanese tree was surrounded with gift-wrapped presents, none of which would retail above a dollar. The bulky parcel my wife had smuggled into the car turned out to be a turkey that just fit — but only just — the oven in the motel's kitchen.

The tremendous compulsion of the Christmas habit had prevailed again, just as I'm sure it will on Maui with the Boggs on that fine day.

$200 Prize Awaits All Top Students

New scholarship and bursary regulations, including a straight $200 award for all top-ranking students, will apply to university students as well as high school graduates, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced Tuesday.

Under the new program up to 17 per cent of all students registered in each B.C. university, college or technical institute will receive $200 as an academic award "to do with as they see fit."

The new system, announced earlier for high school graduates, replaces the old practice of awarding students by paying a portion of their fees at specified post-secondary institutions.

"There were inequities in the allocation of scholarships before," explained A. E. Soles, superintendent of post-secondary services.

"A student who had three-quarters of his fees paid at a more expensive institution like UVic got a lot more than someone who had three-quarters of their Camosun College fees paid."

The new award was announced along with changes in eligibility requirements for government bursaries which will make it easier for students to obtain free grants.

The bursary plan, which is co-ordinated with the Canada Student Loans Plan, assists students who would be unable to continue their education without financial aid.

Under the new regulations scholastic ability will no longer be a consideration in granting money, provided the student has successfully completed his year of study.

"Bursaries will be available to anyone who can demonstrate real need," Soles said. "They'll be eligible if they have a clear pass, are on a full program and plan to continue their studies."

Soles said eligibility requirements had been broadened to include granting of bursaries to students studying outside the province.

He said the number of students receiving aid will increase and the amount of individual bursaries may at times exceed the old maximum of $400.

"We want to try to support more students on the basis of need," Soles explained.

"A great many scholarship winners in the past came from socio-economic groups that already have educational advantages, such as libraries in their homes. We're attempting to make it more equitable."

Vegetable Frost Toll: $250,000

By HUMPHREY DAVY
Times Staff

South Vancouver Island growers suffered a gross loss of $250,000 as the result of last week's heavy frost damage to vegetable crops, Alan Barker, manager-secretary of Island Vegetable Co-operative, said today.

The frost wiped out most of Saanich peninsula's cabbage, turnips, cauliflower and carrot crops.

The loss is expected to result in a sharp rise in vegetable prices — perhaps as much as 50 per cent in local markets.

"The damage was not only confined to the Island, but to the mainland, Washington and Oregon," Barker said.

"This means higher consumer prices for vegetables as they will have to be brought in from California and other southern states."

He described the crop damage as the worst since Nov. 11, 1955, when similar weather conditions destroyed the vegetable crop, as well as many ornamental shrubs and trees.

No Insurance

Vantreight said the crops were not insured.

"It is a gamble," he said. "But we are not the only ones. On the mainland, the losses are as heavy."

Barker said the vegetables were ready for harvesting, but are kept in the ground during November and most of December because of the lack of storage.

"Normally we get our frost later," he said, "and by January when cold weather usually sets in we have our vegetables out of the ground. But this year the frost and cold weather came earlier."

He said if snow had preceded the heavy frost, the carrots and turnip would have been spared. Snow acts as a protective covering.

New 12-Page Forms Tax Minds as Well

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The federal income tax department will be issuing its new income tax forms (it hopes) in February, replacing the four-page short form with a 12-page document.

Along with the forms will come a new slogan: It's Easier Than You Think.

Commented a Victoria accountant: "It is?"

Delivery of the forms will be held up pending passage of income tax legislation in the session of Parliament opening in January.

But Victoria income tax officials estimated that, with speedy passage of the measures, the forms could be out by February.

"February is the target," said S. B. Jenkins of the Victoria office. "Companies have until the end of February to get their T-4 forms to employees and there is no point in having the forms before then."

What if the tax proposals bog down in the splintered House of Commons?

"Well then it would become a new ball game," Jenkins said. "Then they might have to consider delaying the tax deadline beyond the end of April."

He said he was not particularly fond of slogans although in this case there may be a point to the new one.

"There sure is a lot of paper in the new forms and some people tend to panic. But for the average salary or wage earner it won't be much more complicated than before. Most of the pages deal with capital gains and things that apply mainly to businessmen."

His advice when the forms finally arrive: "Read them carefully. Don't panic. There may be a bit more work but not much more for the average person."

He would not hazard a guess as to how long the new forms would take to fill out but said it would be a bit longer than with the old forms.

An accountant estimated it took up to three hours for the average person to complete the old short forms.

The new 12-page tax forms are not yet in general circulation because they are subject to revision as a result of legislation to be passed (or defeated) in January.

The department of revenue's slogan last year at tax time was Play It Again Sam, The Old Way. This was to emphasize the new rules had not yet come into effect.

However, this time Sam's playing a new song and taxpayers might be forgiven if they said: "Aw come on, Sam, the old way — just one more time."

Extra Mail Day

Last minute Christmas mail will have an extra chance to reach its destination with post offices across Canada opening for regular service on Saturday, Dec. 23.

Victoria post office and two postal stations will open from 8.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. the Saturday before Christmas to take care of last-minute postal needs and mail will also be delivered that day.

6 Months for Arson

An 18-year-old man who pleaded guilty to charges of arson, wilful damage, and two counts of setting fires Nov. 20 was sentenced to a total of six months definite and six months indeterminate by Judge William Ostler in provincial court today.

Rhys Allan Thomas, of 811 Leslie, admitted to setting fires in two houses, a garden shed and a car between Aug. 1 and Nov. 14.

The only explanation offered by Thomas was that he wanted to prove he was capable of handling an emergency situation.

"Well Mr. Thomas, the hero turned out to be a wolf in sheep's clothing," said Ostler.

"I recognize some of the motivation for what you did. What you need is to develop your sense of self-respect and self worth," said the Judge.

PENSION BOOST FOR CHRISTMAS

About 110,000 cheques, containing between $4 million and $5 million in government money, will be going out in the next two weeks to recipients of B.C.'s new $200 monthly guaranteed minimum income plan.

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Tuesday he expects the cheques will be in the mail by Dec. 18, which would get some if not all of them to recipients by Christmas.

But a department official said today there had been problems with the plan's computer Tuesday, which could result in a delay. The official said it is hoped the cheques will at least be in the mail by Christmas.

The cheques are going to people over age 65 and to handicapped persons as a result of legislation passed at this fall's special session of the legislature. The December cheques are the first to be mailed out to recipients, which accounts for some of the problems being encountered by department staff.

Stiff Zoning Control Urged

Because developers have shown they can circumvent the city's normal machinery for zoning control, Mayor Peter Pollen says Victoria should adopt a more rigid system to ensure that planning policies, once established, are binding and free of loopholes.

The way to accomplish that, Pollen said Tuesday, would be to establish official community plans for various areas of the city and then register them with the provincial government so that they become "locked in."

Once this is done, a plan cannot be altered in any way without the express consent of the minister of municipal affairs, Pollen said.

Saying he couldn't understand why there had been no encouragement to use such a system in the past, the mayor commented that without it planning is "a rather sophisticated hoax."

"Without it anyone can rezone land even if there is a zoning plan — we've seen it happen time and again in this city," he added.

Winning Candidates Cool To Fund Disclosure Idea

Ald. Tom Christie's suggestion that the three other successful candidates in the Victoria civic election follow his example by revealing the amount and source of their campaign funds got a cool reception today from two of those concerned.

When he issued the invitation Tuesday Christie disclosed that he spent $57.28 on his own campaign, every cent of it from his own pocket.

Ald. Percy Frampton said he had no comment to make in reply to Christie.

"I have checked with the city solicitor and he says you can get your funds wherever you wish, from friends or anywhere else," Frampton said.

"I admit I spent some money, that's true. But I have my own offset printing press and run off material on that, so it might look as if I spent more money than I actually did."

Frampton's campaign included poster, newspaper and radio advertising.

The third successful incumbent, Ald. Alf Hood, who comfortably topped the polls, said he saw no reason why he should react to a suggestion made indirectly by someone else and not directed to him personally.

But Hood added that if he receives any official request to submit details of his election expenses, and source of funds, "I will certainly do so."

Alderman-elect Sam Bawlf could not be reached for comment.

City solicitor Terry O'Grady confirmed Frampton's point that "no disclosure" is required, and said the subject of campaign funding is not even mentioned in the Municipal Act.

USC Brings Her Dream to Life

Florina Ntabeni is a clever, quiet girl from Lesotho, southern Africa, who has her heart set on becoming a doctor.

However, Florina is the youngest in a family of six children and her father, a teacher, makes only about $6.50 a month. On this salary he is struggling to educate his children.

Last year Florina got lucky.

She won a Unitarian Service Committee of Canada scholarship which gives her $166 a year to help pay for fees, midday meals, uniforms and books.

The scholarship program is only one of the programs that the Unitarian Service Committee (USC) has undertaken since its efforts spread to Africa in 1971.

But it has had such success in Lesotho that USC executive Director Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova is going to recommend to the board that the Lesotho budget be doubled. And she is anxious to extend the scholarships to another tiny African state, Swaziland.

Dr. Hitschmanova is hoping to have a $70,000 budget for southern Africa this year, to finance 12 projects in Lesotho, 10 in Swaziland and three in Botswana.

One such project provides nourishing midday meals to 5,000 school children in Swaziland, a cup of fortified soup and a portion of boiled crushed maize each.

Another is the Nutrition Rehabilitation Village in Botswana. Here groups of mothers come with their children for a two-week stay to learn about nutrition, hygiene, family planning and child care, while their children are being cared for by trained staff.

In Tutume, Botswana, a medical clinic co-sponsored by the USC serves 50,000 people in an area of 10,000 miles.

Two African nurses shoulder the entire medical responsibility for this area.

The USC now has three children's homes in Swaziland, as well as 21 others in Korea, Hong Kong, India and France. Children in the homes are supported by Canadian foster parents, who pay $168 per child per year.

To support its work in Africa, India, Bangladesh, Korea and other areas, the USC is hoping to raise $1 million in funds and $500,000 in gifts-in-kind in its 28th annual campaign, which ends Christmas Day.

This year's special project is to build houses for refugees in Bangladesh. The USC has pledged to finish 1,000 of these houses with matted bamboo walls and corrugated iron roofs by Christmas.

The USC campaigns in Victoria began in 1953. Last year $16,641 was collected in the Milk for Bangladesh campaign, the highest total since the annual appeals began here.

All donations to this year's Housing for Bangladesh campaign may be sent to P.O. Box 300, Victoria, or taken to any Bank of Nova Scotia. Official receipts will be sent from Unitarian Service Committee headquarters in Ottawa.

Aussies to Cut Links With U.K.

New York Times

SYDNEY — Australia's new Labor government disclosed plans Tuesday to loosen the country's sentimental links with Britain. John Armstrong, a veteran Labor politician, declared after his appointment as Australian high commissioner to Britain, that Australia is "certain" to become a republic, ending the monarchial role of the British sovereign.

Speaking over national television, Armstrong, a 64-year-old former senator and lord mayor of Sydney, said a new Australian flag and national anthem, diminishing the traditional British connection, "have got to come."

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam has stated that he favors the adoption of a new anthem to replace God Save the Queen. Many older Australians of British decent oppose a change, but most young people either want the change or are indifferent.

Speaking of relations between Britain and Australia, which the British settled as a penal colony in 1788, Armstrong said, "We are a big boy now. We are growing up."

Asked if he thought Australia would eventually become a republic like India and other members of the Commonwealth Armstrong declared that "nothing is more certain."

Armstrong added that, following his country's recent estrangement with Britain over the latter's entry into the European Common Market, a move that endangered Australian advantages in commerce and immigration with Britain, the two countries will now "enter a period of coming together again," though on a new basis.

Whitlam said at a news conference in Canberra that talks in Paris on the establishment of diplomatic relations between Canberra and Peking had made "good progress."

The Australian approach to Peking was one of Whitlam's first official acts following his victory in the elections Dec. 2, which put Labor in power for the first time in 23 years.

Whitlam has recalled the Australian ambassador to the Nationalist government on Taiwan — an obvious preliminary to a severing of ties with the Taipei government, a prerequisite for diplomatic relations with Peking.

Meanwhile, The Bahamas is also planning a change in status.

At a conference in London Tuesday to give the Bahamas its independence, Prime Minister Lynden Pindling said he expected the 300-island colony to get independence without any rancor. July has been suggested as the time for Bahamian independence.

Saigon, U.S. Stalling, Says Chou

Times News Services

PEKING — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai today accused the United States and South Vietnamese governments of trying to delay peace in Vietnam, and said China would continue to aid the Vietnamese people if the U.S. prolonged the war.

Chou said the whole world was greatly concerned about a solution to the Vietnam problem, and hoped for an early agreement ending the war.

"But up to now this hope has not become a reality," Chou said.

"The U.S. government is still attempting to make major revisions in the agreement already agreed upon, and the Saigon puppet regime is constantly setting up obstacles to sabotage it.

Meanwhile, in Paris, Henry Kissinger met for slightly more than six hours today with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho — the last and longest meeting of their current negotiations.

Kissinger is now on his way back to Washington to report to President Nixon.

The respected Paris newspaper Le Figaro said he would then present the draft of a new peace treaty to President Thieu.

Hanoi accused the United States today, however, of trying to create "the illusion of an immiment peace" in Vietnam.

An editorial in the official newspaper Nhan Dan charged that Washington was trying to prolong the war and bargain from a position of greater strength.

"While the Paris negotiations are prolonged, the U.S. side does not cease to propagate rumors aimed at creating the illusion of an imminent peace," Nhan Dan said.

The editorial again insisted that the only way for the United States to end the war was to sign the agreement concluded informally by Kissinger and Tho on Oct. 20.

In Washington, officials reported that the North Vietnamese were taking a tough line in the secret talks and said earlier hopes for a quick wrapup of remaining details have dimmed.

On the war front, nearly 100 tanks and several thousand fresh North Vietnamese troops have crossed the mountain passes that feed the Ho Chi Minh Trail, and U.S. B-52s and fighter-bombers are harassing them as they make their way south, U.S. sources reported today.

WEATHERMAN SEES SNOW ENDING

Today's snowfall should be the last Greater Victoria will get for a while at least, says the Victoria weather office.

Two to three inches are expected to fall today before the snow tapers off in mid-afternoon or early this evening. Partial clearing tonight will give some sunny periods Thursday, but skies will cloud over again Thursday evening.

Milder temperatures are expected, with highs today and tomorrow reaching 35 degrees, but daytime temperatures will still hang generally below the freezing point. Lows tonight will be in the low 20s.

Phone Giant Told to Sell B.C. Company

A United States federal judge in San Francisco has ordered the American parent of B.C. Telephone to divest itself of nine companies, including two in Canada.

General Telephone and Electronics Co. of New York has been ordered to sell Lenkurt Electric (Canada) Ltd. which employs 1,000 people in making communications equipment in Burnaby and Automatic Electric Canada Ltd., an equipment firm in Brockville, Ontario.

General Telephone and Electronics controls Anglo-Canadian Telephone Company of Montreal which owns B.C. Tel.

Anglo-Canadian was not affected by the divesting order because it is a holding company, not an operating company. Anglo-Canadian employs no people but instead is used as an administration arm for General Telephone and Electronics Company's Canadian holdings.

In all, General Telephone was ordered to sell three of its phone equipment manufacturing firms: Lenkurt, Automatic Electric and Leich Electronic Company.

As well, it was told to divest itself of six operating telephone companies: Hawaiian Tel. Co., Northern Ohio Tel. Co., Central Iowa Tel Co., The Western Uility Group, Theadore Gary and Co. and Peninsular Tel Co. Ltd.

Carman Hughes, president of Automatic Electric, said because of appeals it might take years before the federal U.S. court order would come into effect.

In Vancouver, a B.C. Tel spokesman said there would be no immediate effect upon the company here.

B.C. Tel had been purchasing equipment from the two Canadian subsidiaries of their common parent General Telephone but equipment has also been purchased from Northern Electric, a subsidiary of the rival Bell Telephone Company, he said.

The spokesman said that while much of B.C. Tel's equipment was purchased through subsidiaries of General Telephone it was by no means a closed operation.

Bell Telephone produces microwave equipment that B.C. Tel has purchased in recent years, he said.

The court order was handed down by U.S. District Court Judge Martin Pence of Honolulu.

Truman Unchanged

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Harry Truman's condition remained serious today as the 88-year-old former president entered the second week of his struggle with heart, lung, chest and kidney problems.

L.A. Speeders 'Gunned Down'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The motorcycle policeman raised what looked like a gun and pulled the trigger as the motorist sped by on the curve.

The driver saw the officer and hastily slowed down, but it was too late. He was 15 miles over the limit — and it was recorded on the scope of the hand-held Digital Doppler, a new tool police are using to catch speeders.

The police purchased eight of the devices, also known as speed guns, for about $700 each. They have been used for three months.

The detectors transmit a radio beam. It strikes a moving vehicle, bounces back to the gun and goes into a portable computer connected to the gun. The vehicle's speed is registered in figures on the scope at the back of the gun.

Smallpox Drug Effective

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Free Press says in a copyright story a group of Winnipeg physicians have achieved a high rate of success with a new method of treating smallpox patients.

The newspaper quotes Dr. John Foerster, one of the senior investigators of the group associated with the Manitoba Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation, as saying the treatment was tried during a recent outbreak of smallpox in Bangladesh.

It says a scientific paper on the method is to be published this week in the British medical journal, the Lancet.

The story says that while the average smallpox death rate is one of three patients, eight of nine receiving the new treatment recovered quickly.

The treatment involved massive infusions of solutions containing cytosine arabinoside, a cancer drug developed in the United States.

B.C. BOOSTS AID TO DAY CARE CENTRES

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi today announced an expansion of provincial aid to day care centres which he estimated will result in 20 new facilities for 450 children in the next year.

Costs of the program will jump from $2.3 million this fiscal year to about $4 million in 1973-74, Levi said.

Included in the new program are grants to organizations which cannot afford to build centres under the present 50-50 sharing formula.

Also, financial assistance to parents will be based on a simple declaration of income, but the rates are not to be published until final overall sharing costs with Ottawa are worked out.

The day care centre aid is shared 50-50 with Ottawa under the Canada Assistance Plan.

For centres catering to children of three years and under, a new rate of $3.50 per day per child has been approved, replacing the old rate of $2.75.

Orange Moon Soil Excites Science

HOUSTON (UPI) — The men of the last Apollo mission gave scientists today one of the most important discoveries on the moon — a deep, orange-stained crater that probably was blown out by the dying gasp of lunar volcanism.

Pushing their oxygen back packs and moon buggy to the limits, the Apollo 17 explorers also drove to a mountain landslide and collected prize specimens that may range to the opposite end of the lunar life span.

Eugene Cernan and Harrison Schmitt may now have stored in the cabin of the spacecraft Challenger the youngest and oldest rocks ever seen on the moon. It will take months of laboratory analysis back on earth, however, to confirm this.

This would finally lay to rest the theory that the moon has been stone dead for the last three billion years.

And it also revives controversy over whether the moon had water at some stage of its history.

The explorers drove a record 12 miles during their second excusion. They returned to moonship Challenger at 2:06 a.m. EST today after spending a record 7 hours and 37 minutes outside.

The third crew member, Ronald Evans, was adding to the scientific windfall by observing the moon from the orbiting command ship America. He sighted what apparently were three extinct volcanos elsewhere on the lunar surface Tuesday.

Cernan and Schmitt make one more seven-hour excursion from Challenger tonight, planting man's footprints in the lunar dust for perhaps the last time this century.

They will leave the moon Thursday.

PILOTS DOZE OFF

LONDON (AP) — Thirty thousand feet over the Pacific the pilot of an airliner carrying 125 passengers to Honolulu found himself dozing off at the controls.

He shook himself, glanced around, and saw his two co-pilots and flight engineer—his entire flight deck crew—were all fast asleep.

In another jetliner, on another route, the pilot was making his final landing approach with a full load of passengers. As the plane swooped to touchdown he discovered both his co-pilots were sleeping. They had to be forcibly awakened to help bring the plane down.

The two incidents were among "hundreds" described to the British Airline Pilots' Association (BALPA) in response to a request to its 5,000 members to tell of their experiences of fatigue affecting flying safety.

Gordon Hurley, spokesman for the pilots' union, said some "shocking" replies had come in since the questionnaire was circulated a week ago.

Aerospace Minister Michael Heseltine is discussing the allegations today with Britain's civil aviation authority and the British airways board.

BALPA is demanding a government inqui-

ANARCHISTS RIOT IN ROME STREETS

ROME (AP) — Thousands of leftist and anarchist youths turned Rome's historic piazzas, gaily decorated for Christmas, into battlegrounds Tuesday night over a bombing trial delayed for three years.

Rome took the brunt of violence as young extremists took to the streets in several Italian cities demanding the release of 12 anarchists and leftists rounded up after the Milan bank bombing Dec. 12, 1969.

At least 38 persons were injured and 45 arrested during the demonstrations.

Defensive Flying Course Urged in North

Times News Services

The 32-day Arctic search for Martin Hartwell's crashed plane, which cost the federal government several million dollars, may also bring about a complete re-examination of Canadian flying regulations for the north.

Defence Minister James Richardson said Tuesday the armed forces search and rescue methods are not so much in need of review as are the reasons planes get lost.

Richardson said there are always lessons to be learned, "but the area where perhaps there's some need for re-examination or further study is in the regulations about who flies."

Hartwell's twin-engined Beechcraft 18 crashed on a medical mercy flight Nov. 8 with three other persons aboard and Hartwell — who had been involved in a previous flying accident — was the only one alive when searchers found him Saturday.

Many of the details of the crash will not be revealed until the department of transport has held an investigation, but it has been learned that Hartwell was not qualified to navigate on instruments alone. He told rescuers he had been flying under heavy overcast at the time of the crash.

Hartwell had crashed once before, when coming in for a landing at Flin Flon, Man., in 1969. His employer at that time said the crash, in which no one was injured, was just a matter of misjudgement.

Richardson said the defence department is developing the concept of defensive flying — similar to defensive driving schools under which people are trained to avoid accidents.

But a former pilot who flew for Gateway Aviation Ltd. of Edmonton, the line which employed Hartwell, said stricter licensing procedures are needed for northern flying where harsh conditions magnify the smallest error.

Dominique Prinet, now an economist with a northern consulting firm, said pilots flying in the Northwest Territories should be required to have instrument rating and the aircraft they fly should be equipped with more accurate compasses.

He said men like Hartwell are caught in a trap. It costs about $2,000 to receive instrument ratings and many pilots cannot afford the price.

"The blame in accidents like this alway lies with the pilot. The company on the other hand, has no problems. It can hire another guy and start the same procedures over again tomorrow. Mr. Hartwell was caught in a trap."

Prinet said few northern

Aussies to Cut Links With U.K.

New York Times

SYDNEY — Australia's new Labor government disclosed plans Tuesday to loosen the country's sentimental links with Britain. John Armstrong, a veteran Labor politician, declared after his appointment as Australian high commissioner to Britain, that Australia is "certain" to become a republic, ending the monarchial role of the British sovereign.

Speaking over national television, Armstrong, a 64-year-old former senator and lord mayor of Sydney, said a new Australian flag and national anthem, diminishing the traditional British connection, "have got to come."

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam has stated that he favors the adoption of a new anthem to replace God Save the Queen. Many older Australians of British decent oppose a change, but most young people either want the change or are indifferent.

Speaking of relations between Britain and Australia, which the British settled as a penal colony in 1788, Armstrong said, "We are a big boy now. We are growing up."

Asked if he thought Australia would eventually become a republic like India and other members of the Commonwealth Armstrong declared that "nothing is more certain."

Armstrong added that, following his country's recent estrangement with Britain over the latter's entry into the European Common Market, a move that endangered Australian advantages in commerce and immigration with Britain, the two countries will now "enter a period of coming together again," though on a new basis.

Whitlam said at a news conference in Canberra that talks in Paris on the establishment of diplomatic relations between Canberra and Peking had made "good progress."

The Australian approach to Peking was one of Whitlam's first official acts following his victory in the elections Dec. 2, which put Labor in power for the first time in 23 years.

Whitlam has recalled the Australian ambassador to the Nationalist government on Taiwan — an obvious preliminary to a severing of ties with the Taipei government, a prerequisite for diplomatic relations with Peking.

Meanwhile, The Bahamas is also planning a change in status.

At a conference in London Tuesday to give the Bahamas its independence, Prime Minister Lynden Pindling said he expected the 300-island colony to get independence without any rancor. July has been suggested as the time for Bahamian independence.

Saigon, U.S. Stalling, Says Chou

Times News Services

PEKING — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai today accused the United States and South Vietnamese governments of trying to delay peace in Vietnam, and said China would continue to aid the Vietnamese people if the U.S. prolonged the war.

Chou said the whole world was greatly concerned about a solution to the Vietnam problem, and hoped for an early agreement ending the war.

"But up to now this hope has not become a reality," Chou said.

"The U.S. government is still attempting to make major revisions in the agreement already agreed upon, and the Saigon puppet regime is constantly setting up obstacles to sabotage it.

Meanwhile, in Paris, Henry Kissinger met for slightly more than six hours today with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho — the last and longest meeting of their current negotiations.

Kissinger is now on his way back to Washington to report to President Nixon.

The respected Paris newspaper Le Figaro said he would then present the draft of a new peace treaty to President Thieu.

Hanoi accused the United States today, however, of trying to create "the illusion of an immiment peace" in Vietnam.

An editorial in the official newspaper Nhan Dan charged that Washington was trying to prolong the war and bargain from a position of greater strength.

"While the Paris negotiations are prolonged, the U.S. side does not cease to propagate rumors aimed at creating the illusion of an imminent peace," Nhan Dan said.

The editorial again insisted that the only way for the United States to end the war was to sign the agreement concluded informally by Kissinger and Tho on Oct. 20.

In Washington, officials reported that the North Vietnamese were taking a tough line in the secret talks and said earlier hopes for a quick wrapup of remaining details have dimmed.

On the war front, nearly 100 tanks and several thousand fresh North Vietnamese troops have crossed the mountain passes that feed the Ho Chi Minh Trail, and U.S. B-52s and fighter-bombers are harassing them as they make their way south, U.S. sources reported today.

Phone Giant Told to Sell B.C. Company

A United States federal judge in San Francisco has ordered the American parent of B.C. Telephone to divest itself of nine companies, including two in Canada.

General Telephone and Electronics Co. of New York has been ordered to sell Lenkurt Electric (Canada) Ltd. which employs 1,000 people in making communications equipment in Burnaby and Automatic Electric Canada Ltd., an equipment firm in Brockville, Ontario.

General Telephone and Electronics controls Anglo-Canadian Telephone Company of Montreal which owns B.C. Tel.

Anglo-Canadian was not affected because it is a holding company, not an operating company. Anglo-Canadian employs no people but instead is used as an administration arm for General Telephone and Electronics Company's Canadian holdings.

In all, General Telephone was ordered to sell three of its phone equipment manufacturing firms: Lenkurt, Automatic Electric and Leich Electronic Company.

As well, it was told to divest itself of six operating telephone companies: Hawaiian Tel. Co.; Northern Ohio Tel. Co., Central Iowa Tel Co., The Western Uility Group, Theadore Gary and Co. and Peninsular Tel Co. Ltd.

Carman Hughes, president of Automatic Electric, said because of appeals it might take years before the federal U.S. court order would come into effect.

In Vancouver, a B.C. Tel spokesman said there would be no immediate effect upon the company here.

B.C. Tel had been purchasing equipment from the two Canadian subsidiaries of their common parent General Telephone but equipment has also been purchased from Northern Electric, a subsidiary of the rival Bell Telephone Company, he said.

The spokesman said that while much of B.C. Tel's equipment was purchased through subsidiaries of General Telephone it was by no means a closed operation.

L.A. Speeders 'Gunned Down'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The motorcycle policeman raised what looked like a gun and pulled the trigger as the motorist sped by on the curve.

The driver saw the officer and hastily slowed down, but it was too late. He was 15 miles over the limit — and it was recorded on the scope of the hand-held Digital Doppler, a new tool police are using to catch speeders.

The police purchased eight of the devices, also known as speed guns, for about $700 each. They have been used for three months.

The detectors transmit a radio beam. It strikes a moving vehicle, bounces back to the gun and goes into a portable computer connected to the gun. The vehicle's speed is registered in figures on the scope at the back of the gun.

WEATHERMAN SEES SNOW ENDING

Today's snowfall should be the last Greater Victoria will get for a while at least, says the Victoria weather office.

Two to three inches are expected to fall today before the snow tapers off in mid-afternoon or early this evening. Partial clearing tonight will give some sunny periods Thursday, but skies will cloud over again Thursday evening.

Milder temperatures are expected, with highs today and tomorrow reaching 35 degrees, but daytime temperatures will still hang generally below the freezing point. Lows tonight will be in the low 20s.

Smallpox Drug Effective

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Free Press says in a copyright story a group of Winnipeg physicians have achieved a high rate of success with a new method of treating smallpox patients.

The newspaper quotes Dr. John Foerster, one of the senior investigators of the group associated with the Manitoba Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation, as saying the treatment was tried during a recent outbreak of smallpox in Bangladesh.

It says a scientific paper on the method is to be published this week in the British medical journal, the Lancet.

The story says that while the average smallpox death rate is one of three patients, eight of nine receiving the new treatment recovered quickly.

The treatment involved massive infusions of solutions containing cytosine arabinoside, a cancer drug developed in the United States.

B.C. BOOSTS AID TO DAY CARE CENTRES

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi today announced an expansion of provincial aid to day care centres which he estimated will result in 20 new facilities for 450 children in the next year.

Costs of the program will jump from $2.3 million this fiscal year to about $4 million in 1973-74, Levi said.

Included in the new program are grants to organizations which cannot afford to build centres under the present 50-50 sharing formula.

Also, financial assistance to parents will be based on a simple declaration of income, but the rates are not to be published until final overall sharing costs with Ottawa are worked out.

The day care centre aid is shared 50-50 with Ottawa under the Canada Assistance Plan.

For centres catering to children of three years and under, a new rate of $3.50 per day per child has been approved, replacing the old rate of $2.75.

Orange Moon Soil Excites Science

HOUSTON (UPI) — The men of the last Apollo mission gave scientists today one of the most important discoveries on the moon — a deep, orange-stained crater that probably was blown out by the dying gasp of lunar volcanism.

Pushing their oxygen back packs and moon buggy to the limits, the Apollo 17 explorers also drove to a mountain landslide and collected prize specimens that may range to the opposite end of the lunar life span.

Eugene Cernan and Harrison Schmitt may now have stored in the cabin of the spacecraft Challenger the youngest and oldest rocks ever seen on the moon. It will take months of laboratory analysis back on earth, however, to confirm this.

This would finally lay to rest the theory that the moon has been stone dead for the last three billion years.

And it also revives controversy over whether the moon had water at some stage of its history.

The explorers drove a record 12 miles during their second excusion. They returned to moonship Challenger at 2:06 a.m. EST today after spending a record 7 hours and 37 minutes outside.

The third crew member, Ronald Evans, was adding to the scientific windfall by observing the moon from the orbiting command ship America. He sighted what apparently were three extinct volcanos elsewhere on the lunar surface Tuesday.

Cernan and Schmitt make one more seven-hour excursion from Challenger tonight, planting man's footprints in the lunar dust for perhaps the last time this century.

They will leave the moon Thursday.

PILOTS DOZE OFF

LONDON (AP) — Thirty thousand feet over the Pacific the pilot of an airliner carrying 125 passengers to Honolulu found himself dozing off at the controls.

He shook himself, glanced around, and saw his two co-pilots and flight engineer—his entire flight deck crew—were all fast asleep.

In another jetliner, on another route, the pilot was making his final landing approach with a full load of passengers. As the plane swooped to touchdown he discovered both his co-pilots were sleeping. They had to be forcibly awakened to help bring the plane down.

The two incidents were among "hundreds" described to the British Airline Pilots' Association (BALPA) in response to a request to its 5,000 members to tell of their experiences of fatigue affecting flying safety.

Gordon Hurley, spokesman for the pilots' union, said some "shocking" replies had come in since the questionnaire was circulated a week ago.

ANARCHISTS RIOT IN ROME STREETS

ROME (AP) — Thousands of leftist and anarchist youths turned Rome's historic piazzas, gaily decorated for Christmas, into battlegrounds Tuesday night over a bombing trial delayed for three years.

Rome took the brunt of violence as young extremists took to the streets in several Italian cities demanding the release of 12 anarchists and leftists rounded up after the Milan bank bombing Dec. 12, 1969.

Defensive Flying Course Urged in North

Times News Services

The 32-day Arctic search for Martin Hartwell's crashed plane, which cost the federal government several million dollars, may also bring about a complete re-examination of Canadian flying regulations for the north.

Defence Minister James Richardson said Tuesday the armed forces search and rescue methods are not so much in need of review as are the reasons planes get lost.

Richardson said there are always lessons to be learned, "but the area where perhaps there's some need for re-examination or further study is in the regulations about who flies."

Hartwell's twin-engined Beechcraft 18 crashed on a medical mercy flight Nov. 8 with three other persons aboard and Hartwell — who had been involved in a previous flying accident — was the only one alive when searchers found him Saturday.

Many of the details of the crash will not be revealed until the department of transport has held an investigation, but it has been learned that Hartwell was not qualified to navigate on instruments alone. He told rescuers he had been flying under heavy overcast at the time of the crash.

Hartwell had crashed once before, when coming in for a landing at Flin Flon, Man., in 1969. His employer at that time said the crash, in which no one was injured, was just a matter of misjudgement.

Richardson said the defence department is developing the concept of defensive flying — similar to defensive driving schools under which people are trained to avoid accidents.

But a former pilot who flew for Gateway Aviation Ltd. of Edmonton, the line which employed Hartwell, said stricter licensing procedures are needed for northern flying where harsh conditions magnify the smallest error.

Dominique Prinet, now an economist with a northern consulting firm, said pilots flying in the Northwest Territories should be required to have instrument rating and the aircraft they fly should be equipped with more accurate compasses.

He said men like Hartwell are caught in a trap. It costs about $2,000 to receive instrument ratings and many pilots cannot afford the price.

"The blame in accidents like this alway lies with the pilot. The company on the other hand, has no problems. It can hire another guy and start the same procedures over again tomorrow. Mr. Hartwell was caught in a trap."

Prinet said few northern
